NOTICE.

MESSRS. WM. H. ALLEN and Co. have the honour to inform their numerous friends, and the public in general, that they have REMOVED their seat of business from 7, LEADENHALL-STREET, to 13, WATERLOO-PLACE, S.W. It is, therefore, requested that all letters and communications for the "Indian Mail" may be forwarded to their new address.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay merchants, native and European, have put to the blush the wealthiest capitalists of this country. We learn by the mail from that Presidency of the 12th of June, that on the 30th of May the Chamber of Commerce issued a circular inviting th members of the local commercial community the height of the rainy season." to subscribe liberally for the relief of the distressed operatives in Lancashire. That appeal has been so nobly responded to that a first remittance of £5,000 has been despatched to the Lord Mayor by the present mail. Three European firms are each down for £250; the Rajah of Bhownugger contributes £125; and several donations of £100 each are made in the names of British and Parsee merchants. The generous example set by Bombay will undoubtedly be followed by Calcutta and Madras. and a kindly return may be expected for the sympathy evinced by England for the recently suffering population of India.

Disquieting rumours are afloat of the circulation of chupatties in the Upper Provinces but they appear to be greatly exaggeratedif, indeed, they have any foundation whatever in truth. Such a deeply-rooted feeling of distrust has been created by the Sepoy mutiny that for a long time to come we may expect to hear that there is a lion in the path. The most trifling incidents are and will be magnified into warnings and portents, and timorous and irresponsible individuals will be continually calling upon Government to fight with shadows, and to lay ghosts already thrice

The latest news, or rather the latest tale, from Affghanistan is to the effect that Dost Mahomed had arrived by easy stages to within one day's march from Candahar, but that anything will come of this semblance of activity we do not for a moment anticipate. Ahmed Jan will retain Furrah, and the Ameer in due time will return to Cabul, none the worse for a little gentle exercise, or the loss of a few thousand of his turbulent and disaffected subiects.

The monsoon was ushered in by a smart thunderstorm and a heavy fall of rain early in the morning of the 10th of June. "Last year," says the Times of India, "the monsoon set in on the 2nd of June with a gale of wind, but without any thunder and lightning. It is usual for it to set in here with an elephanta or heavy thunderstorm from the north-east. These storms generally occur in the evening, and are repeated for several successive evenings until the wind settles in the south-west, which is the true monsoon quarter, when the rain commences to fall continuously for days together, coming up in heavy squalls, and enveloping the coast in a dense mist which frequently renders the port difficult of entry in Considerable excitement pervades civil as well as military circles concerning a courtmartial sitting at Mhow on Captain Smales, of H.M.'s 6th Inniskilling Dragoons. Colonel Crawley is charged with arbitrary and tyrannical conduct towards three of the defendant's witnesses, whom he placed under arrest without sufficient cause. One of these, Sergeant-major Lilley, who had been recommended for the adjutancy of the corps, is said to have died of a broken heart, caused partly by his unmerited disgrace, and partly by the shameless treatment of his dying wife. It is further stated that Sergeant-major Wakefield, another witness, was so affected by the death of his comrade that he became delirious, and was conveyed to the hospital. The third witness. Troop Sergeant-major Duval, was also placed in solitary confinement, and treated as a suspected criminal, or rather as one already con-

The sale of the Kirwee prize property commenced on the 2nd of June. "A personal inspection," we are told, "is necessary to form any idea of the value of the collection, which is said to surpass in extent and costlines most celebrated collections ever drought to public sale in India." It is estimated that very nearly a million sterling will be realised -not unpleasant tidings for General Whit lock's gallant comrades.

Our readers may, perhaps, be interested to know that a new edition of Messrs. Allens' "Indian Army and Civil Service List," corrected to the latest dates, is now obtainable at every respectable bookseller's.

Last night Mr. White moved a resolution in the House of Commons that her Majesty's Ministers should direct the British authorities and commanders in China to avoid intervention beyond what might be absolutely necessary. This motion was seconded by Sir L. Palk, and supported by Colonel Sykes, Mr. Cobden, Mr. Whiteside, and Lord John Manners, but stoutly combated by Mr. Gregson, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Layard, and Lord Palmerston, and finally negatived by a majority of 197 to 88.

BENGAL.

THE MILITARY FUND. It was not long since a habit with many to speak sneeringly and even with contempt of "the paternal government" of our late honourable masters. We venture to say that such feelings are fast giving place to sorrowful regret as the various privileges one by one are being withdrawn, which a former Government generously bestowed on their servants as a compensation for their great risks and many sacrifices. Never were servants more liberally and considerately treated, and never, consequently, was sovereign better served. In pay, allowances, pensions and privileges, the military service of the late East India Company was with good reason the envy of the world. But these blessings were so continuous and unbroken and so equally and impartially distributed that they were scarcely perceived, and were not appreciated till they were endangered or withdrawn. Perhaps not one of the many changes recently introduced is so fraught with sinister in fluences to the service and to Indian society as the closing of the Military Fund. It was no doubt supported in a great measure by the subscriptions of the service itself; but with such liberal pay and allowances such a tax was lightly felt and easily borne, and, moreover, it was not only fostered and encouraged, but liberally supplemented by Government. Men whose lives were precious to more than themselves felt that half the risk was removed, that their hearts were not paralysed, that their hands were not unnerved in the battle field or amid the more inglorious, but equally deadly, dangers of the camp or the jungle; they felt that maimed in battle or stricken down by disease they and theirs were provided for in an honour-able retirement, and that in the worst contingency the widow and the fatherless would not only be above want, but provided with a comfortable competence. All this is now changed Officers are requested in officical phrase henceforth to "make their own arrangements." The effect of this change on Indian society will undoubtedly be great, and, if we mistake not, will in a very few years become painfully evident. "The Fund" was deservedly held in the highest respect by prudent mothers, and in matrimonial arrangements its prospective blessings tended wonderfully to smooth the course of true love and simplify the settlements. Henceforth young "soldiers of fortune" without the Fund will often find maidens coy and mothers cold when bracing themselves up to a matrimonial ven ture. Mofussil stations will, in a few years be stripped of their fairest ornaments, and deprived of those refining and elevating influences which have led to such a favourable contrast between the morals and manners of Indian society in the present and the past century. Some there will be, no doubt, who, deaf to the dictates of caution and prudence, and successfully overcoming the scruples of lovely maidens and reluctant mothers, will plunge into the perils of improvident matrimony, and then we shall witness scenes of distress unknown for many years in the Indian service, but which are too frequently found elsewhere, and which are a disgrace to a great nation,-families untimely deprived of their supporters and protectors, and cast dependent and unprovided on the world. In a recent issue of the London Times the Vicar of Leighton Buzzard solicited the charitable contributions of the public on behalf of the family of a gallant and most meritorious officer who served with distinction through the whole of the Chinese war, for which he received a medal, and who was lost at sea. The widow died and her scanty pension of course perished with her; one daughter earned a miserable pittance with her needle to eke out a small allowance of £14 a year, which she receives from the compassionate list. She is now threatened with the loss of her sight, and is dependent on her sister, who has no resources but the produce of her needle. Such melancholy pictures may be young gentlemen with matritaonial aspirations prudently " make their own arrangements

The most obvious substitute for the Military Fund and the best remedy for its loss are life assurance and deferred annuities. In one form and for one object the former of these is perhaps not unknown to many in the service, even its younger members, to whom our remarks are specially addressed. Those who have entered the army since the Fund was closed may already be reckoned by hundreds. Their income perishes with them, and if marrying, as many will do, and making no provision such as we have indicated. the result may be that the fortunes of war or fatality of climate may make many a wife widow, and her children fatherless and dependent on the kindness of friends or the colder charity of the world. It would surely be nothing more than ordinary prudence to make out of that terminable and precarious income a permanent provision for those whose future comfort may be dependent on him. It would be well if any one entering the service would make up his mind to set apart monthly the same sums for insurance that he would have been compelled to pay year after year to the Military Fund. He would thus in the event of marriage be able to make such a settlement upon his wife as would make his death less bitter to himself, and less mournful to those he left behind him. Unfortunately such a course is not compulsory, and there are many, consequently, who will put off till "to-morrow," and some others who will consider that they can do better by becoming as it were their own assurers by saving the premiums. So time passes on, nothing is done, and the opportunity is lost for ever. Let any one consider the state of matters on board one of the magnificent P. and O. steamers. The ship is insured, so are the freight and stores and cargo, every box of bullion has a special insurance, everything, in fact, on board is insured except the passengers, whose lives are liable to more risks, and are a thousand times more valuable. True, with the Military Fund every officer, dead or alive, had up to this time his fixed and recognised value, and all parties interested might make up their minds to be satisfied with any contingency that might occur. Will altered circumstances in this respect induce a different course of action? The man who thinks he can do better by laying up his savings and thus becoming his own insurer should never lose sight of the great risks of his profession and of climate. His savings may at any moment melt away before sickness and enforced absence, or may be stopped for ever by death. With insurance it is eminently the reverse-one single payment made and the very morrow is beyond risk. He may die before he has an opportunity of paying a second premium, but he has made a provision for those who depend on his life equally sure as if he had lived to pay fifty. Those who think in the earlier days of their service, when their income is comparatively slender, their health vigorous, and their energies unimpaired, that they may safely wait for a few years until they find it more convenient, as well as more necessary, should remember that there are more risks against them than those of death. They are peculiarly liable in this country to various diseases which, though they may spare life, yet render life for ever uninsurable, or only insurable at double or treble the premium which, a few days before, would have been readily accepted. Those, then, who have formed or contemplated forming ties which render others solely dependent upon their life income, must feel, if they consider these claims and their own duty in a proper light, that they are little short of criminal in neglecting the one and setting aside the other. Such appeals to the charity of strangers as we have instanced above were far from unfrequent in this country in former years, before this Military Fund was established, and at a time when life assurance was scarcely known, and their recurrence, we fear, is not a far distant probability. All this may be avoided by assuming, as a voluntary obligation, what has hitherto been compulsory. Payments even approximating those exacted by the Fund not unfrequently reproduced in India unless in subscription, donations on entrance, promotions, marriages and births, would be amply sufficient to secure a competence for widow and family. There are many excellent and perfectly safe assurance societies with agencies in this country who make it their study, by every variety of arrangement, to meet the wants and peculiarities of such constituents. Some officers may consider it desirable also to make provision for eking out the slender income upon which they may hereafter be able to retire. There are institutions, as, for example, the Family Endowment Society, who lay themselves out for this peculiar branch of their business by granting present annuities for a sum down, or deferred annuities, commencing any given number of years hereafter for a much smaller present payment, or for a monthly subscription varying with age and the number of years over which it is to extend. It may be objected that such an arrangement involves the risk of losing all those payments by death. This risk is not greater than that which has been hitherto freely accepted for the same object in payments to the fund and in the purchase of steps. No prudent man who honestly and fairly looks at his responsibilities to his family and to society will shrink in the days of his health, strength and comparative wealth, from making proper provision against a time when all these must fail, and when, if he has, through carelessness or self-indulgence, neglected to perform that duty, he can leave his family only a legacy of dependence and poverty.-Madras

"SPOLIA OPIMA."

On Monday next, June 2nd, a sight will be witnessed in Calcutta, without a parallel in the history of India, and most suggestive to him who would understand the career of the British in the East. The Kirwee spoil will be sold by auction. Of its former owners, the two foolish youths Narain Rao and Madho Rao who fled from Kirwee, when Sir George Whitlock was as yet within two marches of their palace, one has since died as a State prisoner in Hazareebaugh, and the other, a cousin of Nana Sahib, is now being educated in Bareilly. Too young to be responsible for the disloyalty of 1857, he is receiving from the British Government the best inheritance good education, and on arriving at years of discretion will doubtless be honourably treated as a pensioned feudatory. Meanwhile the wealth heaped up in the palace at Kirwee, such that one officer describes himself as literally wading among jewels and bricks of gold, will be brought to the auctioneer's hammer. The gold and silver coins, with the exception of such as are of value to the numis matist, and the bricks of solid metal, have been melted down into ingots. The whole booty is expected to realise for the army who lighted upon it a sum of not less than half a million sterling. But besides this, cash to the amount of fifty-two lakhs of rupees was captured in the palace and in the district, and at once made over to the Government, which in those days of financial deficits found it a seasonable aid. The prize agent holds a receipt for this sum with interest at five per cent., so that, if it is considered prize, the whole of the spoil of Kirwee and Banda will be considerably above a million sterling. Not only so, but the State has confiscated the sum of £325,000 which the brothers had in the funds, as well as their estates, which yielded a rental of £80,000 a year.

As we read the catalogue of the spoil to be sold on Monday and succeeding days, and gaze upon the wealth of gold and jewels displayed by Messrs. Hamilton and Co., we can realise the not too extravagant words of the poet when he wrote of "The wealth of Ormus and of Ind, Or where the gorgeous east with richest hand Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold." To use the language of the catalogue writer, not too inflated in this case—"the superb display of precious stones, gold and silver ingots, gold coins, gold and silver idols, &c., &c., rivals in extent and surpasses in value the most celebrated collections that have ever been brought to is certainly "the super's diamond and emerald enemies.

necklace" consisting of ninety-two rose cut brilliants set in emeralds of the richest green without a flaw, each stone of itself a study. Then there is the "magnificent necklace and diamond dhook-dhookie" of the highest and costliest order of jewels, comprising twenty four large clear emeralds, eighteen beautiful pearls of uncommon size, four rubies of the deepest colour, twenty-five white table diamonds in the pendent, and three tassels of small emeralds and pearls." If the reader thinks the cataloguist has exhausted himself in this flight of fancy, what will he say of "the beautiful jeejah serpeche" of thirtysix immense diamonds? This enormously precious ornament is remarkable for the lavish manner in which the most superb diamonds have been collected in such numbers and at such immense cost for the production of a single article of personal adornment. In Europe this bijou would have afforded material for a dozen ornaments, and each would have been a gem of a rare value. Yet we read on till we become bewildered by "serpeches" or frontlets, "dustbunds" or bracelets, "kornapholes" or earrings, "sirphools" or hair ornaments, "bajoobunds" or armlets, "champakullies" or necklaces, "dabunees" or hair ornaments, "satnaries" or breast ornaments, and other jewels with names still more rich and barbaric in their sound, which have decked the dusky forms of Mahratta girls and matrons, and have adorned the proud trappings of Mahratta chiefs and their followers. In solid gold or silver we see the most ordinary utensils of the household and the family temple, for no meaner metal would the Raos of Kirwee use. Rice plates, lotahs, candle-sticks, mirrors, spice-boxes, rose-water sprinklers, spittoons, truncheons, punkah-handles, caskets, pawn boxes, lamps, incense and sacrificial vessels, idols, models of temples, the trappings of elephants and horses, the livery of menials—all seem poured out together as they appear in Reubens' paintings of conquerors on the battle-field receiving the spoils of the vanquished. But the most interesting, if the least valuable part of the collection, is the long list of coins, with names familiar to Clive and his predecessors, but never met with now in our everyday prosaic life in the East. There are "pagodas " and " boodkies " and " hoons," with gold mohurs coined by Ackbar, Jehangheer, Shah Jehan and Aurengzebe; of Lucknow, Assam, Madras, Nepaul, beside which are a few despised English sovereigns. The coins, however, which most frequently occur are Venetian, pointing to days when southern Europe fattened on the wealth of India, ere yet the Portuguese doubled the Cape. To this day the profusion and variety of European coins in the bazaars of Upper India astonish the traveller. Seldom is the English or Australian sovereign met, while there are no coins so common as Russian five rouble pieces. pointing to trade with Central Asia. Nor are Belgian coins and French Napoleons uncommon. As we look at these jewels and read the long catalogue of gold and silver ingots, and household furniture, all belonging to a comparatively modern and petty family, we cease to wonder that India drains Europe of her precious metals, and that a people who thus hoard up their capital unfruitfully, while their rulers squeeze from them their wealth only to be thus barbarously employed, make no progress. The spoil taken in 1857-58 by British armies.

exclusive of the Kirwee prize, is estimated at 57 lakhs of rupees. The widest estimate of the value of booty taken during the mutiny campaigns would not exceed two millions sterling. We are not extravagant when we say that much more than this has been restored to India by the British Government in the shape of kingly rewards for loyalty. What a contrast this offers to the conduct of our predecessors in the sovereignty of Hindoostan! a contrast, too, all the greater when we remember that our career has been indeed one of peace compared with their invasions, and that our task was that of putting down the rebellion of our subjects, not public sale in India." The gem of the collection of meeting the justifiable opposition of lawful Taking the three most terrible in cotton to the English market.

vaders of India-Sultan Mahmood, Timur, and Nadir Shah-what do we find? After the twelve expeditions of Sultan Mahmood into India in each of which he carried off enormous booty, when he spoiled Somnath, the historian tells us that even Asiatic annalists are tired of enumerating the mass of gold and jewels. He stripped the cities of India to make a paradise of Ghuzni, and there, when dying, he ordered his most costly treasure to be brought before him, and wept as he thought he was so soon to them all. Sadi tells the story of the Sultan's re-appearance after death to a certain dreamer, with his body reduced to a skeleton, but his eyes, those organs of covetousness, still glaring from their sockets. It was he who when he heard of the wealth of a former dynasty which had accumulated jewels enough to fill seven measures, said, "Praise be to God, who has given me a hundred measures." Well may Elphinstone term him the richest king that ever lived, and his riches were chiefly from India. What Mahmood did for Ghuzni, Timur four centuries after made Samarcand. His booty is described as "spoils above measure." defiles of elephants and camels carried off the wealth of Delhi through the Hindoo Koosh, and not a worker in stone, wood, brass, or marble was left, all being taken to erect the great mosque whose gigantic ruins even yet tell us what it must have been when in its But still greater than Timur's was the spoil taken by Nadir Shah, not much more than a century ago, from the same doomed city. His boast was that he had exhausted every source of wealth in Hindoostan. The lowest estimate of the mere money he took is nine millions sterling, and some English writers reckon it as high as thirty. The peacock throne alone is valued at two millions sterling.

Against all this England has nothing of barbaric wealth to show but the solitary Koh-i-noor. Her wealth she finds in the developed resources of richest provinces and an annually increasing commerce—her spoil, in the civilisation of millions, and in the creation of Christian nations.-Friend of India.

MISCELLANE OUS.

MUTINOUS ARTILLERYMEN. - The Mofussilite says the reason of the order suddenly recalling artillery officers on leave to Meerut was the manifestation of a mutinous spirit by two men, who revived the question of their right to discharge, notwithstanding re-enlistment, on the absurd ground that the magistrate forgot to administer to them the oath of allegiance. One of the men has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment in Agra Fort, and the case of the other is still before the Commander-in-Chief. officers were recalled as a measure of precaution.

MR. HENRY SUMNER MAINE.-India has reason for congratulation in the fact, announced by the telegraph, of the willingness of Mr. H. S. Maine, LL.D., to succeed the late Mr. Ritchie as law member of the Viceroy's Council. The office was offered to him before Mr. Ritchie's appointment, and then declined. Mr. Maine's great work on "Ancient Law," published last year, at once showed him to be among the first of modern jurists, at least in England. He surrenders the comparatively obscure but useful position of Reader in Jurisprudence and the Civil Law to the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, for an appointment in which he will be able not only to test his own theories, so far as they refer to the origin and historical development of law, but-what is of far more importance-to quicken that development in India so as to make law at once the promoter and the exponent of a higher national life.-Friend of India.

MR. PATERSON SAUNDERS. - The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce have conveyed to Mr. Paterson Saunders, Senior, their very cordial acknowledgments of his efforts, as travelling Commissioner in the N. W. Provinces and Oudh, to further the great object of an enlarged export of THE INDUS FLOTILLA.—The supplement of the Punjab Government Gazette contains a statement showing that during the first quarter of this year the steamers and flats of the Indus Flotilla conveyed 7,73I maunds of dead-weight goods, and 4,644 feet of measurement goods, realising a total freight of about Rs. 4,350. During the same period the passenger traffic amounted to one cabin passenger, 5 saloon ditto, 11 first class deck, and 29 second class deck, representing a revenue from this source of Rs. 1,170-6-8. The prosperity of the Indus traffic cannot be much longer post-poned, with Central Asia opening up, settlers colonising the Hill districts, and railways extending.

ARCHEOLOGICAL RESEARCHES.—Colonel Cunningham, who is making archæological researches on account of Government, has visited Gaya, Bodh Gaya, Kurkihar, Giryek, Rajgir, Bargaon (or Kundulpur), Bihat, Ghosrawa, Titrawa, Punawa, the Barabat and Nagarjuni caves, and Dharawat, all in South Behar. To the north of the Ganges he has visited Besarh, the ancient Vaisali Bukhra, Kesariya Lariya, Navandgarh, Parharasna, Kasiya, Khukhundh, Kohaon, Hathiyada, Bhatari, and Sarnath Benares. At Gya was one inscription dated in the era of Buddha's nirwan. At Rajgir he opened the central tope without any result, except the discovery of a narrow passage, showing that the monks had easy access to the relics, and must have removed them when they were ejected from India. cave called Son Bhandar, in the Baibhan hill, is beyond all doubt the celebrated cave in front of which was held the first Buddhist Synod. In two inscriptions it is called Subha Gulia, the auspicious cave. At Sarnath Benares he completed a survey of the ruins, and copied all the letters roughly cut on the stones of the great tope as mason's marks. These point to the age of the Guptas as the period when the tope was begun. During the next season he proposes to visit Kansambi, Sultanpur, Fyzabad, Sahetmahet, Konoj, Pamkissa, Mathura, Bhabha, Delhi, and Kharasi Kangra. Colonel Cunningham has an obolus of Alexander the Great, weighing elevenand-a-half grains. He describes it as "a perfect beauty, and the only coin of this size of the great conqueror of which I can find any account.'

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS .- Lieut .- colonel D. M. Stewart, second Assistant Adjutant-general of the Army, just arrived in the Bengal, will succeed Lieut.-colonel Norman as Deputy Adjutantgeneral of the Army. Major S. Becher, first Assistant Adjutant general of the Army, leaves that office, having received a better appointment in the Finance Department. We believe that Lieut. col. Stewart assumes charge of the Presidency Office; the present officiating incumbent, Major T. Wright, returning to his appointment in the Peshawur division. These arrangements render vacant the two appointments of first and second Assistant Adjutants-general of the Army, and we suppose that the senior officers in the de partment will succeed; or perhaps a little Royal blood may be infused "to give it a tone," as the saying is. Captain J. N. Young, at present Deputy Judge Advocate of the Lahore division, succeeds Major Hatch as Deputy Judge Advocategeneral of the Army. The appointment is a good one, as Captain Young is an able and experienced officer in the department.

CHINESE TARTARY .- The Simla correspondent of the Englishman confirms the fact that neither the Calcutta nor the Pekin authorities have made the last treaty with China, which permits Englishmen to travel all over the Empire, known to the Tartars of Lassa. They still refuse to allow any European to pass beyond the boundary, save for a few miles when a plea of shooting is urged. Last year an officer of the 7th Hussars, who had set his heart upon a trip towards Gortope, was compelled to retrace his steps. In 1860 Fathers Desgoudin and Bernard, Jesuit missionaries, who had been studying Thibetan for nearly three years at Soongnum, near the frontier, received instructions to proceed to China. It was their wish to travel through Chinese Tartary, but they were foiled, and had to proceed to Calcutta and take ship for Hong Kong.

DARJEELING, May 23.—All is at peace up here. Sikkim is as the valley of the shadow of death, so painfully quiet and uninteresting has it become, and even the Bhotanese have ceased from troubling. Can you conceive anything so tame and common-place as the conduct of that Sikkim Rajah? He has actually sent Rs. 3,000, the balance due by him to the Treasury here, in full of the indemnity leviable from him under the treaty of the 28th March. It is whispered that so great is the dread in which he holds the late Superintendent, and so sure did he feel in the doctor's power of fixing him with the payment of the amount claimed by him for loss of property and baggage sustained on the commencement of hostilities, that the Rajah felt that the only chance for him was to wash away at once, and before any other claim could be tacked on to it, the balance of indemnity due by him to the Government. Hence the very unusual proceeding of a native paying money otherwise than under immediate and substantial pressure. Though the Bhotanese are quiet, and the forces collected at Dalimkote have been dismissed with the same injunction given by Bombastes Furioso to his gallant band, "and don't kick up a row," there are very evident signs that though they fear us they are very far from loving us. The men who came here with the tribute of the Sikkim Rajah told me that Dewan Nowgong had forced his way into Bhootan, where he had been well received by both the Soobah of Dalimkote and the Deb Rajah, and had had conferred upon him the appointment of conservator of forests.

GWALIOR, May 20 .- I informed you (English man) not long since of fresh disturbances which were about to take place, but which were fortunately frustrated, arising out of the endeavour of some of the powerful Thakoors in the Gwalior State to place Unjoor Singh, the illegitimate son of the late Rajah, on the Dutteah guddee. Owing to the prompt measures taken by the authorities at Jhansi the attempt to influence the warlike por-tion of the people on the Jhansi district into supporting the worthless claims of Unjoor Singh proved abortive; but as this was the second attempt, and as the ramifications of the plot had been very greatly extended, the authorities deemed it advisable to secure some of the most prominent actors on the scene. You will scarcely have forgotten that the discovery of the designs of the chief projectors of the late movement was owing to the uncontrollable passions of some of the lawless hordes, dacoits, and mountaineers who live by plundering the dwellers in the plains, whom they had enlisted in their service. These men, at all times impatient of control, and unwilling to take part in any proceeding that has not the immediate acquisition of plunder as its primary object, were long in giving in their adhesion to the designs of the Thakoors, and it required not only great persuasion, but careful delineation of the rich harvest of plunder to be acquired to induce these professional marauders to agree to lend their aid in promoting the desired object. The fancies of these men once inflamed by the visions of ill but easily acquired wealth conjured up by their tempters were impatient of delay, and at length, defying all attempts to control them, they left their strongholds and descended into the plain to lay it desolate before those whom they were to have aided were prepared; the consequence was their discomfiture, the capture of some, and the entire failure of their designs. The capture of these men has led to results littled hoped for; exasperated at what they considered the treachery of their seducers, although their defeat and almost total annihilation was the result of their over-impatience to handle the loot they had been led to anticipate the acquisition of, they readily revealed the names of those by whom they and their comrades had been, as they chose to conclude, betrayed. The consequence is that Captain Thompson, the Government agent at Dutteah, has found himself with so large a body of prisoners that his position has become a somewhat anxious one, his own guard being quite inadequate to perform all the duties required of has been made for the reinforcement of his party. This has been conceded, and the detachment at Dutteah strengthened sufficiently to enable Captain Thompson to take efficient measures for the security of the prisoners in his hands. To turn from themes warlike, savouring of carnage, wrong, and ultimate ignominious death, to the pleasanter fields of peaceful pursuits, I may mention that some of the chiefs in the Gwalior State of more quiet dispositions and habits than the Thakoors, the types of the Barons of ancient days of the Merrie England of the past, have abolished the practice in their zemindaries of levying a tax upon the cotton grown within their several estates. Among others who have taken this liberal view of what has hitherto been considered a legitimate source of revenue, may be enumerated the Rajah of Bironda, the Chief of Bowance, and the Jagheedars of Paharee Katthi and Gowhar. The stimulus given to cotton cultivation on these estates by this liberal concession on the part of their rulers is most gratifying, and must be peculiarly so to these liberal minded men.

PORT BLAIR, May 6 .- Shortly before the departure of our late superintendent he made a trip from Port Blair in the Lady Canning, a steamer, with the Perseverance in tow, through the middle channel. The object in view was twofold. In the first instance to test the value of the information which has so frequently been brought here of the existence in the Strait of large quantities of the edible birds' nests so prized by the Chinese, and for that matter by Europeans also. The channel through which the expedition passed was found to have on either side of it, covering the shore to the water's edge, large quantities of canebrake of that description on which the birds constructing the edible nests so delight to build, but neither birds nor nests were discovered. It is most probable that the season in which the search was made was not that in which these birds breed. The second object of the expedition was to ascertain the depth of water on the bar at the eastern entrance to the Strait. The minimum depth at low water was found, on this occasion, not to exceed thirteen feet, though there was reason to believe that, could a more careful survey of the entire bar have been made, a passage might have been traced having deeper water in it. Lieutenant Dickson, who was employed last year in taking soundings round this group of islands and through the several channels which divide them, found that on one edge of the bar there was a depth of fifteen feet, at low water of spring tides. This depth corresponds with that reported by Lieutenant Colebrook as existing on this bar in the year 1790. At Port Blair there is a rise and fall on the springs of ten feet; if the same is the case in the Middle Strait, ships of nineteen and twenty feet draught may pass over the bar without danger, at high water. It has been proposed by the superintendent of Port Blair to make the traffic in edible birds' nests a Government monopoly, and that the revenue derived from that source form an item in the annual Budget. This proposal somehow has met with the approval of Government, and instructions have been issued accordingly; but how a monopoly can be enforced I do not well see, as the islanders can at any time provide parties with the required nests. When the Bishop of Calcutta paid his pastoral visitation to these islands he availed himself of the opportunity of consecrating a spot of land on Ross Island for the purposes of a cemetery. Something of the kind was needed here, for though the Europeans here are usually exceedingly healthy, when death does come it is as well to be prepared with censecrated ground in which to lay the bodies of our departed countrymen. Englishman.

their comrades had been, as they chose to conclude, betrayed. The consequence is that Captain Thompson, the Government agent at Dutteah, has found himself with so large a body of prisoners that his position has become a somewhat anxious one, his own guard being quite inadequate to perform all the duties required of them. Under these circumstances application cities within its jurisdiction where their services may be needed. Benares, Agra, Delhi, and Lahore contain both Government and missionary institutions. In each of these cities there are from seven hundred to sixteen hundred students who are receiving a superior English education, and a daily increasing proportion of them has matriculated at the University, and are anxious to read for a degree in law or medicine. University professors alone will meet this want, which will be more and more felt every year. The medical colleges of Lahore and Agra already afford materials for medical professors. THE CONVERSAZIONE AT BELVIDERE. - The halls of Belvidere were thrown open on Monday night, May 26, for the first time in the incum bency of the present Lieut.-governor of Bengal, to a gay and gallant assemblage, such as is rarely collected together in this good city. The party was honoured by the presence of the Governorgeneral, and consisted of the leading members of European and native society, with a large infusion of the youth and beauty of Calcutta. character of the entertainments was a combination of an "at home" and a scientific conversazione, in which there was much to interest and amuse, no lack of material for instruction, and an harmonious blending of the governors and the governed in a manner well calculated to bring them into friendly social contact. We can imagine nothing more conducive to a reproduction of the kindly sentiments that once existed between the European and native community, and which all who have the interests of this bright jewel of the British Crown sincerely at heart, earnestly desire to see re-established. It is, after all, but the renewal of the sound policy of the Munros, the Elphinstones, and the Metcalfes, and will produce the same good fruit at this turning point in our history As the lecture of Mr. Laing had a political significance which added much to its literary and scientific interest, so the cultivation on the part of our rulers of kindliness and good-will to all men, without distinction of creed or colour, will rub off the angles of mistrust and prejudice, and give us all to a better knowledge of each other. The time has not yet come when the Hindu, the Mahomedan, and the Christian can freely inter change those social civilities which alone ripen into friendships and intimacies. But, there is a common ground on which all can meet without offence to prejudices or a sacrifice of national habits, and this was the ground judiciously selected by the Lieutenant-governor in his first public entertainment. It is difficult to condense into the brief space which can be allotted to it even an outline of the numerous objects of interest scattered throughout the rooms for the entertainment of his guests. Electric telegraphs, insulators, submarine cables, and other curiosities of the "lightning post," as the natives not inaptly term it, were well represented and illustrated by Major Douglas, assisted by very youthful signallers. Messages were transmitted by various native gentlemen, and written off with a speed and accuracy which delighted and asto-nished them. Mr. McLardy showed them in section the working of the mightiest instrument of modern progress, of which the various stages of improvement from the earlier efforts of Newcomen and Savery to the crowning work of Watt, were illustrated in action. The dense and inquiring crowd at this corner of the verandah was indicative of the pleasure and interest felt in the beauty and perfect success of the working models. Mr. McLardy likewise exhibited an instructive model of a multiple screw steamer of very light draught for river navigation, and a very beautiful example of the gyroscope, an instrument which has thrown so much light upon the movements of the earth and the heavenly bodies with which she is associated. The walls of some of the rooms introduced, for the first time to most of those present, plans of the projected postoffice, Presidency College, Mr. Turnbull's Railway bridge at Pultah Ghaut, the proposed memorial church at Cawnpore, and the unrivalled topographical map of Cashmere, the work of Captain Montgomery. We doubt much if all ceed once in every month to Halta, there to hold father's quitting India.

science and skill of civilisation have in the quiet and ease of ever produced a more complete and beautiful record of the physical features any portion of the earth's surface. Wh of When the dangers and difficulties in which Captain Montgomery's task was accomplished, are considered, the result is little short of marvellous, and may well cause the Indian scientific corps to be proud of the small band of heroes and savans, who have rendered those branches of the late Company's army illustrious, wherever skill, science, and bravery are valued at their real worth. Models of guns, and the very undesirable looking projectiles hurled by them against all opponents of flesh, stone, or iron, furnished food for reflection to those who had rather not purchase glory at such fearful risks. Photography occupied a prominent place, and was admirably represented by the ethnographical pictures of Dr. Simpson, the life-like portraits of Mr. Rowe, a bewildering collection of stereos and objects of every conceivable form and variety, such as, to be properly examined and appreciated, would have occupied a dozen evenings. A new Venetian instrument, the property of Mr. J. P. Ward, of the Civil Service, and termed an alteoscopio, was the novelty of this department of art. It magnified and reflected in relief, images from a concave surface, so as to render them life-like to an extent not accomplished by any other instrument that we have seen. Such is a very imperfect outline of one of the most successful attempts to combine amusement with instruction, and to bring into harmonious union the long separated branches of the great Arian family, that has been brought to bear upon the social life of Calcutta. Englishman.

MURREE, May 10 .- The tea planters, who have settled in the Kangra valley and in localities adjacent, have lately forwarded to the Punjab Government a memorial praying that the period allowed for the preferment of claims to exercise the right of pre-emption may be reduced from three months to one. It was found that the lengthened period allowed by the regulations in force in the Punjab gave rise to disputes, and interfered very materially in placing obstacles in the way of parties desirous of acquiring land, and this was peculiarly felt by European settlers in the hill districts, where, for the most part, they are some way removed from the local Courts. The Government, taking all these subjects into consideration, decided that the prayer of the memorial required attention, and after insti tuting inquiry into a few points on which information appeared to be wanting, a circular was drawn up, which has since been issued. making the desired alteration in the regulations. About the same time that the above was under consideration by the Government, a report, drawn up by Mr. Egerton, on the tea plantations in the Kangra valley, on the slopes of the hills and in the Punjab generally, was received. The report is all that could be desired; it is clear and distinct, and every subject touched upon whether as to the selection of land, the difficulties in the way of acquiring it or the culture of the tea plant itself, and subsequent manufacture, is well weighed and considered. So valuable, indeed, did the Lieutenant-governor consider Mr. Egerton's report that he has received the thanks of the Government for his exertions and their highly interesting and valuable result. Much has been said of late in these parts of the necessity for organising some court before which European settlers can appear at or near Halta. Hitherto all litigants have had to proceed to the Sudder station, which has greatly interfered with the planters' pursuits, and in most instances settlers have preferred to submit to imposition or to forego claims, rather than remain so long absent from their plantation as a visit to the Sudder Station involved. Several reports have been from time to time made to Government on this subject, but until now without eliciting any notice. Very recently, however, orders have been issued by the Government to the effect that an Assistant Commissioner shall be directed to pro-

Europe working his court, and to decide all cases in which the settlers may be concerned, either as plaintiffs or defendants. There is no doubt that the Punjab Government is desirous of doing its utmost to encourage the settlement of Europeans in the hill districts, and in such localities as are not inimical to the European constitution; and such concessions as this go a long way towards imbuing people with a favourable idea of the Government, the more so when they see that a real and substantial grievance has only to be made known to insure its being remedied, if within the power of the Government. litate communication between Halta and Dhurmsala, and as a measure of convenience to the public, the Government has further directed the immediate completion of the road between those two places. The necessity for this has been long felt and acknowledged, but hitherto funds have been wanting for the work. Now, however, that the annual estimates have been granted, we may hope to see progress made towards making the Punjab highways passable throughout. Good reads are still sadly wanted in the hill districts, but for them those who have located themselves in out of the way places must wait.- Englishman.

Bundlecund, May 25 .- Lieutenant Ward, 30th (Punjab) Regiment Native Infantry, returned last evening from a dour into the district. He had with him forty men of the 30th (Punjab) Regiment Native Infantry, and thirty men of Hockin's Cavalry. The intelligence on which he went was of the best kind. Leaving Nowgong on the night of the 17th inst., he made as if marching for Dutteah, and then doubling round by forced marches arrived at the village of Barrow, where the rebel chief he was after was concealed, The cavalry surrounded the village, and he entered it with the infantry. The man hearing them, tried to bolt, but meeting the cavalry outside was stopped, and after a severe resistance was at last speared by a Kote Duffadar. He very slightly wounded the Duffadar, and received four or five thrusts before he was finished off. The rebel chief's name is Guneesh Dhu, he is a brother of Muckoom Singh, whom Captain Hoxham of the 30th (Punjab) Regiment Native Infantry shot not long ago .- Delhi Gazette.

THE COMMISSARIAT COMMISSION .- Lieutenant-Colonel Priestly, of H.M.'s 42nd Highlanders, having arrived at the Presidency, the sittings of the Commissariat Commission will commence immediately. It is understood that the assembling of this Commission is, and that its proceedings will be, connected with the proposed project of transferring the Commissariat to the Government and patronage of the Commanderin-Chief.

THE RAJAH OF PUTTEEALLA.-The Englishman makes a serious assertion, which the Government of India should ascertain the truth of. That paper states that on the return of the Rajah of Putteealla to his own territory he declared to his people in full durbar that "the Governor's Council is nothing but a name; its policy is full of tricks; and its great object is to deceive the Indians and sweep all the riches of India to England." We know that the Maharajah's pride rereived a healthy lesson in Calcutta, but cannot believe that he would utter such words in public durbar after his very admirable speech on Lord Canning's proposed law of entail.

MR. W. H. ABBOTT, SENIOR, who came to Calcutta many years ago to practise as an Attorney of the Supreme Court, but who subsequently accepted the offer of Registrar of the Diocese, and Secretary to the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, has been permitted to retire from the active duties of his office on a pension. Mr. W. H. Abbott, Senior, left Calcutta for England in the early part of 1860, and it is in consequence of the state of his health not admitting of his return to India, that, in acknowledgment of his long and valuable service, the Government has now conferred a pension on him. He is succeeded in his appointment by his son, Mr. W. H. Abbott, Junior, who has officiated as Ecclesiastical Registrar and Secretary to the Metropolitan from the date of his CACHAR, May 18 .- A meeting of planters was held in the station last week, for the purpose of taking into consideration several points affecting the general interest, among which was the system of advances so much in vogue at present. It was proposed to put a stop, by unanimous consent, to this system, it being found to be one fraught with injurious consequences, lessening the hold upon contractors, and encouraging bad work and scoundrelism; and being, in fact, s decided obstacle in the way of obtaining faithful fulfilment of contracts. The system took its rise in the attitude of dependence in which the planter is necessarily placed towards the natives, and which he cannot conceal from them. They, with their usual quick-sightedness, are not slow to take advantage of it, and the less so as no people in Bengal are further from feeling any pressure from poverty than those of Cachar. Every man, by the help of his double crop of rice, raised off lands unsurpassed in fertility, followed, perhaps, by a cold weather crop, secures himself an ample competency. If he thinks that, without any over-exertion to himself, he can make a few rupees off the planter, he will come and offer himself; but if he is not allowed his own choice of work, or finds he cannot make his own terms, his worst alternative is a holiday, and he returns without much reluctance to his barree and passes the cold weather months in dolce far niente, varied by occasional fishing excursions. In the rainy months no inducement will tempt him from his rice crop to work on the plantations; he would consider such a course as sacrificing a cercainty to an uncertainty; for he is privately by no means convinced of the stability of tea as a speculation, it being one in which none of his fore fathers ever engaged, and which he considers to be a bubble which may any fine morning burst, and leave his country free from the curse of innovations, and his hills to bear undisturbed their natural products—thatching grass. With a population like this to deal with, who can be surprised at the upward tendency of wages with its concomitant circumstances, among which is the necessity for advances? And will the proposal of the committee, that all planters should unanimously put a stop to the advance system, have the intended effect? I very much doubt it. Most planters are not in a position to hold out long, and a strike of very moderate duration must bring them on their knees. There is one, and only one, way that appears of overcoming the difficulty, and that is by large importations of North-West labour. This latter system is in operation in some plantations-those of the Assam Company, for instance-and its effect undoubtedly is to keep rates down to a reasonable level (varying some what, of course, according to the price of provisions, but having a fixed relation to it), and to prevent the rates of local labour from rising above that level. Competition among the Bengalees themselves cannot be trusted, as they keep down rates in such matters with a unanimity only to be found amongst Orientals. The whole district is inspired as if by one soul; but the introduction of an unsympathising race like the North-West men, under agreement, and having their interests bound up with those of the planters, has a very strong influence in keeping down rates, and nothing else will.-Englishman.

MAJOR BECHER.—The Hurkaru understands that the task of compiling the pay and audit regulations of the Bengal army has been assigned to the gallant Major Becher, of the Adjutant-General's department. "We are glad," says our contemporary, "that Sir Hugh Rose has found the means of thus testifying his sense of the value of Major Becher's services. The selection is a most happy one in every sense."

An Artillery "On Dit."—We hear it is commonly reported, says the Delhi Gazette, that all artillery officers on the staff are to be seconded. This will cause the promotion of about twentythree lieutenants. Almost all the officers of the army just now are in a state of smxious suspense about their future destiny, which the Government ought for very shame to put an end to. What has become of the postings?

THE RAO SAHIB, or more properly Pandoo Rung Rao, reached Agra safely on the 27th May, and is now in the Central gaol. The project of sending him to Cawnpore to be tried has been abandoned, and he will stand his trial there. Our Lahore correspondent has given further information about him. There can be no question of his being a villain of the deepest dye. There was a doubt, of course, as long as his identity could be disputed, but as that matter is set at rest, there is and never was any doubt about his being the author of an enormous number of murders. He is to be tried especially for the murder of three officers of Irregular Cavalry, and of some natives for having assisted Europeans to escape. It was he who captured and sent to Cawnpore the victims of the Futtyghur mutiny. The Rao had about 13,000 rupees worth of property about him in jewels, &c., when he was seized. All his retinue was comprised in a small hill pony and a buffalo. He has his two wives with him, who are now living in the gaol to be near their respected lord and master.

MR. YULE'S SHIKAR PARTY IN THE TERAL-The sport enjoyed by this party in the Oudh Terai, is, we believe, almost unprecedented (at least of late years), the bag up to the latest accounts having reached the large figure of thirty-five tigers and one leopard, besides numbers of Sambhur, spotted deer, hog deer, Gond (large swamp deer), florikan, black partridge, &c. The above bag is the produce of twenty-six days' actual shooting, and as Mr. Yule does not return to Lucknow for at least a week yet, probably forty tigers will be within the mark for the whole trip. A fair proportion of the "striped jackets" fought well, and of Mr. Yule's elephants alone five have been cut, some The party originally consisted of Mr. Yule, Major Boileau, Lord Listowel, and Colone Tower. The two latter left for England about the end of April, and were replaced by Major Aitkens and Mr. Ross, deputy commissioner of Luckhimpore. The Maharajah of Bulrampore is also with the party, and is accompanied by all his elephants. Mr. Yule, in addition to injuries received by the upsetting of his dog-cart, was badly bruised about the head and face by a runaway elephant, which dashed the howdah against the thick branch of a tree and smashed it; but in spite of all this he has not missed a single day's shooting, and his pluck and resolution have been rewarded by a large proportion of the slain having fallen to his unerring rifle. Mr. Ross had a very narrow escape, trying to beat a very large tiger out of a most difficult piece of swampy jungle. The pad elephant he got on for the purpose was charged by the tiger, and at the same moment the hind feet of the elephant slipping back into a quicksand the tiger got right upon its head. Mr. Ross's rifle likewise at this critical moment missed fire. The elephant, a very fine one, threw the tiger up into the air, as also Mr. Ross; the latter was thrown clean, and fortunately was not seized, nor did he remain to be, for he beat a rapid retreat. During the rolling about of the elephant in the quicksand the tiger's body was actually once in contact with Mr. Ross's. The weather is reported to have been remarkably cool, and there was but little sickness in camp. There had, however, been some very heavy thunderstorms with hail.—Outh Gazette.

Feroze Shah, who has hitherto successfully eluded the vigilance of Government, has, it is said, escaped to Affghanistan, and is in Ahmed Jan's camp.

THE 25TH PUNJAB N. I. on their way down to Barrackpore carried the cholera with them, after they left the river steamers and took to the railway at Sahebgunge. All over the country the great heat seems to have provoked an outburst of this epidemic.

THE GODAVERY WORKS.

As the works upon the Godavery progress, and as portion by portion of that river is rendered navigable, the necessity for diverting the traffic of both Nagnore and Hyderabad to that great highway becomes apparent. As yet but little has been done towards the development of a system of roads in connection with the navigable portions of the Godavery, and for this reason the great benefits which would accrue to the people from the opening up of the river are very considerably and detrimentally circumscribed. To render of value this vast undertaking, which is so rapidly reaching completion as far as the works on the lower Godavery are concerned, it is essential that the products of the soil should be attracted to it as well as that British manufactured goods should find their way into the heart of these countries by its means. This cannot be done unless a perfect system of roads leading to and from the principal marts be carried out. To facilitate this, we hear that Sir Charles Wood has issued instructions that as each section of the Godavery is rendered available for traffic, a report of the same shall be made to the Resident at Hyderabad and the Commissioner of Nagpore, with a view to the devising of a system of roads in connection with that river, which shall mainly tend to a full development of its traffic capabilities. However good and worthy of consideration this measure of Sir Charles Wood's may be, it is but an imperfect one after all; granted that it is the best within his command, it is nevertheless by no means the most advantageous obtainable. It is in connection not alone with trunk lines of rail but with all highways capable of affording cheap carriage, that a tram way company may most profitably carry out the work which it is their object to accomplish. If a map showing the course of the Godavery be referred to, it will be seen that it wends its way through some of the most fertile districts in Central India, washing as it does on the one hand the cotton fields of Nagpore and on the other the cotton and gram-produc-ing lands of Hyderabad. It moreover runs through one of the largest teak forests in India, the trees of which, though not generally so large or of such value as the teak of the Pegu and Moulmein forests, or of the Wynaed, are, nevertheless, valuable for shipbuilding and other pur-

Digitized by GOGIC

There are also to be found on both sides of the Godavery, for many miles of its course, large tracts of country covered with a bastard teak, which, though it never grows to any large size, is usually found in any quantity of girth, sufficient for railway sleepers. In this a tramway company, purposing to connect the chief marts of Hyderabad and Nagpore by tramway with the Godavery, would find great advantage; for one item, involving large expenditure from the difficulty of procuring it, would be at hand. In few parts of India, not even in connection with existing main lines of railway, could tramways be worked to so much advantage as on the Godavery River. If we take the main routes as now existing between Nagpore and Chinnoor on the left hand of the Godavery, and Hyderabad on the right, we shall find that within the extent of 180 miles of route in the former instance, and 150 in the other, not only are many important towns brought into communication with this highway of nature, but the capitals of two most important provinces are at once connected by a speedy and cheap means of locomotion. The route to the Godavery from Nagpore lies directly through Hingunghat, the chief depot of raw cotton in the province of Nag pore, and passes through Chanda and other important entrepot, and terminates at Chinnoor on the river itself. Hingunghat, Chanda, and Chinnoor are all chief towns of districts which bear their names, and the entire route lies through highly productive cotton soil. These towns, in addition to the character they bear as cotton depots, are likewise large marts for grain and other produce of the districts in which they are situated. There is already a considerable amount of traffic constantly passing over the road communicating with these towns during the cold and hot seasons, but for six months in the year all unmetalled roads throughout Napore are impassable. Were the communication between these important districts and the Godavery rendered easy and cheap by means of a tramway intersecting them, the traffic would enormously increase. The extensive waste and jungle clad lands which now serve alone to harbour the wild animals so inimical to man's progress would disappear, and the peasant would no longer find his cattle killed by tigers, or his crops rooted up and destroyed by the wild boar, a depredator almost as savage Those lands would afford occupation to thousands of the now numerous poverty-stricken classes which disfigure one of the richest soils in India, and the tramway would create for itself a traffic very far in excess of that which now offers. The same remarks apply to the intersection of the districts lying between Hyderabad, the capital of the Deccan, and the Godavery. The route to be followed would be that passing through Balaram to Eilgundel and Ramghari, and thence to Man-tana on the Godavery. Mantana is some twenty miles higher up the river than Chinnoor, and supposing the Godavery to have been rendered navigable so far, the tramway might stop there, there being nothing to be gained by carrying it further down the river, with the course of which it must of necessity run parallel. On this latter route there are no large streams to bridge, the only one of any size being the Menair, at Eilgundel; nor engineering difficulties to be overcome, that may not be successfully achieved without incurring much outlay. On the other route, however, it is not so, there is one considerable stream, the Pyne-gunga, to be crossed, which may offer some difficulties, as during the monsoon, when the waters are out, the stream is excessively rapid. Moreover, between this river and the Godavery, the country is much broken by hills, still not so much so as to require any considerable expenditure of capital in overcoming what difficulties they may present. The advantages of connecting the cities of Hyderabad and Nagpore by means of a tramway, and both with the sea by the Godavery route, can scarcely be over-estimated, nor is it much to predict that ere many years are past Nagpore will be connected with the General Indian Peninsular Rail-we have advocated, would result in a speedy by influential Zemindars and talookdars with a recognition of the value of the system, and in the projecting of other lines which, ere long, will amount of rent possible. Still the Nizam renbring into communication every principal city and ders fruitless much of his minister's good Gomart throughout India .- Englishman.

MATERIAL PROGRESS OF PEGU.-The Rangoon Times says that in every department of Pegu the revenue seems steadily on the increase. For the year ending the 30th April, 1862, the net increase of the revenue of the district of Rangoon will amount to one lakh and forty thousand rupees. In the Customs department it will reach the sum of two lakhs and fourteen thousand rupees. Thus in two departments alone, of one district of the Pegu province, the net increase is three lakks and fifty-four thousand rupees.

ABKARRY DEPARTMENT.—Sir W. Denison's attention has been drawn to the manner in which country spirits and toddy are retailed under the sanction of Government within the Madras Collectorate. It is proposed, according to the local Athenaum, to carry out there the same Abkarry system which prevails in the other districts of the Presidency-a proceeding which promises to increase the Government revenue but is threatened with the opposition of the native subordinates who have so long had the profitable management of the Abkarry department under the present system.

CIVIL FUND (CHARITY BRANCH). - Mr. W. Huddleston, secretary to the Madras Civil Fund, particularly directs the attention of subscribers to the 2nd clause of the rules of the Subsidiary Fund given below:-Clause 2. "That to entitle the daughter of a party or subscriber as aforesaid to the provisions specified in the foregoing rule, a notification of her birth shall be made within three months from the date thereof to the trustees of the fund in India, or the agents in England. The notification shall be made in writing by the father of the child, or in his absence by the mother, under special authority from him, and shall be accompanied by a promise to pay to the trustees within twelve months from the date of the child's birth, the said sum of £30, with interest at 8 per cent. for the interval. It is to be understood that this payment is to be made whether the child live or die."

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The committee of the Madras Famine Relief Fund have laid their final report before the public. A balance of Rs. 23,160-11-3 had remained in the hands of the committee, and the mode of its disposal was referred to a public meeting convened at Madras on the 25th of November last. It was to be the committee's duty to carry out their trust by applying the money to the particular purpose for which it was placed in their hands, or, should this be impossible, by appropriating it to some object which comes nearest to the original end in view. They divided the money between native and European charities in the proportion in which the subscriptions came from the native and the European communities, thus giving one-third to the former, and two-thirds to the latter. Of the European portion of the fund Rs. 566 were handed over to Taylor's Fund-the remainder was set aside for the relief of the destitute and starving poor.

SALAR JUNG'S ADMINISTRATION.—The Deccan correspondent of the Times of India draws attention to the political and social progress which has recently been made in the Nizam's territory under the able administration of Salar Jung. He has entirely repressed the disorder occasioned by the influence of the resident Arab chiefs and established justice and order. The introduction of the railway, approaching as it does within two hundred miles of Hyderabad and Sholapore, has had great influence over the Arab mind, by facilitating intercourse with their native country. An efficient police system has been established and a wholesale deportation of Cashmerians to the Andamans has taken place. The foreign merway at Jubbulpore by similar means. The cenaries, who have so often been charged with knocked down to Mr. Bap construction of the two lines of tramway not decoitees and other outrages, are thus diminished for the sum of Rs. 9,450.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON .- The theological tendencies of the Governor of Madras are now taking such a form as to demand some notice from Sir Charles Wood. From a letter which has recently appeared in the Madras Athenaum, we learn that the illustrious assailant of "Essays and Reviews" has contemplated inflicting a mortal blow upon the religion of the Hindoos by appointing a Missionary to the Principalship of the Madras Presidency College; and this step is proposed under circumstances of such extreme unfairness towards those whose claims ought to he considered, that the bare rumour is calculated to injure the efficiency of the working staff at the College, as well as to excite the suspicion and distrust of the Native community of the Madras Presidency. The circumstances, so far as they are of general interest, are briefly these:-The Director of Public Instruction, Mr. Arbuthnot, has been recently appointed Acting Chief Secretary, and it is understood that in a very short time the appointment will be confirmed. Mr. Powell, who has been Principal of the Presidency College for nearly a quarter of a century, and whose zeal and ability have been frequently acknowledged by Government, has accordingly been appointed Acting Director of Public Instruction; and it is understood that his appointment will be confirmed at the same time as that of Mr. Arbuthnot. The gentleman whose claims stand highest for the vacant post of Principal is Mr. Henry Bowers, Professor of English Literature and Belles Lettres at the same college. For fifteen or sixteen years Mr. Bowers has been connected with the institution, and on one occasion acted as Principal for some months. Accordingly, he could not be passed over in making the acting appointment; but it is now stated that this appointment will not be confirmed, but that an outsider, who has been a missionary for many years, who has taken a part in the education of Sir William Denison's sons, and who, for aught we know, may have assisted in the demolition of the "Essayists and Reviewers," is to be appointed to the vacant post. It seems from the letter in the Madras Athenaum already quoted, that an absurd excuse has been put forward for this act of gross injustice and inexpediency. It appears that Mr. Bowers was educated at Oxford, but like some competition wallahs and others, never took a degree. But the missionary has taken a degree. Therefore, the experience and attainments of Mr. Bowers are to be set aside, the legitimate ambition of every member of the educational department is to be disappointed, the efficiency of every branch is to be weakened, and the feelings of the whole native community are to be outraged, to enable Sir William Denison to reward the missionary. We have no doubt but that the Madras Council will oppose such a step with all their might, but the obstinacy of the Madras Governor is proverbial, and should the Council not succeed in checking him serious mischief may be done .-Englishman.

SPORT.-We learn from Aurungabad that Captain Peyton, of the 9th M. N. I.; Lieutenant Johnson, of the Hyderabad Cavalry, and Lieutenant Cherry, of the Madras Cavalry, have within the last month killed twenty tigers, besides several bears and panthers, in the jungles near Hingolee, in the Nizam's Dominions.

SALE OF THE WRECK OF THE "BEECHWORTH." The wreck of the British merchant ship Beechworth, as it lies on the Caranja shoal, together with such part of the cargo as could not be saved, was sold in public auction on the 3rd June by Messis. Menesse and Co. of Bombay, and was knocked down to Mr. Bapty, as the highest bidder,

SIR BARTLE FRERE .- The native inhabitants of Kurrachee have presented an address of con gratulation to Sir Bartle Frere on succeeding to the Government of Bombay. They recalled an expression used by them on the occasion of his leaving Sind for the Council in Calcutta-hoping that he would at no distant day occupy a still higher position, which they said was not mere compliment, but sprung from a deep-rooted conviction of his eminent qualifications. They congratulated him on his career in the Council, and thought his present appointment was a proof of the anxiety of her Majesty's Government to select for such an exalted post "one who possesses the key of the secret of touching and winning the hearts of men of different creeds and castes of which the native society of this country is composed by the power of love and not of fear."

GENERAL SHOWERS' OPERATIONS.—Letters from General Showers's Camp, dated Kationg, May the 14th, state that the General had completed his operations in the northern districts, and was about to commence his march for the Kassili Falls, after dispersing a gang of rebels, who were, at date of writing, harboured in a village at some distance off, called Hunchining. Thence he was to take a line of march on which it was believed that he would encounter a river which would render necessary the construction of rafts to cross the troops. This done, there was another day's tough work to the banks of the Kopili, and another to Satongah. In the northern districts, which the General was about to leave, all the postings of the different detachments of troops had been arranged; and the settlement of the villages was left to the police. What we understand by military force appears, by its own weight and power, to be unable to overtake the savages in those regions, where the energy and peculiar mode of warfare of Choorka troops would be invaluable. The supplement to the Gazette publishes despatches from Brigadier Showers regarding the military operations in the Jynteah Hills. None are of later date than 27th March, and they give no information in addition to that which we have published from time to time. General Showers praises the successful attack of Colonel Dunsford, C.B. on the stockaded villages of Raliong and Munsow on the 20th March, with four hundred men of the 28th Punjab Infantry and 44th Bengal Native Infantry. The General also eulogises the spirited and well planned assaults made by Lieutenant-colonel W. Richardson and the small body of men under his command on the stockaded positions of Jalong, Munsow, Latoober, and Ooksaie. Detachments of the 33rd N. I. under the command of Major Longmore and Lieutenant Walcott are to retain the posts of Satougah and Bato during the rains No body of rebels can be assembled, and no stockade built up, without being attacked by one or other of these detachments. Major Rowlatt, on 27th March, expresses the opinion that all that new remains to be done towards the pacification of the country is to occupy the hills with troops so as effectually to prevent the rebels from rallying at any one particular point. The era of "levies," it would seem, is not yet past, as "an additional force" is to be raised for service in the Jynteah Hills.

THE INDIAN NAVY .- The Englishman states that the annihilation of the Indian Navy is now being actively carried out. The Clive was ordered to be put out of commission immediately, and all her guns, stores, and gear had gone ashore to the dockyard; the officers being sent on board the Ajdaha. The Feroze, Semiramis, and Auckland, were also under orders to dismantle, and send on shore everything except their anchors, cables, and awnings, and had commenced the work. The Clyde had gone up to the Persian Gulf to send down all the vessels of the Indian Navy to Bombay for execution, and to remain in the Gulf her self until relieved by a vessel of the Royal Navy The Zenobia was also ordered to return to Bombay with all the vessels of the Indian Navy at Aden, to be paid off, and put out of commission: and she also was to be relieved by a ship of the Royal Navy. The Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy, leaving his flag flying on the Ajdaha, to the credit of the 'Lancashire Relief Fund."

had taken his departure by the mail steamer which left on the 12th for England; there to assist in drawing up a scheme for pensioning and paying off the officers. This terminates the existence of another of the Company's institutions; a service which has done good work in its day, and produced many able and intelligent officers, distinguished in the scientific departments of the naval profession.

LIGHT-HOUSES IN THE RED SEA .- The P. and O. Co.'s steamer Union, which lately arrived at Bombay from Suez a few days ago, has for some time past been employed in assisting in the construction of the two new light-houses in the Red Sea which have been erected at the cost of the Egyptian Government, at whose disposal the services of this vessel were placed by the P. and O. Company. One of these light-houses is erected on the point at Zaffarana in the Gulf of Suez, and has been finished and in use for about two or three months. The other is erected on the Ushruffee Reef, in the Straits of Jubal, and is not yet The site selected for this light-house is on the Dædalus shoal, in the upper part of the Red Sea, about 250 miles from Jubal. In addition to the light-houses above mentioned, there has for some years past been one on Perim Island.

BELOOCHEE WANT OF FAITH .- We (Sindian) have been informed of a curious result which has attended the recent visit of the French frigate Hermione and her tender to Kurrachee. Some of the Beloochee tribes upon the border are under the firm impression that the British rai in Soind is coming to an end. In proof of this they allege the fact, that two foreign ships recently came to this port, and that the crews landed, proceeded to Government house and pulled down the British flag by force; while these unwelcome visitors were eventually only got rid of by the payment of a large sum of money. Upon the strength of this impression we learn that some of their chiefs have become anything but respectful to such of our countrymen as they happen to meet with, and have indulged in expressions relative to her Majesty's Government which has resulted in the arrest of two or three of the most forward.

INCOME-TAX AND STAMP REVENUES .- The following statement, showing the estimated and actual receipts on account of Income-tax and Stamp Revenues of the Presidency of Bombay during the year 1861-62, including Sind, Nagpore Nimar, Indore, and Baroda, has been published in the Government Gazette :-

Strange, Royal Artillery; Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell and child; Mrs. Luckes and three children proceeded to England on the 11th by the British ship War Spirit.

DISTRESS IN LANCASHIRE. - The Bombay Chamber of Commerce has issued the following appeal in behalf of the Lancashire operatives:-"In accordance with the suggestions of several members, the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce beg to intimate that they are prepared to receive and forward to England subscriptions in aid of the distressed mill hands of Lancashire. It is hoped that this movement will be liberally supported, not only by the members of the Chamber, but by the public generally, both European and Native. Looking to the extreme urgency of the case, it seems exceedingly desirable that as large an amount as possible should be sent home by next mail, and it is proposed to send the remittances to the Lord Mayor of London, with a request that he will place them in the proper hands for distribution. Subscriptions will be received by the Oriental Bank Corporation

THE JUNGLES, GUZERAT, June 6 .- Most of the Guzerat shikar parties have now returned once more to the monotony of camp existence. the whole they have been very successful. begin with, we had a large party of six guns, and about as many elephants, starting from Ahmedabad under the able guidance of that thorough good sportsman, Captain Thatcher, hunting down the Mahee river. The result of the bag was eight tigers, two panthers, ten bears, and a sprinkling of deer and other small game. Captain Thatcher had a rather narrow escape of his life, as the elephant he was on took fright, the howdah turning round, and part of his battery came to grief. Turning next to Deesa, I hear that a smaller party of three guns, under the command of that veteran sportsman, Major Pittman, started about the middle of April and shot over the ground in the vicinity of Edur; they were not quite so fortunate, perhaps, as they might have been, bagging a couple of lions and a tiger; the latter had, I am told, devoured an unhappy woman, far advanced in an interesting way, the evening before. The other Deesa party, consisting of Captain Dawson and another officer attached to the 11th N.I., shot over the Edur line of country; their bag was a first-rate one, consisting of nine lions and tigers, four cubs, four panthers, a bear, sambur, cheeta, &c., &c. I hear that they used a very powerful description of detonating shell, and that they only lost one animal in their trip. A party of Royals are still in the field.—Times of India.

SALE OF THE SHIP "LADY FRANKLIN."vessel, the property of Jairaz Fazell and Hajee Mahomed Sidick, Mohomedan merchants of Bombay, was sold in public auction on the 3rd June, by Messrs. Crawford and Co., for the sum of Rs. 9,200. The Lady Franklin arrived in Bombay in charge of a Nacoda, in April last, in a leaky condition, with a large quantity of her cargo, which consisted of rice, in a damaged state. The vessel having been condemned as unseaworthy she has been sold as above stated.

CREW OF THE "SULTANA." - The Cochin Courier has received intelligence that the second officer and 45 of the crew of the Sultana arrived at Mangalore about the 5th June. The captain and remainder of the crew reached the same port on the 10th.

CAPTAIN RICE, of the ship Barbara, died on Sunday, the 9th June, of apoplexy.

MR. RAYMOND WEST, of the Bombay Civil Service, has been appointed Under-Secretary to Government in the Political Department. appointment seems an unexceptionable one. Mr. West stands at the head of the competition men, and certainly possesses superior abilities.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, July 9, 1862.

"DATE OBOLUM BELISARIO." HER MAJESTY'S present Secretary of State for India has so frequently expressed a heartfelt desire to dispense justice with a liberal hand, that it can only be necessary to bring a real grievance to his knowledge to ensure a prompt redress. It may well be that amid the manifold cares, and beneath the overwhelming burden of an imperial supervision, some minor details affecting individual interests will occasionally escape his notice, and a partial wrong be done, however unintentionally It is thus alone we can account for the illiberal treatment of the gallant and meritorious officers who, from wounds or chronic disease contracted in the field, have been compelled to retire on a miserable pittance because there were yet a few years wanting to complete the period of service that would have entitled them to a pension. Under ordinary circumstances every rule and regulation of the service should, without doubt, be strictly upheld, but there are times when a too rigid adherence to the letter becomes both inequitable and unjust. No general system can be so perfect and infallible, so universally comprehensive, as not to admit and even necessitate occasional exceptions. Every good soldier heartily approves of the restrictions which prevent illers and malingerers from too easily gathering the rewards due to long and faithful service. At the same time every good citizen rejoices to learn that a kindly partiality and a generous interpretation of the law have been shown in favour of those whose excellent conduct or extraordinary sufferings have given them a claim to the gratitude or the compassion of their fellow-countrymen. And when these claims are combined, as in the case of the Indian officers whose health has irrecoverably broken down through wounds, exposure, and fatigue incurred during the heroic campaigns against the sepoy mutineers, every one must cheerfully recognise the propriety, the justice, the necessity of paraphrasing rather than reading the ordinary rules for retirement from active service. Never since the world began has truer heroism been displayed than during those terrible summer months of 1857. Never has the moral character of a nation been more purely and nobly exalted than that of the English people by the glorious bearing of their peerless representatives in India. Is it not, then, piteous to think that many a brave gentleman who freely shed his blood and sacrificed his health in the fulfilment of his duty should now be reduced to hopeless poverty, because his superhuman exertions have shown him to be but human? After 536 (Europeans) in India, and 297 Natives, mental, and will be modified as actual expepassing the best seventeen years of his life far making a grand total of 19,469, possessing a rience may indicate to be advisable. The effect after successfully encountering the Sikhs in the north-west and the Burmese in the east, after sustaining or raising the ever memorable siege of the Presidency of Lucknow, after warring with inferior forces beneath the walls of Delhi, after enduring so many hardships and irrecoverably shattered, with every line of life closed against him, without private means, without ulterior prospects, without hope, many an officer is sentenced to drag on an existence without further aim or purpose, embittered by sickness and suffering, and by bodily pain and mental anguish, by disappointed hopes and gnawing domestic cares, on a miserable pittance of ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY POUNDS PER ANNUM. This is the extreme measure of England's gratitude for India preserved. It is thus she recognises and rewards godlike achievements; it is thus she kindles the pure flame of patriotism in the bosoms of future generations. And, declamation apart, these officers have really an equitable claim upon the liberal consideration of Parliament, which has already emphatically declared that no man should experience loss through the transfer of the Indian government to the Crown. Under the Company's golden rule there were Regimental Retiring Funds which enabled an officer to withdraw from the service when he was no longer fit for duty, and so make way for his more able-bodied juniors. This sys tem, if not strictly legal, was at least openly sanctioned by the Court of Directors, and ought not to have been summarily abolished without some compensation being made to those who had staked so much upon its continuance. Something, indeed, has been done for those who are still able to remain in India, but surely their claim was no clearer or more forcible than that of their less fortunate comrades, doomed to penury in the land they have served so well. A petition embodying these plain truths is, we believe, about to be presented to Parliament, when ample justice will, doubtless, be rendered to the hardly used and long-suffering petitioners.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

INFERIOR in importance only to Mr. Laing's Financial Statement is Mr. Juland Danvers' Annual Report on Indian Railways. progress made during the past year was decidedly satisfactory. On the 1st January, 1862, there were 1,609 miles of railway communication open to traffic, of which 760 had been completed in the preceding twelve months. As the total length at present sanctioued is 4,653 miles, it follow that 3,044 miles were still in process of construction. Few persons, we imagine, can now be found hostile to the introduction of railroads into India, but possibly still fewer are aware of the direct benefits received by this country from the manufacture and transport of materials and rolling stock required for their completion. Up to the close elect to pay, and these have been fixed of last year 3,012 ships have been employed at a very low rate. The passenger fares in conveying 2,459,928 tons valued at on the East Indian, for instance, are only £12,101,419, on which £318,756 was paid for insurance. The number of individuals, too, interested in the success of Indian Railway adventure is surprisingly great. There are no fewer than 18,933 shareholders in England, However, these rates are as yet only experi-from his home, his family, and his friends, | paid-up share capital of £31,308,909, besides 6.691 holders of debentures to the aggregate value of £11,756,249. Then, in India itself employment is found on the open lines for 34,329 persons, of whom 32,148 are natives of the country, and it is stated on good authority that in a very few years an abundant gaining so many victories, with his constitution supply of native engine-drivers and artizans may be obtained " if a practical system of instruction be adopted."

"The financial position of the companies," continues Mr. Danvers, "is more satisfactory than could have been expected at the commencement of the year." It was at that time apprehended that sufficient means to prosecute necessary works would not be forthcoming unless through a loan sanctioned by Parliament. The Secretary of State was accordingly empowered to raise money in this country to supplement any deficiencies on the part of the companies, but, owing to the improved tone of the money market and the increased confidence in Indian securities, the latter succeeded in obtaining by their own exertions no less than £8,648,641. On the other hand the expenditure has not been so great as was anticipated by £1,150,000-being actually £6,850,000, instead of £8,000,000. For the current year it is expected that the outgoings will amount to £7,100,000, of which £6,000,000 will have to be raised by shares or debentures. In round numbers works have been sanctioned at an estimated outlay of £57,500,000, of which £53,500,000 has been guaranteed, and of this £43,000,000 has been raised and £40,000,000 expended. But Mr. Danvers prudently admonishes the public not to trust too implicitly to the original estimates, and adduces various reasons for the belief that upwards of sixty millions will be expended before the works now in progress are ready for traffic. The average cost per mile has thus far been £12,367, but this will be considerably augmented as double lines are laid down. For the future it is computed that the expenditure will be £4,500,000 in 1863-64, £2,500,000 in 1864-65, £2,000,000 in 1865-66, £1,000,000 in 1866-67, £500,000 in 1867-68, and £500,000 in 1868-69-of which nearly one-fifth will be spent in Great Britain. The total amount of interest paid by the Government to the end of 1861 was £6,286,895, and the annual payment on this head is now upwards of two millions: one million and a-quarter, however, has been repaid by the Company, and this process of refunding will naturally be accelerated by the gradual extension of the different lines. At the same time the receipts have not yet increased in the proportion of new sections, nor can that be expected while the lines are in broken lengths and the large cities are not brought into communication with one another. The number of passengers-especially nativeshas rapidly increased, but, unfortunately, it is chiefly the third class fares which they 21d. per mile 1st class, 11d. 2nd class, and #d. 3rd class; and on the Madras Railway they are still lower, being respectively one penny, one halfpenny, and one farthing.

be exercised by railroads is very considerable. Where the cost of transport has hitherto averaged from 3d. to 3], per ton per mileexclusive of damage to the extent of 11d. per ton-it will now be reduced to 1d. or 11d., so that a saving of a halfpenny per lb. will be gained upon all cotton brought from a distance of 300 miles in the interior.

Mr. Danvers concludes his singularly lucid and valuable report by a graceful tribute to the memory of his predecessor, the late Sir James Cosmo Melvill, K.C.B., Government Director of the Indian Railway Companies, the loss of whose services would have been more deeply felt had not his post been since so ably filled by Mr. Danvers himself.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

THE latest political "question," so far as this country is concerned, turns upon the anomalous nature of our relations with China. Proclaiming in every market-place, and on the house-tops, the doctrine of non-intervention, we, nevertheless, are materially assisting the Chinese Government in suppressing a rebellion which only the other day we were disposed to applaud as a religious and patriotic movement. The Tartar usurpation, it was said, had completed its appointed season, and was now about to give place to a national Government, and the Italian drama was to be re-enacted in the most ancient empire on the earth. A hideous and degrading polytheism was to be supplanted by the mysterious truths and pure morality of the Christian religion, and the next "cycle of Cathay" was to be a millennium of peace, plenty, and progress. A fairer or more promising programme was never submitted to the lovers of their species. The false, foul, brutal, and yet cringing Chinese was about to become "a man and a brother," and a boundless field of adventure was opening to dealers in groceries and distributors of tracts. But the curtain was hardly drawn before it was discovered that the mimes knew nothing of their parts, and that the piece they were about to play was by no means that which the civilised world had hoped and expected to witness. The patriots, unmasking themselves, stood forth as pirates and plunderers; the religious reformers appeared as the propagators of a blasphemous burlesque; and the expulsion of "the stranger," and the enfranchisement of an oppressed nationality, have been indefinitely postponed to the Greek Kalends. The discovery of the delusion was naturally a grievous disappointment to all good and liberal-minded men; but, at the same time, it was acknowledged on all sides that, however keenly we might regret the bursting of the brilliant bubble, and the sudden collapse of our too inflated expectations, we had no possible pretensions for interference on behalf of either Tartar or Taeping. And for a time we acted up to our professions of strict neutrality; our officials tendered excellent advice to the Government, while our traders supplied the rebels with arms and ammunition of inferior quality. But after a while it seemed likely that there would be neither tea nor silk for the English market, and that free ports would be useless without free intercourse with the interior. Then, for the first time, was the nefarious character of the Tseping revolt fully appreciated. Monsters of cruelty, murderers to the perpetration of such barbarities as were mour that officers had, in consequence of the re-

upon the price and quality of cotton likely to | and marauders, the vilest scum of the earth, dregs of a degraded rabble, wretches addicted to every crime, steeped in vices hitherto unheard of, and abandoned to the lowest forms of self-indulgence—such were the epithets bounteously bestowed upon the regenerators of the Chinese empire, and candidates for Christian baptism. All at once it became the duty of every civilised nation to exterminate these pests of the human race, hated of Heaven, and inimical to the tea-trade. So the troops of the two great Powers who stand in the van of civilisation, and by the grace of bayonets dispense "rum and true religion" to barbarians and water-drinkers, have made common cause with their late most treacherous enemy, and on three distinct occasions have slaughtered hundreds of human beings from whom they had received not the slightest provocation. At first it was judged sufficient to maintain a cordon of twenty miles in every direction round Shanghai, until it appeared that only five miles further inland there was a large city in which the rebels had stored the spoils gathered from the surrounding country. An allied expedition was therefore despatched against this place, a breach was effected, and Kah-ding was carried by storm. Great, no doubt, was the exultation of the peaceful citizens who had been despoiled by the Taeping robbers, at the prospect of recovering their property through the fatuous valour of the "foreign devils," who faced death for an idea, and killed their fellow-creatures to furnish their wives with silken raiment and Souchong. Greater still must have been their dismay when their disinterested allies coolly appropriated the spoils of the spoiler. and with perfect impartiality looted the loyal and the unloyal. But by what right do we claim as lawful prize the goods of a people with whom we are at peace? Are the Taepings a belligerent Power, against whom we are warring as the allies of the Chinese Government? Or are they merely robbers, whom we undertake to chastise by the same international law that justifies the suppression of piracy? In the former case, where is the treaty or convention that sanctions the hostile movements of our soldiers on the territory of an independent monarch? In the latter, why is not the property recovered restored to its rightful owners? In truth, it is the allies who are acting as "filibusters," and in that capacity have committed acts of wholesale robbery and unjustifiable homicide. Our present position, however, if not a dignified one, in at least less inexcusable than that we are about to assume, if it be true that the Chinese Government has applied, with a fair prospect of success, for the services of Captain Sherard Osborn and a certain number of British officers to command and discipline its troops. It is painful to think of the probable consequences of such a request being acceded to. In the first place, who are the agents of that Government in this country? Are they furnished with letters of credence, or in what other manner have they been empowered to represent and bind their alleged principals? Then, is it to be understood that any prisoners who may be taken will be handed over to the Chinese authorities to maltreat and torture after their savage fashion? Are British officers to be made in any way accessory

| inflicted upon their own unfortunate countrymen during the late war? And if any of these auxiliary officers should happen to fall into the hands of the Taepings, and be themselves subjected to cruel treatment, is another expedition to be fitted out to extort redress from their captors? If not, there will certainly be a loss of prestige, and the safety of Europeans throughout the empire will be gravely imperilled. Besides, on what grounds of policy do we undertake to train our future enemies, and enable them to offer a stouter opposition to our arms the next time we find ourselves arrayed against them? Nor is the wisdom of the Chinese Government to be commended in setting at nought the wholesome lesson illustrated by the well-known fable of the horse that called in the man to aid him against the stag. And the experience of history corroborates the moral of that truthful fiction. It was by assisting the Emperor of Delhi against the marauding hosts of Mahrattas that the English established themselves so firmly in Bengal. In the beginning they were only anxious to obtain a belt of neutral territory around their factories, just as they are now driving the Taepings to a certain distance from Shanghai. The circle in this case, as in the former, will gradually widen, and then a material guarantee will be demanded for the repayment of expenses incurred in defence of the Emperor's rights and the interests of our own merchants. The final result is easily foreseen in the disruption of the Chinese Empire, and the fierce wrangling of France, Great Britain, and Russia, to appropriate the dismembered fragments. Are the people of this country disposed to look forward with satisfaction to such a chaotic consummation?

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS-JULY 4.

THE NAVAL COMMANDER IN-CHIEF IN INDIA. Sir J. Hay asked the Secretary for the Admiralty whether it was his intention to make any increase in the pay and allowances of the naval commander-in chief in India in consequence of the stoppage of the allowance hitherto paid as batta to the officers by the Indian Government. The hon. member in putting the question took occasion to state that the Secretary for India had, owing to some embarrassment in the finances of the country, thought fit to reduce the pay of certain naval officers serving in India, and among them that of the naval commander and others, to the extent of £8,000 a-year. Without going into details, he might observe that the pay of the admiral commanding-in-chief on the Indian station was, up to a recent date, £5,221 a-year, and that by a stroke of the pen the sum had been reduced to £2,190, or by considerably more than half the amount of the salary which he had hitherto received, the amount which it was the custom to allot to him in the shape of batta having been taken away. Now, under ordinary circumstances, it was impossible for the naval commander-inchief in India to perform the duties of his station and pay the expenses which necessarily devolved upon him for a sum of less than £2,000 a-year, and whoever accepted that command under existing circumstances would in all probability be £400 or £500 a-year out of pocket in the performance of his duty to the Crown. That the naval commander should be placed in such a position could not be, he felt assured, the wish of the House. It might be said that the amount was sufficient, inasmuch as there was no difficulty in procuring officers to fill the command; but he should like to know from the Secretary to the Admiralty whether there was any truth in the ruto India as naval commanders-in-chief, feeling that their means would not enable them to undergo the expense attendant on the appointment.

Sir M. SEYMOUR bore testimony to the fact that a large reduction, such as had been stated, had taken place, and expressed a hope that the Admiralty would take the matter into their consideration.

Lord C. PAGET said it was true that an allowance, called batta money, used to be granted to all classes of officers in the navy while serving in India, but that it had been discontinued ever since the transfer of the Indian Government to the Crown. As a consequence, the position of Commander-in-Chief in India was much less advantageous and lucrative than formerly, but it should also be remembered that the circumstances of the present day were no longer the same as when batta money used to be given. At the present day the naval Commander-in-Chief in India was practically stationed in China, and was only nominally Commander-in-Chief in the former place, and on what ground, he would ask, was the Admiralty to make an allowance in lieu of that which had been taken away by the Indian Government? If on the ground of the cost of living he would only say that that cost was very high at the Cape of Good Hope, where there was an admiral, and also on the West-India station, and he could scarcely think it right, therefore, that the admiralty should select India as a favoured station, at which a higher rate of pay should be given than at others, without any sufficient reason. Such, at all events, was the principle on which the admiralty proceeded in not proposing extra allowances for the naval officer in command in India and China. It was not, he might further observe, everybody who wished to go to so remote a quarter of the world, and one or two officers to whom it was intended to offer the command had declined to accept it on the score of health-possibly, also, because of reasons connected with their private affairs. Practically, however, there had been on the part of the admiralty no difficulty in finding an officer to take the command on the China station. He might also inform his hon. and gallant friend that naval officers employed on shore in India received allowances in the same way as officers of a corresponding rank in the army.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.-JULY 7. THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA AND MOSQUES AND TEMPLES.

Mr. KINNAIRD begged to ask the Secretary of State for India what had been done by the Government of India, in pursuance of Lord Stanley's despatch of the 24th of February, 1859, on the subject of rescinding certain laws now in force in India which connect the Government of India with the special care of lands belonging to Mahomedan mosques and Hindoo temples?

Sir C. Wood said that no alteration had been made in the laws referred to, though two Bills had been introduced into the Governor-general's Council on the subject. A Bill was now before the Council, but it had not yet passed.

SETTLEMENT OF LAND (INDIA) .- INDIAN FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Mr. Smollett asked the Secretary for India whether any resolution had recently been taken to introduce a permanent settlement of land in India; and, if so, whether he would be prepared to lay upon the table of the House copy of the instructions forwarded to the Governor-general for that purpose; and, if he was prepared to fix a day for introducing his annual statement on Indian finance?

Sir C. Wood said: When the hon. gentleman brought to my notice some time ago the question of the permanent settlement of land in India, I was not able to give an answer on the subject. inasmuch as it was under the consideration of the Indian Council. I am now happy to state that they have come to the conclusion to which the hon gentleman came to long before—that duction to which he adverted, objected to go out | tem of permanent settlement of land should be | gradually introduced. I shall be happy to lay on the table the papers on the subject. With reference to the second question, I hope to be able to make the Indian financial statement on Monday next.

> PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO GENERAL SIR JAMES OUTRAM.

The friends and admirers of General Outram, to the number of nearly 1,400, in England and in India, decided a short time since upon presenting to the gallant General some tribute of their respect and esteem. They had already determined to erect a statue to him in London, and a second one in Calcutta, and to these they have now added a very splendid dessert service in silver. The presentation of the testimonial took place on Friday, the 4th, at the private residence of the gallant General, and there were present on the occasion the Duke of Argyll, Lord Lyveden, Lord Keane, Lord Harris, Sir G. Pollock, Sir R. Hamilton, Sir John Lawrence, Sir R. Vivian, Sir H. Rawlinson, Sir T. M'Mahon, Colonel Sykes, M.P., General Hancock, Captain Sherard Osborn, Mr. Willoughby, Captain Eastwick, Colonel Holland, Mr. Ricketts, Colonel Lynch, Major Gordon, General Downing, and many others. Mr. Raikes was prevented by the recent death of a very near relative from attending.

The Duke of Argyll, in presenting the testimonial, said-On behalf, Sir James, of those whose names are inscribed upon the accompanying scroll, we request your acceptance of this service of plate, forming part of a testimonial voted at public meetings held in the capitals of England and of India, to commemorate your great and good deeds, and to do honour to your worth. The names enrolled are those of men of different classes and different countries, many of whom, knowing you only by the achievements which you have bequeathed to history, admire your heroism and chivalry from a distance; while others, who have enjoyed the privilege of more intimate relations with you, and have closely observed the simplicity, the gentleness, and the manliness of your character, blend with a still higher admiration the most affectionate feelings of personal regard. Among the soldier-statesmen reared and fostered by the military system of the East India Company, you will ever hold a conspicuous place. Successful in war, you have been equally successful in peace; you have conquered hostile races alike by the vigour of your arms and the civilising influences of your humanity; and you have taught the strangers whom you have subdued, scarcely less than the comrades whom you have led to victory, to reverence and to love you as a father and a friend. By men of your stamp was our Indian empire first won; by men of your stamp has it now been preserved. earnestly hope that, whether in the front rank of the public service, or in the retirement of private life, you may long enjoy the honours you have so nobly won.

After a short pause,

General Sir James Outram said,-My Lord Duke, gentlemen, my friends,-I thank you from the bottom of my heart; I thank all, whether present or absent, in England or in India, who have united to render me this great honour. I cannot venture to think that I have done all that you say of me, but I know that, with such powers as God has given me, I have honestly tried to do it. I was reared under a system which gave to every man an equal chance of going to the front, and I owe it to that system that I am now standing before you, less, I cannot help thinking, on account of my individual deserts than as the representative of the great service, now passed into a tradition, to which for forty years I had the honour to belong. If to anything in myself I owe such success as I may have attained it is mainly to this, that throughout my career I have loved the people of India, regarded their country as my home, and made their weal my first object; and, though my last service in the field was against the comrades of my old associates, the madness of a moment has not obliterated from my mind the believe. I thank you again for your great kind-The memory of it will go with me to my ness. grave.

The service was then formally handed over to the gallant officer, who seemed much affected by the mark of respect and esteem thus offered to him. The testimonial consists of a dessert service in silver, comprising two epergnes and eight dessert stands, richly ornamented, and Indian in its general architectural features. On the base of each epergne three figures surround the stem. On one the figures represent a soldier of the 78th Highlanders, a Sikh chief, and a Bheel; on the other, an English general officer, a Persian, and a Scindian. Plantain and palm trees are introduced between the figures, and the summit is ornamented with a cut-glass basket to receive fruit. On each of four of the dessert stands there is also a figure; one represents India, a second (a Mahomedan) stands for Madras, a Parsee represents Bombay, and a Hindoo is the representative of the Bengal Presidency. The other four dessert stands are of the same style of ornamentation, but are without the figures. work has been very admirably manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, from designs and models by Mr. Archibald T. Barrett. An address, very beatifully written on illuminated vellum, and to which are appended the signatures of the subscribers, was also presented to the gallant officer, and accompanied the testimonial.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Indian Finance.-The errors which Sir C. Wood finds in the finance accounts of India for this and last year are briefly these :- In the estimate for 1861-2, presented to Parliament in May last, the probable deficit was stated at £122,189, but there was an omission of £473,324 for "loss by exchange" arising out of the rate at which the rupee is taken in the accounts with the railway companies—an omission which makes the real estimated deficit of the year just completed not £122,189, but £595,513. With regard to the budget estimate for the year 1862-63, the same item appears to be omitted; this year it may be taken at £458,333. Besides this Mr. Laing has included as part of the year's income £529,446, repaid by the Imperial treasury for charges in respect of the China expedition, and advances in India on account of the Imperial Government. These advances or payments formed no part of the annual charge of the year in which they were made, and the repayment of them can form no part of the income of the year in which it occurs. By these two corrections Mr. Laing's estimated surplus of £1,428,693 for 1862-3 is reduced to £440,914. In the face of this small surplus come his bills for surrendering Customs revenue £475,000, and income-tax £250,000, while he proposes also to increase the expenditure on public works and education by £526,453, operations which would turn the surplus into a deficit of £810,539. Sir C. Wood states in a despatch of the 9th June, written in a severe tone, that he certainly would not wish, if it were possible, to continue the taxes proposed to be abandoned, but that after these miscalculations, "the misuse of materials about which no doubt existed," it will be necessary to relinquish the intended additions to the expenditure, and to meet the then small deficit of £284,086 by further reductions; and after creating a deficit it will be, he remarks, more than ever the duty of the Indian Government to enforce in every department the strictest economy, so as to repair the mistake which has been made. It may be hoped, although it is not safe to calculate upon it, that as the revenue has recently displayed such buoyancy it may be somewhat larger than has been anticipated; and Sir C. Wood trusts that in the present, or, at all events, next year, an equilibrium may be obtained. It has been to him, he adds, a source of great satisfaction to watch the financial improvement in India; and he trusts that with the development of its resources, and with a prudent economy, a state of financial prosperity may be produced beit would be for the benefit of India that the sys- fidelity of a century, and I can still love and still yound the example of any former years.— Times.

WE understand that the steam-ship Mauritius, | belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company, sailing on the 15th inst. from Graves end for Madras and Calcutta, is one of the ships selected by her Majesty's Government for the conveyance of a portion of the troops now under orders for India.

DRAFTS ON INDIA .- The monthly supply of £300,000 bills on India, drawn by the India Council, was offered to-day for public tender in the usual manner at the Bank of England. The minimum prices declared were 1s. 114d. per rupee for bills on Calcutta, and 1s. 113d. per rupee on Bombay and Madras; but, although these show a reduction of id. from the rates declared on the last occasion, the applications within the limits amounted only to about £260,000.

SPECIE TO THE EAST .- The steamer Euxine, with the outward India and China mails, took out £134,139 in specie, of which £1,360 in gold was for Ceylon, £2,000 in gold for Madras, £2,000 in gold for Calcutta, and the remainder, £128,770 in silver, for China and the Straits.

Anglo-Australian and China Telegraph. A deputation connected with the Anglo-Australian and China Telegraph waited upon Sir Charles Wood, at the India office, concerning the establishment of telegraphic communication between India and China and India and Australia via Singapore. The deputation was introduced by the Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., and consisted of the following gentlemen: Sir Stuart Donaldson, Messrs. J. Halliday, J. B. Watson, S. M. Hyde, H. C. E. Childers, M.P., J. Ogle, T. W. Evans, M.P., R. B. Wade, Peek, T. M. Weguelin, M.P., F. Gisborne, Fleeming Jenkin, C. H. Ebden. Statements were made with reference to the subsidies already voted by the Australian, and those expected from the French Government for a line to Saigon. The proposition laid before Sir Charles Wood was that the Indian Government should give a subsidy towards the section between Singapore and Rangoon contingent on the successful working of the cable. Sir Charles Wood informed the deputation that until he was assured by the treasury that the outlying telegraphic lines from Australia to Singapore on one side, and from Hong Kong to Singapore on the other, were in a state of actual forwardness, or certain to be completed; he, as representing the Government of India, could not move in relation to the India and Singapore line. But that upon his receiving such assurance from the Imperial Government, he, as Secretary of State for India, would feel it to be his duty, either to carry out as a Government work, or to assist by subsidy or otherwise, a private company to complete the line from Rangoon to Singapore.

COLOURED EMIGRATION .- In the year 1861, 13,985 emigrants from India were landed in the Mauritius; the proportion of females was 36.6 per cent. In the West Indies more than 9,000 Indian emigrants were landed in the season 1860-61, and in the season 1861-62 11,370 more have been despatched. In the voyage to Mauritius the rate of mortality was only 1.52 per cent., but the mortality in the depôts at Calcutta was 2.22 per cent., and very much more among the hill coolies than among those from the plains. In the voyage to the West Indies in 1860-61 the mortality in the Madras ships was but 1.6 per cent., but in the Calcutta ships it was much greater-in those for Jamaica 11 per cent.; the emigration for 1861-62, so far as is known, has been more successful. Considerable difficulty has been found in obtaining Chinese emigrants. owing to ill-will caused by the late war and the opposition of the Mandarins; but 3,365 were landed in British Guiana in the season 1860-61. 144 per cent. of the adults being women; the mortality in the voyage was as high as 3:60 per cent. In the present season, 1861-62, 2,341 have sailed, with a larger proportion of women. In one ship bound for Guiana, and out 103 days, the mortality among 325 persons was equal to 234 adults, while in another with 287 emigrants, there was no death in the eighty-three days, except of one infant; it is remarked that the surgeon of this last ship was a native of China. 568 liberated Africans were landed at Mauritius last year, 1861 by the Colonial Legislature to regulate and restrict the immigration of Chinese to New South Wales. It imposes, as had been previously done in Victoria, a tax of £10 on each male native of China arriving in the colony, whether by sea or land. Chinese already in the colony are exempted from the tax on obtaining a certificate from the nearest clerk of petty sessions or gold commissioner on or before the 28th of February, 1862, It also provides that no ship shall bring Chinese into the colony in a greater proportion than one person to every ten tons of the ship's tonnage, and that certificates of naturalisation shall not in future be issued to Chinese. The Act has been left to its operation, but, as the strong objections felt by the Australian colonies to this immigration arise in great measure from its exclusively male character, it has been suggested that some modifications might be made in its provisions where the immigrants are accompanied by a proportion of women.

BAPTISM OF PARROTS .- Passing along the shore we observed at the bathing-place a man with a couple of parrots. After completing his own ablutions, he took the parrots, and one by one plunged them also into the salt water, much to their dissatisfaction. I asked why he did this. "When I was leaving home," he replied, "I thought, if bathing in the holy place will give me merit, why will it not benefit my birds, who for some sins in a previous birth have been condemned to their present condition? The merit of bathing here will advance them to a higher state of existence than their present one."—Dr. Mullens's "Brief Memorials of the Rev. A. F. Lacroix."

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via South-mpton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

Hor weather and hurricanes have apparently exercised a disagreeable hepatitic influence on the European residents in Upper India and Bengal. The news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 9th of June chiefly consists of wild rumours, greedily accepted and foolishly circulated by the local journals. Impatient of taxation, and yet conscious of their utter inability to throw off the foreign yoke by any efforts of their own, the native population eagerly seize every opportunity for decrying the power of their rulers, as if in the hope of awakening their own dormant courage. One day it is the Russians who are bearing down upon the North-west frontier, preceded by hordes of Persians, and eager to contest with Britain the supremacy of India. On the next it is the French who are about to supplant the English raj, having already foreshadowed their advent by compelling the fort at Kurrachee to salute the tricolour flag. Then it is the King of Delhi who is to rally the Mahomedans beneath the green banner of the Prophet and make his triumphal entry into the Imperial City. Or the Maharajah of Gwalior is to restore the Mahratta Confederacy, and drive the Feringhees to their ships. The vagueness and palpable impracticability of such idle expectations should be enough to disprove them, and yet we find respectable Anglo-Indian journalists dwelling upon them with unctuous alarm, and revelling in visions of battle, murder, and sudden death. All that is really true is the issue of an encyclical letter from Mecca to the Faithful in all parts of the world, enjoining them to amend their lives and prepare for the second coming of Mahomet in company with hardly be so far forgotten as to cause any hope to be entertained of the success of a second appeal to arms. It is, however, much to be regretted that our own countrymen should be so prone to panic, and so ready to assist in disseminating rumours injurious to the prestige of the English name.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, it is stated, was about to proceed to Bhaugulpore, and thence to Assam, to inquire into the labour question. In Burmah an interesting and important experiment is being instituted by Colonel Phayre, who proposes to introduce a thousand Chinese immigrants, artisans as well as agricultural labourers. Turning to the North-west it will be seen that Sir Robert Montgomery has evinced both tact and foresight in addressing himself to ascertain the requirements of the tea-planters in the district of Kangra. The proceedings in this case are more fully detailed in our editorial columns.

More fighting has taken place in China. On the 12th of May the allies carried by storm the stronghold of Tsing-poo, twenty-five miles from Shanghai; and a few days later another affair came off, in which the French admiral, Protet, is reported to have been killed. Ningpo. also, has been recovered by the united forces. but not without some loss - Lieutenant Cornewall, of H.M.'s ship Encounter, being among the slain. On the other hand, the Taepings have recaptured a portion of the town of Kah-ding, so recently wrested from them, and have gained some other successes of a less important character.

BENGAL.

IS CALCUTTA UNHEALTHY?

To Calcutta itself and to India there is no question more important than this. Putting it solely with reference to Europeans, on the answer given is involved to a large extent the progress of the country, so far as that depends on English statesmen, merchants, and mechanics. Settlers may find a good climate in the Hills. Capitalists, as they clear the soil, may create a tolerably good climate for themselves. The producers of raw material may find even on the plains that rude health which, as seen in indigo planters, astonished Mr. Ewart's Colonisation Committee. But the great majority of Europeans in the East must still reside in large cities on the deltas of rivers. Where they congregate masses of natives will gather round them as a centre, and with the rapidity which attends all growth in the tropics, cities will spring up in a few years. Thus has Howrah grown. All the appliances, all the sanitary precautions of large cities in colder climates, become necessary to a degree which even the dwellers on the Thames at London cannot understand. If these appliances are only partially enjoyed, and these precautions are altogether wanting in our Presidency cities, as they so lamentably are, great mortality must neces sarily follow. But that this mortality has been much exaggerated, that for a time Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras are comparatively as healthy as the great cities of Europe, would seem to be proved by general considerations as well as vital statistics. Anglo Indians in the three cities have advantages-some call them luxuries-which neutralise the evils of the climate. Lofty houses; the very best kinds of food and drink; sufficient work and some exercise; freedom from violent excitement; ice, punkahs, troops and of servants; the first medical skill; healthy exercise of the mind and frequent changes from place to place -all give Anglo Indians an amount of moderate enjoyment and therefore of health very different from the life they are supposed by people at home to lead. And in spite of the growing European population in the three cities, and of the consequent greater absence of sanitary advantages, the health of the English in India is periodically improving. This gratifying result is due to the great change in moral habits which has characterised Indian as well as English society during the last thirty years.

When we turn to statistics we find our expectations, based on such general considerations as these, fully realised. Dr. Hugh Macpherson has just done a service in collecting and testing with painful care the vital statistics of Calcutta during the past twenty years. His results, so far as they refer to Europeans, are unimpeachable, for he has confined himself to the registers of mortality of the various Protestant churches in the city. These books have been kept with great care, and include the deaths of much the largest proportion of the really European population of Calcutta. At the outset we are met by the fact that there is a large floating English population in the city, consisting of sailors, discharged soldiers, and others who live in poverty, vice or crime, and find a premature grave. The proportion they bear to the residents is small, yet one-half of the whole mortality is among them, while 76 in every 100 Europeans who die of cholera belong to this The enormous increase in the English class. population of Calcutta in the last ten years is a patent fact, in spite of the want of a census. Yet we find that while in the ten years ending 1850 the number of deaths registered was 3,828, in the subsequent decade it was only 4,893. But on analysing these last figures it appears that the increase of 1,065 occurred almost entirely in the last five years, and had reference to the floating population only, among whom the deaths rose from 980 to 2,195. Such was the result of the discharged men whom the breaking up of the naval brigades and the strike of the local army in 1858-59 threw upon society. The number of deaths among the resident Protestant popu- all deaths among Europeans occurs from thirty will be immediately permitted to lation, was less in 1850-60 than in 1840-50, to forty years of age, the majority of residents dulgence, and return to the Hills. of deaths among the resident Protestant popu-though the number of the residents was fully one-half more. In the first decade the deaths were 2,818, in the second 2,698. Could there be a stronger testimony to the improved and improving conditions of life in Calcutta, in spite of the want of good water and drainage, than this? Dr. Macpherson finds the causes in the greater absence of excess in living, in the better means of preserving health enjoyed by all classes, in the facilities for removing invalids to a better climate, and in the habit of sending children home at an earlier age than before. There can be no doubt, too, that the proportion of East Indians, or the class who do not visit England, is diminishing. At the top, from intermarriage, they are gradually refined away into Europeans They are not recruited as in the olden days from outside; and statistics, we believe, will show that the tendency of such a race everywhere is to die out.

When we turn to details we stumble on many interesting facts of great practical value. The same years that are fatal to natives are fatal to Europeans. Of the decade from 1840 to 1850 the year 1845 was the most unfavourable to life, and of the next decade 1858. In the last there were 590 deaths, while in 1851 there were only 375. It is found that the conditions which make an unhealthy year ore when the temperature is higher than usual, when the rains are late in setting in, when the fall of rain exceeds or comes short of the average quantity by more than a few inches, or when several months pass without any rain at all. In May, April, and March the largest proportion of deaths occurs. May is most destructive to the floating population, the cause being found in exposure to the sun; while April is most fatal to the residents, and also to the natives, from reasons which are not patent. Of all the deaths in the twenty years among residents, nearly 45 per cent. were females, a fact which shows a higher rate of mortality among that sex since the proportion of males to females is probably as three to one. Strange to say, fewest females died in April, May, and August, although the two first are months of absolutely the greatest mortality. Most died in January, February, and March. Turning to the causes of death among Protestants in Calcutta, we find cholera to be the author of one-fourth of the whole mortality, two-thirds of which, however, was among the floating population. Dysentery and diarrhoa come next. After these in order come fever, brain diseases, lung diseases; and lastly, strange to say, liver disease, which, among soldiers, occurs most frequently in men who have been from seven to fourteen years in India, and in Calcutta generally happens "in persons who had been some years resident, and who are perfectly temperate in their habits; the disease in such cases usually making its approaches in the most insidious form." Liver and brain diseases and cholera are naturally most fatal to males; lung diseases, fevers, and bowel complaints to females. In the five years ending 1860 there were only 20 deaths in childbed, an average slightly higher than in England. Quinine, which cost sixpence a grain in India in 1826, has much diminished fever. Cholera is worst in May and least in September. Bowel complaints are worst in the rains and least in the cold season. Fevers occur most in the very hot months and least in March. The general result is that, during twenty years, of every 100 Protestants who died in Calcutta 28 died in the cold, 33 in the rainy, and 39 in the hot season, a fact which removes the common impression that the rainy season is the most deadly. The truth is, September shows almost the fewest deaths, and that is a month when Europeans take the most gloomy view of life, the rains having disordered the digestive system. As to age, 1 in each in 101 deaths occurred in the first year of life, and 1 in 7 in the first two years, when there are most living children in Cal cutta. From 2 to 15 years the ratio is small, but from 15 to 20 it is 51, between 20 and 30 it is 221, and between 30 and 40 the highest point is reached, or 241 per cent. That is, one fourth of being at that period of life. Both Colonel Hannyngton and Dr. Macpherson agree that while infant life is perhaps more safe in India than in England, the difference is not extreme. We may conclude these statistics by stating that in the ten years ending 1861, of natives who committed suicide there were 275 in Calcutta, and 199 in Bombay. In the former the favourite mode is hanging, then poisoning, then throat-cutting. In Bombay the method most resorted to is naturally submersion and then poisoning. Unfortunately the native town of Calcutta contains hardly enough of water to drown a man. In France the favourite mode is submersion, then by fire-arms, while not one Bengalee suicide used fire-arms. suicides occur in the rainy season.

Dr. Macpherson's labours thus bring out the great result that Calcutta is less unhealthy for European residents than has generally been supposed. But let us not forget the floating population who so often perish uncared for. Statistics tell us that the numerous deaths among them are owing to two causes easily removable—the disgraceful state of Flag-street, which no civilised Government should tolerate, and the still more deadly condition of the river bank where ships are moored. And we trust now that Dr. Macpherson has so well pointed out the way, Government will remove that reproach against which we have been writing for years—the want of a census of at least the Christian inhabitants, and of a compulsory system of registry in the three Presidency cities .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.-Since the reorganisation of the telegraph department, which has decidedly rendered it far more efficient than it has hitherto been, we have had few, if any, complaints of the working of the lines. The regularity with which messages are now transmitted and received is in a great measure attributable to the favourable state of the atmosphere during the dry months of the year, but there is no doubt that at the same time something is due to the greater efficiency of the departmental staff.

THE RENT EVIL -- It would appear that as yet only one case has been decided by Mr. Jackson, Special Rent Commissioner in Nuddea, and not one by Mr. Campbell in Jessore. The principle insisted upon in the solitary decision yet given is one which, instead of settling the rent question, will, we believe, cause its extension over the whole of Bengal, and lead to incalculable evils to both zemindars and ryots. The principle of the decision is this-that a landholder is entitled to increase his rent in proportion to the increase in the value of the produce of his lands from any given dates. In the case decided, it was proved that the value of the produce of the lands had doubled within five years, and, the rent of the lands having been five annas per beegah five years ago, the Special Commissioner gave a decree for a rent of 10 annas per beegah. Now, it is manifest that if this is good law for a rent of 1 anna, it is good for 1 rupee per beegah, and that every zemindar, starting from the proved fact that the produce of his lands has doubled in value in five years, can now double his rents whatever they may have been five years ago; how this discovery will settle the rent question can easily be imagined. That Act X. was devised to strengthen the rvot against the zemindar there can be no possible doubt; but in the attempt to confiscate many of the proprietory rights of the zemindar, the devisers of the Act have stumbled into a difficulty for their proteges, out of which it is not easy to see a way of escape, if Mr. Jackson's judgment is upheld by the Sudder. - Englishman.

MAJOR ROWLATT, who was suspended from his appointment, has been reinstated.

THE ARTILLERY OFFICERS whose leave to the Hills and elsewhere was interrupted by the misconduct and mutinous language of some soldiers of the corps at Meerut, and who were ordered to rejoin their batteries with the least possible delay, will be immediately permitted to resume the inBengal.

THE LABARUM.—The Spectator lately gave an account of certain rupees coined in Cashmere and frequently met with in the bezaars of the Punjab, which bear as their superscription the Cross and the monogram of Christ I. H. S., as it appeared on the Labarum or sacred standard of Constantine the Great. The fact was alternately denied and asserted by several Indian journals, which led us (Friend of India) to institute such inquiries as have not only established the truth of the story but have given it a singular significance. We have before us two separate accounts, which in their most important points are substantially the same. We give in his own words that communicated by a Punjab chaplain, who has spared no effort to discover the actual facts as believed by the natives :- "I believe that the history of the 'Huree Sing' rupees or those Cashmere rupees which bear the sign of the Cross and the I. H. S. will be found on inquiry to be the following:- 'Hari Singh (or as it is usually spelt Hurree Sing) one of Runjeet Singh's bravest officers, was originally his khitmutgar, and being a bold and enterprising man was raised by him from one dignity to another till he was made Governor of Cashmere. In this office he caused the rupees in question (said to be a debased coinage) to be struck, and ordered the Cross and the Christian monogram to be impressed upon them 'for the sake of luck.' The motives which induced him to adopt these symbols are said to be these. He saw that the English succeeded in everything they did, he found the Cross and the I. H. S. on some religious work that came into his possession, he regarded these as the symbols of the English religion and thought that by adopting their symbols he would share in their prosperity. From Cashmere he was sent to hold the fort of Attok; in 1833 he took Peshawar from the Affighans, and in 1837 he was defeated and slain at Jumrood, at the mouth of the Khyber, by Mahomed Akbar Khan." The other account is this. In 1853 a learned missionary of the Church of England was in Delhi. He there had an interview with a native Christian, son of the well known Anand Masseh of Meerut, who told him several things about native princes in the Punjab, which appeared improbable. Among other statements he said that when he was tutor to the family of the Maharajah of Cashmere, that chief once consulted him as to the magical charm which the English employed, since he wished to impress it on his new coinage. The tutor had resided in Delhi six months as a student of the missionaries in 1836, and replied at one-" I. H. S. with the sign of the cross," which the Maharajah adopted. The missionary mentioned the fact as most improbable to the late Mr. John Colvin at Agra, who said " we can soon test that. I will write to John Lawrence and ask for a Cashmere rupee.' rence replied that he had never heard of the circumstance, but that he sent to the Lahore bazaar for a rupee, which he forwarded. There undoubtedly was the symbol, and not only that but a mitre with flowing fascize! The rupee was exhibted to several friends in Calcutta as a curiosity and was sent to England in 1855. Whether the ruler of Cashmere who thus adopted the symbols of Constantine was Hurree Singh or Golab Singh, the late Maharajah, the fact is undoubted and the reason no less so. The heathen prince thought he would gain the favour of the Christian's God by using their symbols .- Friend of India.

ABSURD RUMOURS.-The news from Delhi confirms a report that has had circulation in the suburbs of Calcutta for the last month or two and is universally credited by the Mahomedan population, the majority of whom are ever too ready to believe, and act upon, every absurd rumour, even to their own eventual ruin. The story above alluded to is as follows :-- "A purwannah is said to have reached the 'faithful' in Calcutta, and other parts, to the effect that some wonderful being is to rise from the dead during some festival now at hand, and under his banner all true Mussulmans are to fight against and exterminate the unbelievers; and the followers of the Prophet frain from liquors, toddy, &c., and to betake them selves to prayer, fasting and the like, as becometh those who are to engage in religious warfare."

GENERAL SHOWERS. - Letters from General Showers's head-quarters at Cheera Poonjee, in the Cossyah Hills, mention that, having completed his work in that direction, the General was about to march across the mountains, for Gowhatty or Assam, starting from Cherra on the 2nd of June. From Gowhatty the General will go up the Burrampooter and valley of Assam by steamer.

JYNTEEAH, May 26.—My latest news from camp is that General Showers and staff left Juwaie on the 22nd, en route to Shillung, to select a site for barracks for European troops, and the general has again made over the command of the district to Colonel Durnsford as a temporary arrangement; but as a wing with the head quarters of the 22nd Regiment P. I. is under orders to proceed to this place as soon as a steamer is available at the foot of the Hills for their transport, the command on his departure will devolve on Colonel Richardson, who ought never to have been superseded. His good services, with most limited means, at the commencement of the outbreak, were a guarantee that with an adequate force he would soon have brought the rebellion to a successful termination. The origin of the disturbance is well known to all; it was not the Income tax itsself, neither was it any interference with religion, but it was the oppression practised by the underlings of Government. With but one exception there is not a European Government employé who understands a word of the Cossiah language. and the Cossiahs themselves are equally ignorant of every language but their own, and as they have no written character, every case, therefore, that is brought before the Deputy Commissioner has to come through the mouth-piece of native interpreters (not always the most immaculate). They are by nature a fierce, independent race of people, and cannot understand why they should be called on to pay taxes which their fore-fathers were exempt from, nevertheless, last year they paid without a murmur, and so willingly that the native collectors thought they might venture to take another turn of the screw, and we see the result. All military operations are now at an end, and it is high time they should be, as the rains have already set in, when if they fall to the extent they had here last year (eight hundred and nineteen inches!) it will be impossible for troops, or even the aborigines, to move. I understand that General Showers before leaving Juwaie established numerous outposts to be kept up throughout the rains. This will certainly prove to be a false move, as the means of supplying them with provisions will be found difficult, if not insurmountable, for many of the streams which separate these posts from the Commissariat Department become torrents after a heavy fall of rain, and the country itself yielding nothing, there is the danger of starvation. All armed opposition ceased after the fall of Ralleang and Munsoor; many of the villagers here have returned to their homes, but whether to their allegiance or not is another question. The Commission tried the effects of severe measures some weeks ago, and condemned to death three captured rebels, who were shot secundem artem. Since then a change of policy has been commenced, and several who have been lately tried have been liberated with a lecture to "go and sin no more." The display of force exhibited throughout the country, combined with the present clemency, is, I hear, now showing its fruit in the number of women and children coming in. There have been some three or four hundred head of cattle brought into .Cherra and sold as prize property; they realised but small prices, so the captors will not make their fortunes, but the loss to those from whom they were captured will be heavy; hundreds of acres of land must remain unculti vated, and the misery and privation they must now be enduring by being driven to their koorungs will next year be exceeded by actual starvation. There are now no bodies banded together of suffi cient strength to call for military intervention. are strictly enjoined not only to hold themselves but the police are but newly embodied, and though ing and remarkable fact.—Englishman.

in readiness for this great event, but also to re- armed with muskets are not well up in the use of them. We hear of gangs of twenty or thirty armed only with bows and arrows and some few kuttrahs (or double-edged swords) going about trying to intimidate the villagers into supplying their wants, but as the well affected are prepared for such visits they are ever on the alert, and are well able to take care of themselves. A party of about forty a few days ago made a show of attacking an escort of six sepoys of the 44th returning from Munsoo to Juwaie, but the little Goorkhas were not to be intimidated or drawn into a useless expenditure of ammunition, so they waited for the Cossiahs to come to closer quarters. They had not heart for this, and contented themselves with a war dance out of range. They anticipated. no doubt, a wild volley, when, before the sepoys could load again, they would have been on them, and overpowered them by their numbers. This course, unfortunately, they tried with success some short time ago on two sepoys who were (rather imprudently, considering the state of the country) despatched with letters from Nursing to Shilliangnontong, and who, thinking to frighten the savages away by the noise of their muskets, fired at random, and before they could reload they were surrounded by Cossiahs, who, throwing themselves full length on the ground, covered their bodies with their shields, and with long swords cut at the legs of the unfortunate sepoys, and at length hacked them to pieces. The headquarters wing of the 28th Regiment N.I. is in a few days to proceed by water to Assam, under the command of Colonel Durnsford, c.B., who has been nominated to the command of the troops there. It is to be hoped that this fine regiment of Sikhs will not suffer from the climate. They are indeed a splendid body of men, such as we are not accustomed to see up here, and their appearance is said to have struck terror into the hearts of the Cossiahs, who will ever retain a lively recollection of the "red turbaned sepoys," as they term them. The General, on leaving, spoke most highly of all the officers and troops engaged .- Englishman.

Delhi, May 29 .- The Mahomedan population here is in a very excited state. They are looking for something which is to benefit them considerably to our undoing. Seditious correspondence is being carried on, some letters having been intercepted; secret meetings are held, and if opportunity offered, the budmashes of the city would be but too happy to avail themselves of it. They have been allowed to make a good thing of the last rebellion, have lived for the last five years upon the loot they obtained then; and having by this time expended it, they are waiting for another chance to get more. Coupled with these rumours a very daring robbery was committed on the night of the 27th. The surgeon of H.M's. 82nd was robbed of his revolver (loaded) and sword, the former being under his pillow, the latter near it. His watch, chain, &c., were all left, so that the object of the thieves or thief was evidently arms. The robber has not been traced, but a bearer and two punkah coolies are in custody, as they must certainly have connived at the robbery. All these things taken together serve to show that there is ample reason for the establishment of precautionary measures; the first noticeable change is the European troops going about with side arms, and I hope other precautions are being taken to prevent surprise, and to protect life and property. Brigadier Christie left a night or two ago for Simla, very unwell, and his place is supplied by Colonel Abbott of the artillery, an officer of long standing and experience, who will, doubtless do all that is necessary in case of emer-The weather has been very mild of late: gency. we had three days of clouds and a high south westerly wind three days ago, but they had cleared off without affording more than a few drops of rain; there has, however, been a good fall in the district, and this has given us a little cooler weather than we generally experience on the 29th of May. We are, as is generally the case in the hot weather, very dull, but it is gratifying to add that the station is particularly healthy, which, considering the abundant fruit season, is a pleas-

NYNEE TAL, May 27 .- Some time ago Mr. Edmonstone administered a very severe reproof to Messrs. Edwards and Gubbins for the part they took in reopening, for Rajah Deo Narain Singh of Benares, a case which had long previously been disposed of by the Government of India. In former years there were in the possession of the family of Deo Narain Singh certain estates which became forfeited to Government, and almost from that time till the present efforts have been constantly making by some one member or other of the family for their recovery. Of all the petitions presented with this object, not one was even calculated to achieve success, for the simple reason that no excuse could be offered for the acts which brought about the deprivation of the estates sought to be recovered. In the present instance, however, Rajah Deo Narain Singh contrived to enlist in his behalf the services of two members of the Government of the North-west Provinces, Messrs. Gubbins and Edwards, and by their means he contrived not only to get placed before the Government a petition, which under any other cir cumstances would have been immediately rejected, but likewise to obtain their advocacy. In forwarding the petition to Mr. Edmonstone, both these gentlemen backed its prayer emphatically, not alone as an act of justice to the rajah, but as he would pay to the Government for the forfeited Talooks whatever amount the Government received from them, as a measure of expediency, and one which would bear a character for gene rosity at no cost to the State. The conduct of both these gentlemen appeared so reprehensible to Mr. Edmonstone, that he did not he sitate to characterise their conduct as highly unbecoming in servants of the Government. This censure Messrs. Gubbins and Edwards have done their utmost to get withdrawn, and as a last resource they laid their complaint before the Viceroy. His opinion has just been made known to the Government of the North-West Provinces, by whom it is to be communicated to the petitioners. It is certainly not favourable to them, for the Governor-general has concurred entirely with Mr. Edmonstone's view of their conduct, and decides that the reproof given was in every way deserved. While confirming Mr. Edmonstone's reproof to Messrs. Gubbins and Edwards, his lordship acknowledged in high terms the character and abilities of the Rajah, observing that, though he cannot now permit of the re-opening of a case long since decided, he fully appreciates the services which the Rajah has from time to time rendered to the State. The Hon. Mr. Edmonstone will, in all probability, not return to the seat of Government in the North-West, The climate of Allahabad is so unfavourable to his constitution that his medical attendants have advised that, should his continued residence in the hills not be compatible with the duties of his office, he must return to England for a season, prior to resuming duties which necessitate a residence in the plains.—Englishman.

KATMANDOO, May 30 .- A question has arisen here out of the surrender of an alleged British subject by the Deputy Commissioner of Gondah, in Oudh, to the Nepaulese authorities, on their making a demand for his extradition, as to what length of residence in British territory carries with it naturalization. On the circumstance be-coming known to the Resident he interfered on his behalf and procured his release. Jung Bahadoor then represented to Colonel Ramsay that the man in question was a native of Nepaul: he had been born in the country of Nepaulese parents. Under these circumstances, as the Resident had claimed him as a British subject, he wished to know what length of residence within British territory of a subject of another power qualifies the individual to claim the protection of the British Government as a subject of that Government, and in the case of a British subject moving into a native State in like manner, what length of residence would justify him or enable him to throw off his alle giance to the Crown and enroll himself as a subject of the native Potentate, in whose territories he had taken up his residence. To this Colonel whatever within the dominion of a foreign power enabled a British subject to throw off his natural allegiance to the Crown. That during such residence he must of necessity subject himself to the laws of the country in which he voluntarily resides, and must be bound by all laws and regulations passed for the guidance of foreigners. That a subject of the Nepaulese or any native State taking up his residence within British territory made for himself a claim protection of that Government by virtue of allegiance he was bound to pay the local to it. That while so residing the vernment of his native State could not claim his extradition for any political or civil offence. He could be claimed for punishment under the laws he had outraged. But to make the claim upon his person valid the crime must be proved to have been perpetrated within the territories of the Government demanding his deportation, that the local allegiance due to the British Government by foreigners residing within British India ceased with their voluntary removal therefrom. With regard to the individual in question, a mistake had been made first by the Nepaulese Government in making a claim for the delivery into its hands of an individual who had placed himself under British protection, and in return for which he yielded a local allegiance; and, secondly, by the British officer who had exceeded the powers vested in him in delivering to a foreign Government a pro. tem. British subject.-Englishman.

GORRUCKPORE, May 31. — The Nepaulese zemindars are very troublesome, and have caused us a great deal of annovance of late. The boundary between the British and Nepaul territory has been marked distinctly enough. Pillars have been erected, and the jungle has been cleared to the width of a few feet, that is to say the tall trees have been felled, which affords a demarcation distinct enough in all conscience. You would think that this would be sufficient to enable these zemindars to distinguish between British and Nepaul soil, but not they; they persistently cross this, and have of late claimed as their boundary a road running parallel with it, but distant some two or three miles to the south of the true line. Warnings have proved of no avail, and no sooner have the confines of their estates on the British frontier been defined and marked out, than they deliberately efface the same and recommence their entrenchment. The assistant-collector of Gorruckpore has now been directed to cause the erection of additional boundary pillars, sufficient to admit of one being clearly perceptible from the others, on either side of it; and this done, any zemindar entrenching within British territory will be cited before the Nepaul Durbar by the British resident at Katmandoo. As this measure is, I am told, determined on, it may have the desired effect. but it would have been much better had the Government retained the Terai in its own possession. Until lately any one that pleased could go and shoot in the Gorruckpore Terai, but for some reason or other all Government officers are now forbidden to cross the Nepaul frontier for the purpose of hunting or shooting without previous permission having been obtained from the durbar through the resident at Katmandoo. Report has it that when Jung Bahadoor was in the Terai he fell in with some British officers who were at the time on a sporting expedition, and that on his invitation they joined him in a general battue, and so completely took the shine out of him, "wiping his eye" on every occasion, that he determined for the future to keep his game preserves" to himself; and with this object, and to debar the British in the frontier from interfering with his sport, he placed himself in communication with Colonel Ramsay. By him he was told that the Government would certainly instruct its own officers not to cross the frontier, however unfavourably it might view any such demand from a friendly Power, but that, as regarded British subjects not in Government employ, so long as there was peace between Great Britain and Nepaul no such prohibition jact of the native Potentate, in whose territories could be enforced. The end of all this will be had taken up his residence. To this Colonel Ramsay replied, that no residence of any period so numerous in the Terai that all who now Assam.

cultivate lands therein will be driven from their holdings, to say nothing of the mischief which will be done to their crops by the wild hog deer and neil ghi. This prohibition has done no good, and only causes Jung Bahadoor to be viewed from any but a favourable light.—Englishman.

Lucknow, May 31.—Great efforts have been making here for some time past for the establishment of a soldiers' club, but some how, notwithstanding the exertions of many good men and true, whose hearts were in the undertaking, the subscription list languished and there appeared no hope of success. At length, however, it was suggested that a general meeting of the entire community of Lucknow should be held in the Chutter Munzil. People seemed to like the idea; it would enable some to make themselves conspicuous, either by their ability, ignorance, or absurdity, and of what was of perhaps more importance still, would enable each to parade himself to public gaze. Hence, then, the success of the meeting and of the object with which it was devised. The scheme had now assumed a tangible form; a committee has been formed; subscriptions were solicited and obtained, and life given to the undertaking. This achieved, no time was lost in applying to the local Government for assistance, and the officiating Chief Commissioner warmly responded. He at once placed at the committee's disposal a contribution of Rs. 4,000 from the Choongee Fund of the city, and undertook to apply to the Government of India for its sanction to additional contributions being made in furtherance of the object in view, from other local funds at the disposal of Government. Chief Commissioner himself has, from the first highly approved of the efforts made to bring about the establishment of so every way desirable an institution, and has left nothing undone which lay within his province to ensure success to the undertaking.—Englishman.

SUMBULPORE. - Mr. Armstrong, the Superintending Engineer of Cuttack, has made a tour of discovery through Sumbulpore and the Gurjat country, through which the Mahanuddy flows to the Bay of Bengal. The district abounds in rich iron ore; copper is to be found; and above all, from three localities three different varieties of limestone were obtained, one being that pure light grey stone which is in Ireland so valuable for building purposes as well as for making hydraulic lime. The province, watered as it is by the Mahanuddy, is a great outlet for the cotton and oil-seeds of Nagpore. The construction of roads has been sanctioned for fifty-eight miles from Sumbulpore to Chunderpore, from Sohela to the same place, and from Sohela to the Tonk river, while the navigation of the Mahanuddy will be improved. Next season the road from Chanderpore will probably be continued on the one side to the frontier of the Madras Presidency, and on another to the old Nagpore boundary. After a petty rebellion continued for five years, the Soorunder Sahi, the ringleader, has only now surrendered. The country has been added to the Central Provinces, and has a great future before it.

MR. W. SETON-KARR, having been appointed an extra judge of the Sudder Court, previous te the creation of the New High Court of which Sir C. Wood has appointed him a judge, has resigned his seat in the Bengal Legislative Council.

MR. CAIRN, Inspector of Schools, has been appointed censor of the native press in the Northwest Provinces, with special instructions, according to the Englishman, to suppress the obscene publications which have recently been circulated there. If his action is confined to enforcing the Act on the subject, which missionaries and all good Vernacular scholars ought to do, he will do good. But Government should be careful not to shut up the vent for opinion which native newspapers allow, however treasonable some of them may be.

MR. BEADON.-His Honour the Lieutenantgovernor of Bengal was to leave Calcutta for Bhaugulpore on the 23rd June, and intends from thence shortly to proceed on a tour of inquiry to

THE MEERUT MUTINEER .- The proceedings of | the Meerut court martial on the gunner who attempted to imitate the "strike" of 1859, appear in general orders. The soldier said in presence of a lieutenant—"I enlisted in the Honorable East India Company's service; it was after read out to me on parade that all my former indulgences and privileges would be granted; not obtaining them, I am entitled to a free discharge." The Court sentenced him to two years' imprisonment, and then to be discharged with ignominy. Sir Hugh Rose, in confirming the sentence says, "This claim for a free discharge is simply a fraudulent attempt to obtain a passage and rations home at the Government expense, leisure for his amusement, and meeting with friends and relatives in England, and then power to enlist and receive a fresh bounty in the regiment and station of his choice. It is disgraceful that a soldier should repudiate the conditions of service which he has voluntarily undertaken, and refuse to perform the services for which he has received a bounty. It is disgraceful to claim a free discharge to which he has not a vestige of right, with a latent view of obtaining a fresh bounty and other advantages."

MAJOR C. V. JENKINS.—In the nominations and postings to three new cavalry regiments to the British line, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has appointed Major C. V. Jenkins, of the late 1st European Light Cavalry, to the command of H.M.'s 19th Hussars. Major Jenkins is an excellent officer, and his services run through most of our great campaigns in India during the last twenty years.

LABOUR IN ASSAM .- Some official papers on the vexed question of coolie labour in Assam appear in the Gazette supplement. The tea planters and Major Bivar, Deputy Commissioner of Luckimpore, the frontier district of Assam, complain that the Public Works Department has suddenly doubled the wages of labourers, raising them to four annas a-day. Were that department to use public money in seducing away from the planters the coolies they have imported, there would be good reason for complaint. But it appears that the department has employed very few labourers, and these indigenous to the country. There is no injury here to private interests and much good will be done to the people. . We agree with Mr. Beadon. "The result which has followed the introduction of capital into Bengal must inevitably attend the introduction of capital into Assam, and wages must rise, independent altogether of the action of Government." At the same time the Lieutenant Governor declares that Government is bound " to facilitate the introduction of labourers into Assam from other parts of India where labour is cheaper; and not only to encourage immigration through private agency, but to take direct action in the matter so far as the requirements of the public service demand it. This has already been done to a certain extent."

Cow KILLING .- During the late sitting of the Legislative Council in Calcutta, one of the members, a native of high rank and caste, prepared the draft of a Bill prohibiting the killing of cows at the four most holy cities in India, viz., Juggernaut, Benares, Muttra, and Bindrabun. He showed the draft to another native member of the Council, and asked him to second the proposal. The person spoken to replied that he being himself a Brahmin could not be supposed to be a friend to cow killing; but that he must decline to second the proposal on two grounds; first, he thought the time was gone by when there was any chance of such a Bill being carried, and, secondly, he considered that a Bill prohibiting the slaughter of cows at the four places mentioned would be tentamount to admitting that cows might lawfully be killed at all other places, an admission not to be thought of without a shudder. On this the framer of the draft tore it up, and the matter ended .- Madras Times.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT .- The Friend of India notices the introduction, after nine years' administration, of State schools into Nagpore. Mr. C. A. R. Browning, B.A., is appointed Inspector of Schools in the Central Provinces. His first duty will be to create schools, for none exist received no State aid. Mr. Medlicot, of the Geological Survey, will, it is said, be made an Inspector in Bengal. As he has not passed the Bengali examination, the selection is likely to excite discontent in a department which already considers itself wronged by the appointment of outsiders of no marked ability.

Affghan News. - According to the Delhi Gazette news letter, the Ameer of Cabul had arrived at Kelat-i-Ghilzie on the 11th May. Three Persians, disguised as merchants, were said to have reached Candahar, and to have attempted to induce the Ameer's followers there to desert. The want of provisions had produced the usual oppression of the shopkeepers. Affghan justice seems to punish insanity with death, and drunkenness in the following manner:-A drunken trooper was found in the bazaar and taken before the Governor, who first ordered him to be beaten, then a hole to be made in his nose, and a string to be tied in it. He was taken through the city with a tom-tom proclaiming that any one who would get drunk would be punished in the same manner. We believe Dost Mahomed's and Sultan Jan's forces are still looking at each other across the Khausrod river, and that a compromise is certain.

HURBICANE AT SEALKOTE .- From 6 A.M., of Tuesday, the 13th May, it commenced to blow fresh from the East and North-East; by 10 A.M. it blew much stronger, and the air was filled with yellow dust. By 11 A.M. so thickly pervaded was the air with dust, the wind increasing in force gradually, that lamps and candles had to be lighted; it blew harder and harder, and got murkier and murkier, all day, till a little after four it became much darker, and by half-past four it was as dark and black as the darkest night; there was a strange lurid appearance in the heavens towards the West and South, and through the dense medium of the dusty cloud that veiled the earth it appeared as if the heavens above were on fire. It was impossible not to feel awed by this most unusual and grand aspect of the heavens; there was hardly any light at all, but such as there was was like the reflected light of a huge conflagration. The wind was blowing a gale from the North by this time, half-past four. The darkness was now at its height, when the wind lulled; the roaring ceased, and a dead silence prevailed, broken by occasional peals of distant thunder. A few not very vivid flashes of lightning made the darkness more visible. It then began to clear up in the West, and became rapidly lighter and lighter, and then down came a shower of rain, succeeded by a rattling hailstorm, and all was over-and we had a delicious cold evening; many trees were blown down, and it is feared all the fruit on the trees, except the grapes, which were too small, are ruined. We have had pleasantly cool weather ever since, and punkahs and tattees are still unused at Sealkote, and the weather keeps so steadily cool that before the 1st of June it is not likely we shall have any heat to speak of .- Delhi Gazette.

GULLILAND V. GRAY .- The Calcutta Supreme Court has decreed Rs. 1.000 as damages to William Gulliland, engineer of the Calcutta and Burmah Steam Company's vessel Coringa, for assault and false imprisonment at the instance of Gray, the captain. The engineer declined to proceed to sea with what he considered and what was afterwards allowed to be insufficient "hands" in the engine room. At the instance of the captain he was arrested and handcuffed. Sir B. Peacock, in giving judgment, said :- "This is the case of a gentleman, who, for expressing what turns out to be a correct opinion, is handcuffed, taken out of the ship by the police, marched through the streets, and confined for the night in a common cell at the station."

CYCLONE IN CASHMERE.—The predicted cyclone, which deluged Sealkote, seems to have visited Cashmere also on the 13th May, and to have reached Oudh on the 14th. A writer in the Mofussilite says :- " Heavy clouds varying in colour form a deep blue, to the lightest tinge of yellow, accompanied with electricity, covered the whole valley, making it so dark at three P.M. that lights except those of the missionaries who have hitherto had to be used in houses with open doors and windows. During the night a good quantity of rain fell, and next morning it snowed for three hours, covering the hills and plain with wintery night cap, and reducing the thermometer to 33 deg. outside of a house, at a height of 5,200 feet above the sea. The river Vedusta or Jhelum had risen eight feet above its original level, threatening to flood the whole of the low ground in the valley. The oldest inhabitants do not remember ever having heard of snow having fallen here so late in the season." The people were greatly frightened.

PRECEDENCE.—The revised list of officers entitled to the private entrée into Government House, published among the Civil Orders, is worthy of remark as upsetting the rules of precedence previously in vogue. After the Lieute-nant governor of Bengal, the Chief Justice and Lord Bishop-three great heads of separate establishments - come the Commander-in Chief and members of the Executive Council. Members of the Bengal Council stand above general officers.

THE LATE JUDGE-ADVOCATE-GENERAL .- Major G. C. Hatch, with the official rank of Lieutenantcolonel, has been appointed to succeed the late Colonel K. Young as Judge-advocate-general. In a general order the Commander-in-Chief announces the colonel's death, and feels assured that the officers of the army will, with himself, lament the loss of this old and valuable public servant, who has so long conducted the important duties of the department over which he presided with credit to himself and advantage to the ser-

HYDERABAD AND THE DECCAN.

It is a noteworthy but by no means wonderful fact, that while our Hindoo feudatory princes were never more contented, the conduct of their Mussulman brethren towards her Majesty's Government was never less satisfactory. The last of the Mogul dynasty dreams away the few remaining months of his life in a state of fatuous senility. Of the three most distinguished puppets of Delhi the Nawab Vizier of Oude lives in inglorious sensuality within the shadow of the Viceroy's palace, and the Nawab Nazim of Bengal has been banished from the Viceroy's presence for twelve months for insults offered to her Majesty, and for the most unblushing attempts to bribe her representative at Moorshedabad. The third, the Nizam of Hyderabad, represents a family whose good fortune it has been never fairly to oppose the English. Surrounded on all sides by opposing races, by the Mahrattas, the Mussulmans of Mysore and the English, the Nizam has always been shut up, as it were, to alliance with us. This fact, doubtless, has induced the present ruler, even as it led his father, to heap up upon the English name and English officers a series of petty insults which cannot longer be tolerated. The Nawab of Oudh and the Nazim of Moorshe dabad are contemptible because powerless. The Nazim of Hyderabad is the occupant of a city and the ruler of a country in which treason and crime are hatched with impunity, and where thousands of armed robbers not only despoil the poor and slay the innocent, but threaten the peace of the Deccan and the quiet of the whole Mussulman population of India. The danger is Salar Jung is a Sheeah, his master and the great Mysore and Coorg are not included increased by the silent opposition of our resident, majority of the Hyderabad nobles are Soonees. number of planters should be stated.

Col. C. Davidson, to the orders of the Government of India.

The Nizam, like all his fellow feudatories, was bound on the fall of Delhi to transfer his allegiance to the Queen, who took the place of the Mogul emperor. Instead of this, his demeanour towards the British Government has become more insolent than ever. He refused, and has been allowed to persist in the refusal, to appear like his brother feudatories before the Viceroy in durbar, lest he should seem to do homage to a Sovereign whom he considers his equal. When, notwithstanding this, the insignia of the Star of India were despatched to him in Hyderabad, he long declined to receive what he considered a badge of subjection. Yet, such was the culpable weakness of the Resident, that he assured the Nizam the chain of the order was worn by Kings and Queens. When, after much diplomatic manœuvring, the Nizam on this ground consented to receive the insignia, a durbar was summoned at a few hours' notice, and there this Mussulman noble behaved in such a way as to show that he intended to confer a favour on her Majesty. But this was venial compared with the degradation English officers were compelled to submit to. In full durbar, before the sneering Mussulmans of the court, sat or rather lay, the Queen's representative on a slightly elevated dais, while the Nizam sat on his throne, all the English officers, with shoes off, What a spectacle! sitting around en tailleur. What a spectacle! We can hardly believe the fact to be true, or being true, that the Government of India did not call the Resident to account.

Were this all, it would be trifling in itself, how ever. But it is conduct like this, and Colonel Davidson's refusal to obey the orders of the Government of India in the matter of Berar, for which he was so severely censured by Lord Canning and the Secretary of State, which makes such conspiracies possible as that serious plot in Hyderabad, from which only Providence has delivered us. Its author, Rao Sahib, the nephew of the Nana, awaits his trial in Agra. The full magnitude of the danger is now before us. For no less than six months was this man in Hyderabad, distributing his money freely among the 30,000 Rohillas there. It was arranged that they were to rise, murder the British officers and troops, attack the Nizam in his palace, and upset the English power throughout the Deccan. For two years, it is said, Rao Sahib and his agents have been attempting to seduce the Madras troops and native contingents in the Deccan, and yet even Salar Jung was unaware of the fact. Whatever may have been the nature or objects of the conspiracy, this much is certain, that it was widely ramified. The few discontented spirits still in the country, and their prompters in Nepal and Mecca, disappointed in the rebellion in Northern India, still hope to succeed in the Deccan.

It becomes unfortunately necessary for our Government to keep their eye on Hyderabad, to support Salar Jung, and morally to coerce the Nizam into due subjection. This will never be done by a Resident who has already proved so unfit to maintain the British prestige there as to have been twice severely reprimanded from Calcutta and Westminister. Hyderabad has a traditional dislike to the English, none the less that it has always been forced to be at peace with us. The late Nizam was a bigoted hater of the "Feringhee." He could scarcely force himself to be civil even to the British Resident. His principal secret advisers, both male and female, were of the same complexion, and it required all the tact and cunning of the late Vizier, Suraj-ul-Mulkh, to prevent his master from irretrievably committing himself with the Supreme Government. The present Vizier, Salar Jung, on proposing any measure of reform, fi nancial or otherwise, was generally repulsed by the old prince with—"Thou art a boy and an adherent of the Feringhees." The present Nizam has still his father's evil counsellors at his elbow. Government has not forgotten Budan Khan, a wretch whom for his fiend-like atrocities we once forced the Nizam to banish, but he returned.

The three most formidable military classes in the Deccan are the Arabs, the Rohillas, and the The interests of the first are closely bound up with the retention of their present position as the most reliable adherents, the most wealthy subjects, and the chief creditors of the native Court. We do not believe that even the prospect of receiving the enormous debt due to them would detach them from their pledged fidelity. The Rohillas are pure mercenaries. As Afghans they dislike and despise all Hindustani Mussulmans, including the inhabitants of Robilcund, whom they regard as Hinduized and degenerate descendants of their Patan forefathers, and they abhor the Arabs, with whom they have frequently been brought into bloody conflicts. The Rohillas are said to number from nine to ten thousand men, and would cheerfully enter the British service on sepoys' pay or a little more if sure of permanent conployment. The Sikhs are not only mercenaries and brave ones in the service of various chiefs and zemindars, but they also form a large colony. Their principal post, Nandair, is strongly fortified after the native fashion, and contains all their wealth, which is reported to be enormous. They are said to muster about eight thousand men, all of whom are animated by the old Khalsa hatred of their Mahommedan oppressors. These also would gladly take service with us. It must be borne in mind that in case of disturbances in the Daccan, the Robillas and Sikhs must and will fight either for or against us. Both have a blood feud with the Mahommedans of the Contingent. These men must be used or they will sooner or later annoy us. Let us absorb them into our native army or even police corps and at once free the land of hungry locusts, our provinces of per-petual fear, and the whole empire of a source of danger which may seem tritling now, but cannot remain tritling always .- Friend of India.

MADRAS RAILWAYS .- The first complete section of Lord Dalhousie's triangular trunk railway system, from Madras to Beypore, was opened throughout on 12th May. For the convenience of Cochin, the line is to be extended south to Trichoor, the native State making over the magnificent bridge just constructed at Shooranoor, together with the land required. The Cockin Courier recommends the route from Trichoor through Shallacoody to Alwaye, and thence to Arnacollum in the Rajah's territory. This course may appear a little more circuitous on the map, but it will be found less encumbered with engineering difficulties than any other. The only large crossings are at Shallacoody and Alwaye. The Guicowar of Baroda, Sindia, and the Nizam have talked of extensions of the railway into their territories. We trust the Rajah of Cochin will Installation of Mr. Fisher .- The Cochin Courier says that the credentials of Mr. Fisher as British resident were presented to the Rajah of Cochin, in public durbar, at three P.M. on Tuesday, the 6th May. Several of the officials of our Government and private gentlemen from the town of Cochin were in attendance. After the usual interchange of expressions of amity and friendship the letter of Sir William Denison was presented in due form, and read to the audience by the Dewan.

THE REV. MR. WALLIS .- The Madras Times relates a distressing attempt at suicide on the part of the Rev. Mr. Wallis, chaplain of Thyetmyoo. He was regarded as a man of eccentric manners. and evidently disposed to personal quarrels. He endeavoured to terminate his life by exploding gunpowder at the side of his head. He was then placed under a guard, but managed to elude the sentry and jumped down a wall thirty feet deep, with about five feet of water. Assistance was brought, but he strove strenuously to resist it and to keep his head under water. Mr. Wallis has been sent down to Rangoon in charge of an officer and a strong guard. He is a man of considerable scholarship and literary ability. His eccentricities have long doomed him to the "penal" stations of British Burmah.

Waning Superstition.—A Madras paper notes it as a sign of the times that a minority of the punchayet who regulate the affairs of the wellknown pagoda at Trivalore, in Tanjore, decided not to move the great car on the occasion of the annual festival. The majority prevailed, but for six weeks the great car has stood, after being decorated as usual, ready for the procession. The musicians, priests, and vestals are in attendance, but no one comes to lend a hand to move the huge fabric. The time for the festival has passed. but efforts are still being made to induce the villagers to come in and do something for the honour of the old faith. In Serampore the crowds who flock to the famous Juggernat cars have much diminished of late. The same is true of the Pooree Juggernat, and of all festivals in India which are not associated with markets, like the melus on the Ganges, &c.

MADRAS.—With its people sunk in the sleep of political apathy, and its Government in the coldness of political death, Madras might as well be blotted out of the map of India. What little energy is left under the regime of a trifler centres in the club, the only institution which even pretends to live. The city looks to the stranger like one of those enchanted castles in which a drowsy slumber has settled down on the inhabitants, doomed never to awake till the trumpet of some knight-errant like Sir Charles Trevelyan breaks the spell. Shut out from all questions of local interest more important that the examination of a school or a Hindoo plan for a municipality, so leaden is the dulness that the unfortunate residents do not turn to imperial subjects. Even the Budget excites little more remark than is made by a dreamer who for a moment awakes to consciousness and then turns on his side more forgetful than ever. Mairas is too poor to care for the removal of a tax of which it pays so little. The completion of the railway to Beypore, opening out as it does new mountain ranges and waste lands of virgin fertility, and bringing the city so many hours nearer England, passes without much zemark. There is a Council in which representa-tives of the outside public have seats, but the speakers are inaudible, the reports unintelligible, and the community accordingly indifferent. It requires an effort to laugh, and so the residents of this Sleepy Hollow are not even amused at a legislature which certainly is a fit object of mirth, if not a subject of grave discussion. We turn from the general public to the professions, but in vain. Lawyers, we are told, find their occupation gone, since the decay of the great native families. The ornament of the local bar, it is said, thinks of seeking a career in Calcutta. The merchants sit lazily at their desks and hope for better times. As to the officials they were always easy going. The Civil Service is so limited always easy going. in numbers, and the men of mark are so few, that gossip is never at a loss in filling up the great appointments as they fall vacant. Mr. Morehead's time in Council is up in October, if his health will allow him to remain so long, and Mr. Pyeroft will succeed him, Mr. Arbuthnot becoming chief secretary. Mr. Powell has left the Presidency College, and will no doubt make an admirable Director of Public Instruction. The question. who is to become Principal of a College?—is the most exciting in Madras. Such is the result of an administration, the first year of which has proved it to be the most contemptible in the his- commissioner of Arracan. Major Ardagh here, neither evil nor good, and he is surrounded by a staff who carry out this policy with unflagging zeal. Perhaps the twenty-two millions get on quite as well without any government, and the English population of Madras find sleep not disagreeable, for they never protest against it. But thirty thousand pounds a year is too much to pay for a Governor, Staff, and Council who do nothing, and the first of whom seems incapable of doing anything .- Friend of India.

"THE LITTLE MOUNT FEAST."-The Madras Athenœum describes the profane mummeries still indulged in by the degraded St. Thomas's Christians of Madras, on the Saint's festival known as the "Little Mount Feast." The native boatmen and low Portuguese assemble in crowds on the occasion, and make offerings of wax and tinsel, copper and silver coin, to the priest who mumbles forth the service, while " cast away drummers and fifers" play such tunes as "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and the tomtoms are employed as during the Mohurrum. The most disgraceful revelries are indulged in during the night, and the more religiously inclined visit St. Thomas's cave. " It is carved out of solid rock, and tradition represents it to be the retreat of St. Thomas from the lawless pursuit of his persecutors. It may be so, but when it is alleged, as a fact to be venerated, that the hole, which in itself is not large enough to admit the genteel exit of General Tom Thumb. is the outlet by which the Apostle effected his escape, even ignorance gapes in astonishment and credulity shakes its head. Something like the mark of a footstep-slip in mud is traced on a piece of solid granite, and this the believers vouch is the print of the false step the Saint made in his flight; and a little higher up, a cleft in a rock is said to be the effect of Saint Thomas' spear : he was thirsty, sought for drink, and the stony rock produced a gushing fountain!" It seems that respectable people, Protestants as well as Papists, swell the crowd of vagabonds.

RANGOON, May 31.—The rains are down upon us in earnest at last. We have been expecting them daily for a month past; but though we have had occasional heavy falls, we have only within the last ten days been able to congratulate ourselves on having seen the last of the hot weather. With a view to the encouragement of the immigration of Chinese, both from China and the Straits Settlement, Colonel Phayre has intimated his intention of introducing, so soon as circumstances will admit, about 1,000 Chinese cultivators, with a due proportion of mechanics of skill sufficient to construct all the agricultural implements that may require to be of home manufacture. He gives each man a free passage, and on his arrival in the locality in which his services are required, provides him with a grant of land free of rent for a certain term. He likewise, that the want of the capital requisite to ensure success may not be felt, proposes to make an advance of a sufficient sum of money to enable each immigrant to provide himself with a Burmese wife and the necessary household goods and chattels, agricultural implements and cattle. In a country so sparingly populated as Burmah, this measure is to bring about highly satisfactory calculated results. The Chinese colony will be established in a part of the country where they will not interfere with any of the innumerable imaginary rights to the pre-occupation of the soil by Burmese, Talins, and Karins; they will be dependent on their own exertions entirely, and as they are for the most part an active energetic race they will speedily be at home in their newly adopted country. As Chinese immigrants from China are not permitted to take their wives with them from the Celestial Empire, their inter-marriage with the Burmese is a not unnatural result, and is certainly a highly beneficial one, for the children born of Burmese women by Chinese fathers are scarcely inferior in physique to their sires, and seldom, if ever, imbibe from their mothers the lethargic habits of the Burmese race. Speculation is still rife here as to who will succeed Major Verner as tory of even Madras. Sir W. Denison will do and Tickell at Moulmein, are rather sanguine that each will be the chosen man, but for my part I believe Major Daniel Brown, a man junior to both, of undoubted ability and great firmness, and a great favourite of the chief commissioner, will be the man selected for the appointment. The draft act for the foundation of the Recorder's Court has been drawn up by Dr. Clarke, the present Judicial Deputy Commissioner and future Recorder of Rangoon .- Englishman.

SALAR JUNG'S BODY GUARD. - The Deccan Herald says that from the perilous position of Salar Jung, a body guard of 500 men is being organised in the Nizam's dominions-not one of whom is to be under 5 feet 6 inches in height. They are to be equipped after the fashion of the English Horse Guards, and are expected to eclipse all the cavalry in India. Not long before the mutiny, this able minister was besieved a whole week in his house by the Nizam's Arabs, because he had sentenced to death one of their number who had been guilty of murder. The Arabs took advantage of an entertainment given by Salar Jung to the English officers, in his city residence, and invested the house. The minister was forced to yield, and merely banished the murderer beyond the Hyderabad frontier. Hyderabad is the most dangerous city in the East for a foreigner.

AN INDIAN TAIPING,-As yet India has been singularly free from such mixtures of heathenism and Christianity as the Taiping system is in China; but at Christianagram, near Cape Comorin, a Shanar impostor, professing to renounce devilworship and in reality abandoning idols, has declared that he is divinely inspired-nay, is himself a deity, and his followers believe him. They assert the obligation of a day of rest, and pretend to observe the Sunday in common with Christians; and while abjuring all sacrificial worship. profess that instruction and prayer "are the only constituents of true worship," though dancing and singing appear to be the only equivalents for these with them.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A LAUDATORY MINUTE. Our Paper publishes a minute by Sir Bartle Frere, concurred in by Lord Canning and his colleagues, in which the late Commissioner of Sind expresses his sense of the services of Mr. Neville Warren, the resident agent, and Mr. John Brunton, the chief engineer, for having completed the line in the face of very great difficulties, within three years from the commencement. These gentlemen took charge of the works along the entire line of 112 miles, when abandoned by the contractor, Mr. Bray, who embarked for England without notice, leaving daily wages, &c., unpaid to the amount of more than 125,000 rupees.

A NARROW ESCAPE .- A distressing accident lately occurred to three gentlemen who were ascending the Bhore Ghaut in a bullock gharry. When about half-way up the ghaut the bullocks backed over a precipice, and the gharry fell to a depth of at least a hundred feet. There were three persons in the gharry, one of whom got his leg broken; and Mr. Le Souef, the gold discoverer, was also very dangerously hurt. The other passenger, a Parsee, came off nearly scatheless. This accident should be a warning to Government to have embankments built on this dangerous ghaut. It will be months before Mr. Le Souef will be able to resume his duties; he was taken to the house of his cousin, Colonel Lucas, commandant of artillery in Kirkee, where he now

BOMBAY RAILWAYS .- The Bombay Gazette states that the first step has been taken towards giving to Bombay adequate station accommodation for its railway business. The Elphinstone Land Company has commenced to reclaim the sea beach at Mazagon, and thus prepare a site for the merchandise depôt of the G. I. P. Railway. The Bombay railways should exercise foresight in all their arrangements. They will have to provide accommodation for the traffic of all western, central, and southern India when the railway system is MADAGASCAR.-The London Society have ordained six additional missionaries for Madagascar, besides the two veterans already there, Ellis and Le Brun. The whole island promises to be soon christianised. The Christians are active, energetic, and grateful for their wonderful deliverance and have greatly increased in numbers since the accession of King Radama to the throne. Letters from the capital state that the King had walked at the head of a large procession of Christians from a palace in the suburbs to his residence in the city, and that, at his request, the Christians sung all the way. The Commander-in-chief is also very favourable; he has given the Christians a house near his own for a chapel. The King has ordered schools to be established, as soon as teachers can be provided, in all the villages in which schools were opened by the late King. He has abolished the ordeal by Tangena. He has made it a rule that all who appear before him shall do so in Eu ropean clothes. He has encouraged the study of English to the utmost extent, having made it the diplomatic language of his Government. In this respect the people share fully in his preference.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, May 27.

The principal event during the last fortnight has been the fall of Ningpo to the allied arms, after an occupation of five months by the Taeping rebels. The train of incidents which immediately led to the late hostilities was this: Some of these blackguard Europeans sent into the country for the rebel chief, Fan, to return to his post at Ningpo, despatching for his use a houseboat replete with European comforts. Fan duly arrived, to the delight of his people, who gave him a salute of honour; but their guns were shotted, and some people on our side of the river were killed. At the same time the rebels continued to amuse their leisure by firing in the direction of her Majesty's ship Ringdove. Mr. Consul Frederick Harvey, whose energy and discretion at Ningpo from first to last are beyond all praise, took steps to put a stop to this, in consequence of which the Encounter arrived with demands from the ad mirals for an ample apology and the removal of the offending battery. These demands were sneered at. The rebels said they did not fear us; we might come on when we liked; we should soon find out which was the cock and which was the hen. Meantime a body of Imperialists after taking Chin-hae, advanced up to Ningpo with a view of besieging and assaulting it; the rebels were told that we should certainly not interfere so long as they did not fire on us. On Saturday, the 10th inst., at 10 A.M., without the slightest provocation, they sent a volley of musketry into the Encounter. This was the signal for a general action, and shot and shell were poured into the city for five hours. After this the walls were scaled and the city taken. So Ningpo becomes again a consular port, to the great sorrow of dealers in arms, and, it is said, of foreign missionaries. Poor Lieut. Cornewall, of the Encounter, who was first to scale the walls, was shot dead by English arms and bullets; and at his funeral one of the rebel chiefs called Luh-sin-lan, who was rescued by the missionaries, came to the cere-mony under their auspices. Mr. Consul Harvey, on seeing this worthy in the cemetery at the funeral of one of her Majesty's officers just killed by the rebels, said, "Why, what is this? That scoundrel Luh-sin-lan at this funeral!" "Yes, poor dear fellow," said a missionary in reply. Capt. Dew, on his attention being called to Luh sin-lan's presence, under the chaperonage of his friends the missionaries, was disgusted beyond speech. It was certainly in the worst possible taste for the reverend gentlemen to forget the common proprieties so grossly.

The rebels are in full retreat on Yu-Yaou and Shuauhing-foo, having left any amount of property in Ningpo. All sorts of idle and malicious rumours are afloat as to the state of the city under the new régime, but it is premature to expect perfect order. We believe the actual casus belli was a statement by the rebels that they intended to exercise jurisdiction in Keang Pih, the foreign settlement, and that our consul had no right to the place, and must be deposed. As it has happened, the Imperial authorities have been re-installed in Ningpo by Mr. Frederick Harvey, her Majesty's consul, and the gates of the city occupied by foreign soldiers. Two of the rebel chiefs are reported to be seriously wounded, one of them fatally. The Taepings, in their hurried flight, have saved no arms, treasure, ammunition, or provisions. The Imperial authorities have paid an official visit to the British consulate, and expressed to her Majesty's consul their gratitude for the recovery of the city.

From Shanghai we learn that Admiral Protet died on Sunday morning, the 18th inst., from the effects of wounds received the previous day. This seems to imply an encounter with the rebels on the 17th, of which only rumours have reached us; the Admiral is said to have attacked a stronghold of body of 400 marines. The place was ultimately The Admiral died shortly after being taken. shot. His body was brought to Shanghai in the Fee-long, his Imperial Majesty's despatch steamer. The last fight with the rebels of which we have accounts was at Tsing-poo, a walled city twentyfive miles from Shanghai, which the Allies took before breakfast on the morning of the 12th inst., after two hours' hard firing with various descriptions of artillery, including Armstrong guns. The loss, as usual, has been trifling, not worth enumerating evidently, for it is not alluded to in the accounts of the affair. The usual gaiety prevailed among those engaged in the capture. The chief difficulty appears to have consisted in moving the crdnance up to the scene of action, but it was most creditably surmounted by the exertions of all concerned. Captain Bradshaw, of the Royal artillery, died, we are sorry to report, on his way back to Shanghai; he had previously been reported sick. The admiral accompanied the expedition, having recovered from the effects of a wound received at Lu-kakong. It must be confessed that our operations against the Taepings are being conducted with eminent vigour and success. So far as can be learned, very many of those in the Taeping ranks are ready to desert at the first opportunity. A well-directed blow against the chiefs would do much to break up the present rebel force, which is still powerful for mischief. We regret to record the death of the Rev. John Hobson, who has been chaplain at Shanghai for the last fourteen years. He is greatly and deservedly mourned by those who reside in the settlement, and by a large circle of friends in China and Japan. The price of land in Shanghai has risen enormously of late, owing to the security for life and property which exists in the neighbourhood of foreigners.

Later accounts speak of the rebels as not to be permanently driven back. The Daily Commercial Shipping List of May 21 says:-" We imagined after the capture of Wong-ka-dza, Nang-hsiang, Kah-ding, and the several rebel posts to the westward of us, that we had driven them from those strongholds permanently. Such appears not to be the case. A large body of Taepings made their appearance in the neighbourhood of Kah-ding on Saturday, attacked the Imperial camp near there, and, it is said, killed a large number of Imperialists. At Kah-ding it will be remembered that Major Taylor, with a company of the 5th Bombay N. L. I., had garrisoned that post, and reports came from thence that the rebels intended to attack it. Yesterday an increase of the 5th was sent out, besides detachments of the 31st and the 67th. Well-authenticated reports have been received that a body of rebels was marching towards Woosung; our military authorities were on the qui vive. On inquiry it was ascertained that some four thousand or five thousand rebels had attacked an Imperial post near Paoshun, where the French had a mounted gun, which the insurgents seized on, the wretched Imperialists deserting their post, but which was retaken by our gallant Allies, though the odds against them were immense. It is reported, also, that the body of rebels now making towards Shanghai are led on by the famous Chung-wang, or fighting king amongst the Taepings, who lost his son at the storming of Siaou-dong. It would appear that this rebel warrior intends to retrieve the losses sustained by the followers of himself and the Tien Wang or Heavenly King, so that there is more work to be done in clearing our northern environs of these marauders than we supposed. It is rumoured that the Chung-Wang is strengthening Soo-Chow in the expectation of being attacked there, and he is reported to have said that, should the foreigners come near that city, they will meet them with an overwhelming force. We hear of victories obtained by the allied expedition on the east bank of the Wong-poo, but the details are not clear enough for publication. Kah-ding, on our western flank, has been reinforced by some three hundred troops from Shanghai.

At Japan, and in the northern ports of Chins, all is quiet; but there is no news of importance to revers on the Pootung side of the river, and received the fatal wound as he was leading on a China Mail.

BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF. SEIZING CATTLE FOR THE COMMISSABIAT.

Head Qrs., Octacamund, June 2.—No. 58.—An instance having recently occurred of an officer in charge of a detachment en route from Secunderabad to the Mount having unnecessarily sent a sergeant and some sepoys into the town of Ongole for the purpose of seizing bullocks required for the use of the detachment, the C. in C. calls the particular attention of officers to the irregularity of such pro-

2. The exercise of illegal power on the above occasion resulted in both officer and men being justly convicted and fined by the civil authorities of the district.

3. An appeal was made to the C. in C. for a re sion of the fine imposed on the sepoy, on the ground that he merely acted up to the orders of his superior; but it is shown by the record on the trial that the sergeant and the sepoy in question exceeded their

4. In order to obviate as far as possible a recurrence of these irregularities, the C. in C. is pleased to direct, should circumstances in future necessitate any demand for cattle or other supplies on the line of march, that a formal application be made to the nearest civil authorities for what may be required; and should any detriment arise to the public service nearest civil authorities for what may be required; and should any detriment arise to the public service in consequence of neglect or inattention on the part of the subordinates of the civil power, or any other well founded cause of complaint exist, the matter should be represented for the information of the C. in C. and Government. But officers commanding detachments proceeding on ordinary duty, for whose supply en route the civil authorities shall have already been communicated with, must distinctly understand that they are not at liberty either to press cattle for public or private purposes or to seize articles of supply by force.

5. The officer commanding a detachment is responsible for the conduct of all under his command, and violence or excess of any kind against the inhabitants of the districts through which the troops may pass, must be carefully guarded against. The practice of sending armed men into villages, except for the preservation of order, and on the application of the civil authorities themselves, is altogether objectionable, and must forthwith be discontinued.

jectionable, and must forthwith be discontinued.

6. Officers for the command of such detachments should be selected with special reference to their fitness for such duty. They are to be supplied by officers commanding stations from which detached, with written instructions on the points referred to in this order, and warned that serious notice will be taken of any infringement on their part of the rules now setablished for their ruidence. now established for their guidance.

No. 54.—Under the orders of Govt., G.O.C.C. dated March 19, No. 33, directing that the first abstract for pension of the widows of commissioned and warrant officers shall be supported by a certificate of admission to the benefits of Lord Clive's Fund is canc.

TEA-PLANTING IN THE KANGRA DISTRICT.

With that just appreciation of the real interests of the country which from the first has characterised the British administration of the Punjab, the Local Government has placed itself in direct communication with the European settlers in the valley of Kangra. At present there are eleven tea plantations in that district, embracing a total area of 6,097 acres, of which, however, only 396 have as yet been brought under cultivation. Various difficulties appear to have impeded the progress of the English speculators, arising partly from the jealousy of the native zemindars and partly from the novelty of their undertaking. But fully sensible of the importance of attracting European enterprise and capital into the Punjab, the Lieutenant-governor instructed Mr. P. H. Egerton, Deputy-commissioner of Kangra, to make a special report upon the position and prospects of the tea-planters in his district, and to ascertain in what manner the Government could "equitably assist them and further their views." That active and intelligent officer went straight to the point, and at once invited the planters themselves to make known their complaints and suggestions. The latter lost no time in complying with this acceptable invitation, and in submitting their grievances to the favourable consideration of "the authorities." Their statement may be divided into thirteen heads, each containing a grievance and embodying a demand. the first place they ask that "the decision of Government affirming the title of the village communities to the waste lands included within their boundaries at the time of the regular Settlement be reconsidered." With this request his Honour declines to comply, as "these lands were marked out, mapped, and registered as the property of the village communities under the same forms which constitute the official title deeds of all other lands in the country." the renewal of the Settlement, eighteen years hence, it may be possible to deduct so much of the waste land as may be proved to be in excess of the actual wants of the village; and in the mean time Mr. Egerton is desired to open a negotiation with the zemindars in the hope of inducing them "to give up all claim to a portion of their forest lands or grazing lands in excess of their wants, in lieu of the remission of all Government claim on the remainder." The motive for this recommendation is, that genuine forest lands are the best suited for the growth of tea. Then the planters protest against so long a period as three months being allowed for bringing forward objections to the sale of land to a European, and the Lieutenant-governor agrees to reduce it to one month. The third demand requires the abolition of the right of pre-emption in the coparceners of a village, and his Honour consents to this where the right is not inherent, as happens in some cases in that district. Fourthly, the memorialists obtain the recognition of their title to succeed to all the landed rights of a vendor which a native would acquire by purchase, unless any rights may have been specially reserved at the time of sale. They also gain their fifth point, the exemption from any charge for trees standing upon their lands which they may cut down in preparing the waste for cultivation. An annual provision, moreover, is to be made in the budget for the construction of roads and bridges, and a Postoffice is to be established, even at a loss, at Holta. A judicial officer is, further, to be deputed once a month for the settlement of all cases in which Europeans are concerned, and waste lands purchased at auction in 1859 are to be looked upon as coming under the terms of the Resolution of the late Viceroy in Council regarding the sale of such lands. tenth head arose from a misapprehension. The planters imagined that they were debarred from procuring lime from Bowarnah, whereas the only restriction was upon the cutting of saul and other valuable timber for the purpose of lime-burning. In the next place, the settlers ask that "the dissent of a small minority of co-sharers be not allowed to bar the sale of their common land agreed to by the majority;' but here again the Lieutenant-governor declines to interfere with the ancient rights and customs of the village communities. They then object to the distribution of tea-seeds gratuitously to the natives, on account of the latter selling instead of planting them, and this objection is met by his Honour's recommendation to make no more presents of seed to any one, but to sell to all alike. Finally, they claim permission to open water-cuts from running streams to irrigate their plantations in seasons of drought. This request is also conceded, provided suitable arrangements be made with their native neighbours so as not to interfere with their rice lands. Few, we think, will be prepared to deny that the line taken by the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab contrasts most favourably with the conduct of the late Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, and that the best possible course has been pursued for promoting concord and community of interests between the European settlers and the original inhabitants.

MISSIONARY LIFE IN INDIA.

An extremely interesting, and at the same time faithful, picture of missionary life in India is given in the recently published memoirs of the late Rev. Alphonse François Lacroix.* Though by birth a Swiss, Mr. Lacroix was sent out to India by the Netherlands Missionary Society, and commenced the active labours of life at Chinsurah in the spring of 1821. A few years afterwards that station was made over to the English Government, and the Dutch missionaries joined the London Missionary Society, with whose representatives they had previously lived on the most cordial and friendly terms. At that time proselytism had made but little progress among the natives. The number of converts in Bengal did not exceed 2,000, and of these many were Christians only in name. Indeed, it required a strong conviction and no ordinary degree of moral courage to face the persecution that awaited seceders from Hinduism. At the village of Rammakalchoke, a few miles to the south of Calcutta, a considerable number both of men and women were moved by the exhortations of Mr. Trawin, and one Ramjee Pramanik, a ryot of some substance, actually destroyed a small family temple dedicated to Siva, in order to make room for a place of Christian worship. For this and similar acts the helpless villagers were confined in the zemindars' prisons, beaten, insulted, and fined, their houses plundered, their little stores of seed and grain carried off, their fish-ponds netted, and their fruit trees levelled with the ground. One was murdered, and others severely injured by bludgeons and sword-cuts. Nevertheless, for a time they remained stanch to the new faith, until the novelty of the thing wore off, and then they gradually grew lukewarm, and finally fell away altogether. Mr. Lacroix himself, with characteristic truthfulness warned the directors of the society not to attach undue importance to the movement that had been started in Rammakalchoke and the adjacent villages. At the time when he joined Mr. Ray in the superintendence of that district about eighty adults, with their children, had been baptised, and a few more were on probation. Hundreds of people, however, would gather together to listen to the new doctrines of peace and brotherly love expounded by the missionaries, but probably more from idle curiosity than from any heartfelt appreciation of their faultless ethics. Seated in rows upon the ground, beneath the hospitable shade of a peepul or tamarind tree, they would listen with patient interest to the simple Scripture stories related and explained in their own language, and with admirable temper and courtesy entered into earnest discussions with the missionaries, who on their part appear to have displayed equal tact, good humour, and readiness of reply. On one occasion.

"Mr. Mundy had been preaching to a large assembly beneath the branches of a spreading tr; when an old Brahmin, who had not been at all pleased with the people's attention, asked in a querulous tone, what was the use of merely talking to the people; they were all poor; why did not the padrido something sensible by relieving their wants? 'Very true,' replied Mr. Mundy, 'it is right to assist the destitute, and as you, Brahmin, have no hat, here take mine.' And suiting the action to the word, in a moment, without giving him time to object, Mr. Mundy put his old hat on the Brahmin's head, and pressed it down. The latter, horrified and discomfited, made off amid the laughter of the people, who were greatly delighted at the sight."

At another time Mr. Lacroix had been

At another time Mr. Lacroix had been arguing with a man on the subject of Pantheism:—

"The man was very stubborn, and would receive nothing advanced against his favourite views. Mr. Lacroix therefore said he would argue no more; and, before the congregation, suddenly seized the man's umbrella, and began walking out of the chapel. The man called after him, and said 'Sir, that is my umbrella!' 'Your umbrella, do you say? Have you not declared that Brahm is everything; that he is you and I, and all these people? How, then, can there be such a thing as mine, yours? The umbrella is mine as much as it is yours on your own showing.' The people laughed; the man was silenced, and left the place without another word."

During one of his itinerancies Mr. Lacroix and a colleague arrived at a village about an hour before dark, and found the boys of an | climate tend to enfeeble the nerves and inindigenous school squatted beneath a large tree. occupied in writing on palm and plaintain leaves. A fair sprinkling of the neighbours were assembled around them, and among them two Brahmins who affected to look down upon the missionaries as unlettered and ignorant men. To remove this unfavourable impression Mr. Lacroix asked the schoolmaster if he could work any sum in arithmetic that he choose to dictate. The other replying in the affirmative the missionary gave him a somewhat difficult problem, in which he entirely broke down, though assisted by the two supercilious Brahmins. Mr. Lacroix then took a leaf and rapidly worked out the sum in their presence, while the people murmured, "Ah, what clever and learned Sahibs have come to-day," and listened with great respect to their subsequent discourse. Only once was he subjected to personal violence, and that he turned to excellent account. He had been preaching in a small chapel in Calcutta when a Hindu fanatic aimed a terrible blow at him with a thick stick from behind. At that moment he happened to turn slightly round, so that the blow fell only on his shoulder. The congregation instantly secured the ruffian and began calling for the police. Calming their indignation Mr. Lacroix told the man that his religion taught him to forgive his enemies, and therefore he freely pardoned him for the wrong he had attempted to do. The simple-minded Hindus were deeply moved by this unexpected magnamimity, and at once burst into a loud shout: "Victory, victory to Jesus Christ!" The eagerness with which the poorer classes, whether villagers or townspeople, crowded round the missionaries for tracts and portions of Scripture is one of the most hopeful signs for the future. In fact, several instances are recorded in this pleasant volume of good fruits being produced from the seed thus scattered at hazard. The actual professors of Christianity might be few in number, but very many were weaned from idolatry and brought to see the beauty of a holier life than had ever before been conceived in their imagination. The process of reclaiming so many millions of degraded and sensual natives from revolting habits and a senseless superstition must necessarily be almost imperceptible, but it is at least advancing, and will do so with greatly accelerated rapidity each succeeding generation. It is sad to think that the most formidable opposition encountered by Mr. Lacroix and his colleagues was from Christians-the Baptists being the first to offend, though not to the same extent as the Roman Catholic missionaries, who applied themselves far more zealously to enticing proselvtes from the Protestant fold than to the conversion of idolators. With the natives generally personal appearance and individual force of character exercise an influence too lightly estimated by missionary societies at home. Mr. Lacroix, who himself possessed a commanding figure and a powerful voice, particularly insisted that " none but men of robust frames and unimpaired constitutions should be sent to India." "We want men," he goes on to say, "of the stamp of our four Scottish brethren in Calcutta, who are all six feet in height, and robust in proportion. The in height, and robust in proportion. The work they go through is amazing; they certain stateme time it is finished. Then the preacher stands up and proceeds with his discourse. He announces no text; but merely stating that he will describe a story taken from the Word of God, he proceeds to relate it, and the letter appeared to be a reply to certain stateme in the Salurday Review. He had written to Ch for all the explanations that could be obtained the subject, but he had a strong conviction to the word of God, he proceeds to relate it, and the letter was a series of gross exaggerations.

duce languor and apathy, but almost everything depends upon the preacher's power to arrest the attention of his thoughless, indolent hearers, and compel them to give him a patient audience. This will be better understood by a reference to the method in which Indian missionary preaching is conducted, especially in Calcutta. We shall not, therefore, make any apology for the length of the extract with which we take leave of Dr. Mullens' delightful memorials of his justlyrevered relative, and which will be read with intense interest by all who value at their true worth a thorough abnegation of self, an entire devotedness to the welfare, temporal and spiritual, of others, and unfaultering earnestness of purpose.

"They are rather primitive structures, being only a superior kind of hut; but they provide convenient space for the hearers, comfortable seats, and a roof over head to shelter them. Let us look into one of the very best in Calcuta—the chapel of the General Assembly, at Cornwallis, square. It stands at a Assembly, at Cornwallis-square. It stands at a corner where two great thoroughfares cross each other, and is a conspicuous object; it is about thirty feet square, and about fifteen feet high; on the roadside are a number of brick pillurs bearing the roof, which from the four sides slopes upward to a point, and is also supported by thick wooden posts which rise from the centre of the floor; the roof is covered with small round tiles; and in many places the plaster is eaten from the pillars and from the two inner walls in patches by the saltpetre which rises freely from the foundations. The floor is tiled; there are no windows, and neither glass nor frames, whether for window or door, appear in the whole place. The doors are large frames of bamboo and mat: are to the openings between the pillars; and can be entirely removed, leaving therefore two sides of the place almost open. A small railed platform, a foot high, with a book-board in front, stands against the back wall; and in front of it and on both are long benches for the accommodation of the hearers, which do not possess the luxury of backs. On the whole it seems a place fit for the instruction of a respectable ragged school. Look at the place at sunset, the time most favourable for gathering a native congregation. The streets are full of people who have finished their day's work and are going home; and they pass along the great thoroughfares near the chapel in an endless stream. Small groups of artisans, in their soiled dresses follow each other in rapid succession: then comes a little knot of clerks, in whiter clothes, making their way from the public offices. Individuals pass rapidly: coolies carrying burdens; creaking carts laden with bags of rice or bales of cloth; a man with a load of wood on his head; a few house servants; a messenger with on in head; a new nouse servants; a messenger with letters, having a broad badge round his waiet; with many others of various employments and pursuits hasten on their way. The chapel is now lighted with numerous lanterns, hung from the roof or upon its supporting posts, and with two lamps specially bright close to the desk; and the whole would look gay and attractive, were it not for the cobwebs among the rathers of the roof and the generally dusty appearance by which the place is marked. The missionary arrives perhaps alone, perhaps with a younger colleague or a native preacher, and enters the place. He has nothing specially clerical about him. No congregation is waiting his appearance. It is not even as in the London theatres on the Sabbath, where hundreds unaccustomed to hear and with devout attention, aware that it is to that word they will now listen. There is actually no one in with aevoit attention, aware that it is to that work they will now listen. There is actually no one in the place. Yet, like some unpopular preacher in Europe, the missionary is used to it; and, unlike such a one, is not discouraged, and proceeds to receive the transfer of the true risk. such a one, is not discouraged, and proceeds to remedy what is wanting. The junior of the two missionaries stands up in the desk, and proceeds to read, in a clear loud voice, a portion of the Bible. Let it be a parable, the story of one of the miracles, the ten commandments, or Paul's sermon at Athens. This last passage, by the way, is never to be fully understood, except in a heathen city, surrounded by twenty temples, and by groups of devotees, who are either presenting their offerings of fruit and flowers, or prostrate before the idel in their prayers. Someor prostrate before the idol in their prayers. times, though rarely, no one comes in during the reading; and, though the reader continues, the streets may remain deserted, and the desired congregation fail to appear. Generally it happens that during the reading one comes in, then another; and fill up all details of time, place, and circumstances fill up all details of time, place, and circumstance, as if his hearers had never heard such a thing before. He expounds, illustrates by stories and incidents, argues, explains, enforces. The hearers listen with attention; sometimes one will object, and he must be wisely silenced till the end, or his objection skilfully woven into the thread of the discourse, and answered. If they are interested, they will remain, and at a stabling arguments a pointed story or a answered. If they are interested, they will remain, and at a striking argument, a pointed story, or a good-humoured exposure of the gods, they will laugh with pleasure, or say, 'Capital!' If not interested, they will go away after a few minutes, and others come: these also go after a time, and others take their places: and so there is a perpetual current. of change going on through the whole service. A wise missionary will be careful to repeat the essential principle of his discourse three or four times as he goes on; so that all who come may understand the subject he is seeking to enforce, and safely carry it away. At times, with an earnest, impressive sermon, a large portion of the congregation will remain the entire time. Mr. Lacroix usually preached about three quarters of an hour. The sermon concluded, a short prayer is offered; and then the people gather a short player is other equal to the the people gather round the preacher to receive his tracts and Gospels. Thus goes on the preaching of the gospel to the Hindus day by day: unsatisfactory, indeed, in its constant change of forgetful hearers; but pleasant in the fact, that even idolators hear something of the love of Christ, and that a few hear to life eternal. love of Christ, and that a few hear to life eternal. The congregations are always different: perhaps a few individuals, wishing to learn about Christianity, may appear again and again at the same place: and often has it been found, that among the chance visitors at these chapels were men from distant villages, who, among other results of a trip to the chief city of India, have carried away to their homes some knowledge and some books descripting of that some knowledge and some books descriptive of that religion of Jesus of which they had already heard."

INDIAN FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Sir C. Wood said it might be convenient if he were to state that he would postpone his financial statement until Thursday next. Mr. Laing had come home, and was anxious to have an opportunity of making all necessary explanations, and in order that there might be time for that purpose he (Sir C. Wood) had consented to defer his statement.

Mr. VANSITTART inquired whether Mr. Laing's answer to the right hon, gentleman's last despatch would be laid upon the table before the discussion of the Indian Budget.

Sir C. Wood said it was in order to enable Mr. Laing to give such explanations as were in his power that he was postponing his statement.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE inquired whether the inform ation which Mr. Laing might give would be laid upon the table before the discussion.

Sir C. Wood said that he had no objection that the papers should be laid upon the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS .- JULY 11. THE TAEPINGS.

Lord Burghley asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, whether his attention had been drawn to the accounts which had appeared in the public journals of the horrible atrocities alleged to have been perpetrated by the Chinese upon the Taeping prisoners who had been given up for execution into the hands of the Mandarins by the English and French authorities; and whether the Government had received any official intelligence on the subject.

Mr. LAYARD said his attention had been called by his hon, friend the member for Aberdeen to a letter without date, which appeared in an Indian paper, and which did not state where the alleged events took place. The letter was anonymous, nor was there any clue whatever to its writer. The letter appeared to him to bear internal evidence of being untrue, or, at all events, to have grossly exaggerated the facts. That part of the letter which referred to the English prisoners who fell into the hands of the Chinese was entirely untrue, and he trusted that the rest was equally false. He felt confident that no Englishman would be a party in any way to the barbarous executions which were alleged to have taken place. The letter appeared to be a reply to certain statements in the Saturday Review. He had written to China for all the explanations that could be obtained on the subject, but he had a strong conviction that mished, £3. Se.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 23; ex, on cloth, in a case, 22. 13s. 6d.; or, with rollers and variabled, 23. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to reader it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1863.
"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is 'horoughly conversent with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1863.

miner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner.

Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1863.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operation performances.

A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1863.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not menus to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wiltfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capainnumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies: and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible rantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the discuses of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin s

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood. Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse."—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horsefiesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsefiesh is their may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manuar for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and sullering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

PROSPECTUS.

The inadequacy of existing hotel accommodation at Scarborough to the yearly increasing demand has been long felt by frequenters of that favourite watering-place, and so notorious is the fact that, in the height of the sesson, it is not by any means a rare occurrence to hear of people, otherwise intending to visit Scarborough, being deterred from doing so. The first object of this Company is, therefore, to meet an acknowledged requirement by the erection of a large and beautiful Hotel in a central and commanding position.

The Hotel will comprise spacious entrance hall, arranged as a conservatory, elegant reception, drawing, coffee and diming rooms, in which table d'hotes will be daily held, library, reading, music, and ball rooms; thirty-two elegant suites of private apartments, approached by a private entrance, the windows of the sitting rooms opening upon beautiful garden terraces overlooking the sea; nearly three hundred bed-rooms, with bath-rooms and other conveniences; large billiard and smoking rooms, electric telegraph and post-office; machinery for lifting luguage to the different storcys; a travelling chamber for rasing invalids to their particular floor; hot-water apparatus for heating the hotel, and preserving an even and agreeable temperature during the winter months; carriages—indeed, everything that can contribute to the comfort or satisfy the caprices of the most fastidious.

The second object of this Company is to set apart a suite of attractive rooms on the ground-most of the hotel for the purposes of a club; residents, on becoming members, to pay a fixed annual subscription, and visitors a monthly or quarterly payment, subject to rules to be framed by a Committee upon principles similar to those governing kindred institutions at Bath and other places of Inshionable resort.

The population of Scarborough having increased upwards of 50 per cent. since the census taken in 1851, and a large proportion of the residents and inhabitants of the immediate neighbourhood, consisting of gentlemen of indep meighbourhood, consisting of gentlemen of independent means, to whom there are to add the thousands of nobibity and gentry who annually visit Scarborough, for whom there are the resists no such institution, it is at once apparent that the carrying out of this object will prove a fruitful source of revenue.

The third object of the Company is the erection of a row of houses and shops at the foot of the cliff, with a south-east aspect to the sea, in close proximity to the most frequented part of the sands; this being a class of property which readily lets at highly remunerative and increasing rentals, and for which there is an almost unumited demand.

The site secured for carrying out these purposes is one of the finest in Europe. It is the east side of St. Nicholas Cliff, consisting of two acres of land sloping towards the German Ocean, to which it possesses a frontage of nearly 400 feet. It is protected from the morth winds by the bold promontory or rock upon which stand the walls and runs of the ancient Castle, forming, with Saint Mary's Church, the old Town and the Harbour at the foot, beautiful objects in the seenery to the north. To the south and south-east it commands anniterrupted views of the Cliff Bridge, Spa Promenade, and South Cliff Waiks—the crowded resort of the fashionable during the Scarborough season—of the Esplanade, of the Sainds and Sea, and of the picturesque series of hills, cliffs and bays to Filey Bridge and Famborough flead. On the land or west ade may be seen Lord Londesborough's summer residence and the beautifully wooded valley to Oliver's Mount. To these attractions may be added the incalculable advantage to invalide and lovers of case that the proposed site is in the very centre of and upon the same level with every place of public and fashionable resort, and that thus these toisome ascents and descents daily involved in a residence in some parts of Scarborough are alto ether avoided.

It must, therefore, be obvious that the buildings erected on a site so invaluable in a prospinous months only, in each year. As, however, by the observations of scientific men, confirmed by the Registrar-General's returns, it is an established fact that the temperature of Scarborough is singularly equable, and in winter ten degrees higher than in London—there being also this further advantage, that the wind in autumn is generally westerly, with remarkable a sence of fog and heavy falls of rain—it follows that Scarborough possesses peculiar auvantages as an autumn and winter residence. Indeed, the scason at Scarborough las been for some years extending into the autumn and winter months, by county and other families taking up there residence there; and as the facts that produce this, and the peculiar attractions of the proposed hotel become more widely known, and the artificial amusements of the place are increased and prolonged, there is every probability that, instead of a sx months', a steady nine or ten months' custom at the hotel, and a proportionate increase in the shaleholders' dividends, may be reasonably counted on.

Extract from the Globe of Friday, July 4th, 1862.

Scarborough Hotel. Company.—That the old system of hotel-keeping is doomed is evident by the rapid strides which the French and American habit of living in large establishments is making among us; and the good dividends the Great Western and other edifices of a similar nature pay lead to the erection, in places where there is may natural or fashionable attraction, of hotels of a like character. Among them that of Scarborough, judging from the plans, will take a very high rank. The capital is nearly all taken up; and the directors are very sanguine of the entire success of their Company.

The Scarborough Cliff Hotel Court Journal of July 5th, 1862.

The Scarborough Cliff Hotel Court Journal of July 5th, 1862.

The Scarborough which Level has haded down to posterity in the pages of Panck. have doubtless experienced all the annoyances which the old-fashioned lodgings and hotels have entailed upon them, even when they could get accommodation within their bare walls, and will be glad to learn that a remely has at length been provided for them by the above company. By the side of the new hotel, as proposed, even the Great Western must quail, and the Greatenro look to its laurels. A more exquisite design we have never seen, and the locals is unique in point of attraction. The accommodation will be all that is required, and in union with the increased requirements of the age, while the proprietory will bear the strictest investigation for all the attributes of the office; and we have no doubt that, when completed, the hotel will become one of the wonders of the North.

Applications for shares, the deposit thereon having been first paid to one of the Company's Bankers, to be addressed to either of the Solicitors; to the Brokers; to Mr. W. B. Hindle, Park-row, Leeds; or to Mr. Edward Fairbank, Huntriss-row, Scarborough, of whom may be had, free on application; lithographs of the proposed building.

No further applications for Shares can be received after Monday, the 28th inst., for London, and 29th inst. for country.

If no shares are allotted to applicant, the deposit will be repaid to him without deduction. Interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum will be allowed upon all moneya peid in advance of calls, and on all fully paid-up shares, until the hotel is opened.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

So unimportant is the news received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of June, that we can find nothing more interesting than a violent dispute between two highly respectable journals as to Lord Elgin's disapproval or encouragement of horse-racing. According to the one paper his lordship has instituted "a crusade" against that manly pastime, while the other triumphantly refers "our crazy contemporary" to the prospectus of the Calcutta Races for the coming season, wherein it is stated that on the third day of the first meeting a race will be run for the Governor-General's purse of Rs. 1,000. The local correspondent, "who so often 'sells' our contempordent, "who so often sells our contemporary" is further informed that if he will "walk past Government House any evening about the sunset hour he will see a string of very promising racing stock being walked in the compound thereof; and in the early morning some of the same being galloped on the Maidan under Lord Elgin's very nose, with his own 'mestar of the horse' locking on the Maidan under Lord Elgin's very nose, with his own 'master of the horse' looking on with critical eye at their performances, the horses being the property of the aides-de-camp of the Viceroy." It is also gratifying to learn that "the Viceroy's hospitality and unfailing to the workers wake his frequent. bonhommie make his frequent evening parties, private concerts, and the like, a source of thorough enjoyment to the wide circle admitted to them."

The unfortunate residents in the Upper Provinces, for whom science has not yet sufficiently annihilated time and space to permit their presence at these delightful teaparties at Government House, have been indulging in excitement of a far less pleasurable nature. On the anniversary of the Eed it was expected that every European would "get up with his throat cut"—to use a comical expression of the late Lord Metcalfe. The day passed, however, without detriment to life or limb, and the panic appears to have subsided as rapidly as it arose, and with quite as little reason. In some stations the conduct of our fellow-countrymen was totally unworthy of the national character, nor was it at all calculated to impress the natives with any very exalted notion of our moral superiority.

From Affghanistan there is no very definite intelligence. The two hostile armies have approached within fighting distance, and a rumour was affect that a battle had actually been fought. If it be true that Sultan Ahmed Jan's forces are nothing better that an undisciplined rabble, victory may be expected to fall to the Ameer. In either case it is a matter of very little moment to British India, nor would so much attention have been directed by the local papers to these movements of the barbarians had it not been for the dearth of news wherewith to fill their columns.

Mr. Donald Campbell Mackey has brought an action for libel against Mr. Henry Mead, editor of the Hurkaru, for certain articles showing up the bubble character of the Singh-bhoom Copper Company, of which Mr. Mac-key was the originator. Damages are laid at 30,000 rupees, and the reason alleged for proceeding against the editor, and not the pro-prietor, of the Hurkaru, is that Mr. Mackey is himself a shareholder in that journal.

An Englishman named Rudd has been sentenced to be hanged at Calcutta for shooting a native in the Punjab. Except an Irish soldier who was hanged in 1858 for shooting a comrade, this will be the first instance of a European being executed in Calcutta since it became a British possession. A petition has been presented for the man's reprieve.

Rumours have been rife in the City of London of a serious reverse having been sustained by the allied forces in the neighbourhood of Shanghai. Unless the news has travelled by way of St. Petersburg, it is difficult to imagine how it could have been received, in the absence of any special mail from the East. The tale probably originated in the attack made upon the sepoy garrison of Kah-ding, exaggerated to suit the interests of the narrator or the credulity of his hearers.

We desire to draw the attention of our readers to a subscription that is being made for the purpose of placing a marble statue of Lord Canning in the India-office, at an estimated expense of £1,500. We would also bring to the knowledge of "the half-pay officers of the Indian army who were obliged to retire from sickness through exposure during the mutinies, that a petition is about to be pre-sented to the House of Commons praying for some compensation in lieu of the regimental bonus lost by the amalgamation of the two armies." The petition lies for signature at the office of this journal, 13, Waterloo-place,

BENGAL.

THE ENEMY OF ALARMS.

The following figures, for the accuracy of which we vouch, will serve more than any other arguments to show the baselessness of those fears which have found expression during the past few weeks. The established strength of European and Native troops provided for in Mr. Laing's Budget estimates for the current year is:—

	Cavalry.	Artillery.	Infantry.	Sappers.	Total.
Enrop. Troops Bengal Madras Bombay	3,541 970 970	6,660 3,345 2,690	32,538 9,180 9,180	120 80 50	42,859 13,575 12,890
Total	. 5,481	12,695	50,898	250	69,324
Native Troops. Bengal Madras Bombay	15,908 1,548 4,491	=	51,264 31,328 21,360	1,000 700 500	58,067 33,576 26,851
Total	21,843		1,08,952	2,200	1,27,994

The native force is less than twice the European in strength, instead of six times more numerous, as in 1856-57. It will be observed that there is no native artillery, while in 1856-57 it may be said that all the arsenals of the North-Westera Provinces and the Punjab were more or less in the power of sepoys. Before the mutiny there were only 45,522 English soldiers and officers in India, while the strength of the sepoys was 232,224, and of this last 5,411 were artillery. Yet although this dangerous force cost eleven millions and a half sterling, the Indian army of 1862-63, which has nearly one-half more Europeans and one-half less natives, costs only £12,227,916.

Is this force well utilised? Is it properly distributed? are questions of more interest to our readers than its total strength and cost. It is not saying too much that if the Indian army had not been previously commanded by generals such as Sir William Gomm and men of his stamp, the forty-five thousand English soldiers in India would have sufficed to prevent, as they were able to check, the Sepoy mutiny. A consideration of the following figures, which represent the position of the European and Native armies relatively in the three presidencies on the 1st of May last, will satisfy all doubters that what a Birch did, and a Gomm permitted, will be impossible under the regime of a military administrator like Colonel Norman and a real soldier like Sir Hugh Rose.

It will be observed that Northern India has 43,638 English soldiers to 53,837 sepoys or nearly man to man. In Oudh, our Lucknew panic stricken friends will be comfosted by the as that for every sepoy there are more than two Europeans. In Meerut the proportion is one and a half Europeans to one sepoy, yet the Agra part of this division is the most timorous. In Sirhind there are four English soldiers to one sepoy. In Robilcand the proportion is nearly equal. Gwalior alone requires strengthening. Turning to Madras we have 15,428 Europeans to 40,386 sepoys. The latter might be still further reduced; and the strength of the Europeans would be, perhaps, too great in a territory which nature has made peaceable, were it not that that force acts as a convenient reserve for the rest of India, as it did in 1857. The place of places is Secunderabad where at this moment there are one cavalry and two infantry English corps with a corresponding strength of artillery. It will be seen that the Hyderabed Subsidiary Force has nearly man for man, while is the Moplah country of Malabar and Canara there are two sepoys to one English soldier. In Pegu also there is nearly man for man. We would make both Secunderabad and Nagpore still stronger in Europeans, for the above returns do not include the Hyderabad Native Contingent. In Bombay there are 12,616 English soldiers to 27,932 sepoys. Poons has one of the former to two of the latter; Mhow has nearly man for man; Sind has more Europeans than sepoys Aden has 586 English soldiers to 1,102 sepoys.

This review of our total military strength and its distribution is to us, with the slight exceptions to which we have drawn attention, satisfactory. While these alarms have made some natives wonder at the folly and others at the fear of the sahibs," they will not be without good results in directing the attention of the military authorities as much to the efficiency as to the economical administration of the Indian army. As soon as the new constabulary force has been organised throughout the empire, let the sepoy army be re duced to a maximum of 100,000 men. European army must never be allowed to fall below 70,000 men. Artillery is our most important arm, and Colonel Eyre should not rest till India has her share of Armstrong guns. We have not yet heard the result of experiments with those specimens whose arrival we announced six months ago. A strong and efficient European army, with trained generals under fifty in command, first, and an English financier next, are the great guarantees that India will continue undisturbed in that career of material and social progress on which she has entered .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS

IMPRESSMENT.—It may appear singular, that though the Englishman has been in Bengal upwards of a century, he has not succeeded in drawing towards him from the majority of its population any other sentiment than that of fear. Those of our countrymen whose minds have been liberalised by knowledge, and who, by intercourse with the Anglo-Saxon, have seen him in his true character, admire his manifold virtues; but to the vast mass of the rural population he has ever been an object of unmitigated terror. Let an Englishman enter a village in some of the interior districts of the country, and he will find nearly every man and every woman flee from him, and shut the deer of his or her house against him. Ask a Hindu woman of the village why she trembles at the sight of a Genz, er a. white man, and she will tell you that she looks upon a Gora as one scarcely possessing human feelings, and hardly distinguishing right from wrong. We exaggerating. The reality of this We are not exaggerating. The reality of this representation may be tested in any village in the interior of the country. And yet we do not wonder at this estimate of the English character by the bulk of Bengali men and Bengali women. Many of them have seen, or heard of, Europeans only as soldiers on the line of march; and it is needless to remark that British soldiers commit great outrages when marching through the country. Woe be to those villages near which the "Pultun" pitches its camp. Not a man peops out of his house. The door of every cottage, of every brickbuilt house, is closed. The shops are shut, and their empers flee miles away from homes. The women come net at sunset to fill their kulsis at the adjacent tanks. All business is stopped; every pleasure is in suspense. The Pultun is there, and the terrible Goras are out in every direction, bent on the errand of doing mischief to every living creature. Every exchard is plundered; every man, every beast impressed; every woman pursued with diabolical cagerness. To the Bengal ploughman in the interior along the Grand Trunk Road the English soldier is the type of the English character, and no wonder he looks upon an Englishman as hardly human. Any measure which to to check military outrage will undoubtedly re the Englishman's character in the estima the rural population of Bengal. It was, therefore, with no little pleasure that we observed in a late issue of the Calcutta Gazette the draft of a Bill to be introduced into the Bengal Legislative Council, the object of which is to "amend the law regarding the provision of carriage and supplies for troops and travellers, and to punish unlawful impressment." That the amendment of the law on the subject is necessary is thus shown by Mr. Seton-Karr, in the statement of objects and reasons annexed to the Bill :-" Great complaints have been made by the Civil Officers, on whom under Regulation XI. of 1806 falls the duty of procuring supplies; serious instances of herdship and inconvenience to merchants and others have repeatedly been brought to their notice; military officers of high standing and experience have reprobated the system; but though repeated orders have been issued with a view to check abuses, they have failed in obtaining their object; and there can be little doubt that a Legislative enactment is needed to abolish a system which is not creditable to the general admit tration, which is not ordinarily needed, and which can only be justified by its imperative necessity at some important crisis. Like complaints have been made for years regarding abuses in the furnishing of supplies, though not to the same extent, probably because more persons and larger interes are affected by the impressment of carriage than by the procurement of supplies for troops on a march." In the proposed Bill, Collectors, Magiatrates and other civil officers are prohibited, except in cases of extreme urgency, the nature of which is to be determined by the Lieutenant-Governor alone, from impressing all means of transport. Any Revenue or Police officer who "impresses or attempts to impress any cart, cattle, boat, boatman, bearer, cooly or other means of transport," shall not only be dismissed from office, but subjected to a fine not exceeding 200 Rs., or to imprisonment not exceeding two months, or to both. Impressed land carriages shall never be taken for a distance of more than one hundred miles, except by the consent of the owners and at double rates of hire. A proper native officer is also to be deputed to accompany the troops through the districts. We trust that the provisions contained in this Bill will become the law of the land. Every man should be at liberty, not only to choose his own profession and to follow his own trade, but also to make his own ness, so long as those transactions do not interfere with the peace and comfort of his fellow-men. Carters, bearers, and other means of transpert should never be impressed unless their refusal proves ruinous to the interests of the State; and we are satisfied that the provisions contained in the Bill are calculated to prevent ordinary impressment.—Indian Reformer.

TAHORE. June 6.—A panic seems to be creeping over people in the N.W. Provinces, and everybody is crying Wolf! There is no cause for it. It ens that some cakes have been distributed in the Meerut and Delhi districts, why, no one knows, but Hindoos have been the recipients. A sort of sermon reprobating the wicked and dissolute lives Ied by Mahomedans has also been circulated widely amongst that sect. It is pretended that the sermon issued from Mecca; but I understand that it was published in a Bombay newspaper, and probably originated in this country, as no Arabic version of it has been seen. But whereever it came from, its object was moral, not seditions. A great event for the Punjab is the safe arrival of the Oriental Inland Steam Company's steamer Sutlej at Ferozepore, thirty miles from the capital of the province, with flats conveying 1,500 hogsheads of beer. This success will affect the prosperity of Mooltan .- June 7 .-There is no use in attempting to disguise the fact any longer of rumours of an exceedingly ugly nature being abroad which are not confined to the probahility of an outbreak with Persia or Cabul, but extend to other parts also. No doubt great exaggeration and, in many instances, absolutely unfounded meports are circulated for the sole purpose of creating alarm; but that some reason, however alight it may be at present, does exist for some of the statements, I am compelled to believe. The people in some parts of the North-West are actually stricken at the rumours afloat, and are preparing themselves for the worst that may happen. It is a subject of common conversation here among the natives that an invasion of India through Cabul is not only meditated, but is an absolute fact, and that twenty-five thousand picked men are already on the way to Lahore. Again, the North-West journals report, from a source they deem authentic, that a similar number of Goorkas under Jung Bahadoor had arrived at the frontiers of Oude, bent on the conquest of that province. You and I can afford to pooh-pooh such absurd reports, and, looking at our respectable European force at command, rest satisfied as to the impossibility of any such attempts being made. But such is not the case with the majority of the native population, who attach credit to all these rumours, and to the wavering or disaffected such rumours must exercise considerable influence for evil. I am of opinion, therefore, Government should exert itself and set the public mind right on a subject possessing so much importance in a social, moral, commercial, and political point of view. There are many circumstances daily and hourly occurring in different parts of the empire which have a tendency to give additional weight to these rumours. For instance, the change in the destination of Rao Sahib to Agra, instead of Cawnpoor, is attributed to fear on the part of Government; the sudden disappearance of notoriously suspicious characters from one station and turning up unexpectedly in a distant one under equivocal circumstances; the impersonating of Government officials, and going about the country burning houses, demanding black-mail and pillaging, are significant facts. Times of India.

LUCKNOW, June 12.—Since the change of the moon the wind has again veered round to the east, and either blows a gale or scarcely enough to stir the leaves; the heat, therefore, is tremendous just now, and the thermometer 94 deg., and 96 deg. in the house. The 3rd of June has passed without any disturbance, though the minds of the Europeans in the place were in a state of great alarm, anxiety, and trouble, all being armed and fully prepared for the worst that might happen. Rumours of all sorts are affoat amongst the natives; some say that all the rich and influential people are leaving the city to go into the district and neighbouring towns; but the natives can vessel, and, making fast to the stranded vessel and a third near Khimlassa, the two latter in the the Europeans now, when the whole country is teeming with British soldiers, who would not again spare a living soul of them. This truth ought to be most forcibly impressed upon their minds, for the recollection of the horrors committed at Delhi, Meernt, and particularly at Cawnpore, are too fresh, and they would find no mercy at the hands of the soldiers, who would now take their revenge by an indiscriminate carnage. It is, however, exceedingly disagreeable for the English, and especially for unfortunate "unprotected females," to hear such dreadful rumours going about. Robberies daily take place in the city here, of one kind or another; the lawyers are making large fortunes by the immense number of cases they have to try and gain. The poor zemindars, however, complain loudly of the want of justice, as no one will take their cases in hand, nor have they any money to bribe the Amlah with, that their petitions might be heard by those in authority. The new appointments are: Major Reid to officiate for Mr. Currie; Lieutenant Montmorency, late of the Oude Police, for Mr. Wyllie, as Assistant Secretary to Chief Commissioner. Mr. Braddon, an uncove nanted officer from Bengal and friend of Mr. Yule's, has been appointed to organise the new Abkaree experiment, and also to preside over stamps and salt. The new settlement appointments of Rs. 800 each are to be given, one to Captain Ouseley, late city magistrate; another to Mr. Forbes, Assistant Commissioner; and a third to some officer from the Punjab. No other changes at present, although both Colonel Clarke and Colonel Abbott are expected to retire next year. But power is sweet, and rupees sweeter; so old Indians stay on one year more, one year too long. Digging for treasure is all the rage One party dug up some valuables of here now. the worth of 1,500 rupees; another, gold and silver ornaments worth 40,000 rupees; and now in three or four parts of the city parties are busily engaged in the search for gold. As it is rather an expensive amusement, and does not always yield any profit, three or four club together and go partners in the expense, hoping to divide the spoil. During the siege and at the capture, great quantities of treasure were buried for safety, and the houses being knocked down have preserved it intact, and now servants and others who helped to bury it are coming forward to give information, with the hope of getting a share for themselves. Some come with most deliberate statements and receive a few rupees whose information is found to be worth nothing .- Times of India.

THE "BLUE JACKET."-This vessel, when working down the Eastern Channel, on the 7th June, unfortunately grounded below the Gaspar floating-light, at half-past seven in the evening. She was in charge of Mr. Bull, a licensed pilot, who, of course, is to be brought to trial before the Marine Court, on a charge of unskilful performance of his duty when in charge of the lost vessel. The Blue Jacket was a fine ship of two thousand tons burthen, and has been for some years sailing to and from this port; having been the first vessel sent from India to the Cape on the outbreak of the mutiny in 1857, to bring up horses from that colony, which duty she performed in a very satisfactory manner. The loss of this fine vessel is greatly to be regretted; and we hope that the result of the investigation to be held into the particulars of the case will be favourable to the pilot who is to be put upon his defence, and who we are informed is held in general estimation both in his own service and by the seafaring and mercantile community, as an able and intelligent officer. The Blue Jacket was by no means abandoned without a display of British energy. On the night she grounded the captain and crew, with the pilot in charge, seeing the imminent danger in which the ship was, and calculating on the probability of her going to pieces during the night, left her in two boats and made their way to the floating-light vessel, where they passed the night. At day-break next morning they returned to the ship with a steam tug-SIMIA, June 11.—Our beautiful and generally joyous sanatarium appears this year to be peculiarly unfortunate; scarcely have the residents recovered from the shock attendant on the death of one of their number, than another occurs, nipping in the bud all plans for mirth or amusement. For a third time this season had a notice been circulated, postponing the proposed gaiety of the approaching evening, and throwing a gloom over the members of Simla society. This last notice informs us of the unfortunate death of Mrs. Brind, the wife of Colonel Brind, Royal Artillery. On the first occasion it was the sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. Hunter, carried off by cholera, shortly after her arrival here; on the second, it was the death of Colonel Keith Young, the Judge Advocate General, who was for many years a resident of this station, and whose decease was so universally regretted by a large circle of intimate friends and acquaintances. this third time, as I have said, by the death of Mrs. Brind. As far as we can learn, the melancholy and fatal accident, which caused her doom, occurred thus: Colonel and Mrs. Brind were return. ing from a short trip into the interior, the latter riding. When near the Theog Dawk Bungalow, some twenty miles from Simla, the road being very narrow, the horse of the deceased lady having become irritated by a gadfly, it is said, backed towards the edge of the precipice and lost its balance; the groom seized the reins, and endeavoured to drag the animal into the centre of the road, but in vain. The horse fell, carrying with him its unhappy rider, and dragging down the groom. Mrs. Brind's body has been recovered, though in a terribly mangled state. The body of the groom was also found, but the horse, which must have been killed, has not been discovered. The unfortunate husband accompanied the corpse of his wife into Simla the day following the sad accident, and the funeral took place last evening. It is really time that something should be done by Government for the hill roads, and measures be taken for keeping them in an efficient state of repair. At the present moment the roads out of Simla are covered with large loose sharp stones, which come rolling and thundering down the hill sides, and are eminently calculated to startle horses, or to alarm them by hurting their hoofs as they tread on their sharp edges. Add to this the crumbling brittle state of the edges of the road, frequently just where it overhangs a precipice several hundred feet in depth, together with many obstructions, such as trunks of trees, masses of earth, &c., &c., allowed to block up the centre of the road for days at a time, and then our only wonder is that the number of accidents is not greater than it is. I do not mean here to say that the melancholy accident I have just related was caused by the bad state of the roads, though had it been wider it might not have occurred: but many accidents have happened, and I feel sure will happen if the repairs are not more carefully looked to.—Times of India.

SAUGOR, CENTRAL PROVINCE, June 10.—Brigadier Travers came into the station on the 23rd ultimo and left on the 2nd instant for Gwalior, to be ornamented with the Victoria Cross. During the interval he was in Saugor he inspected H.M.'s 80th Foot, and expressed himself highly pleased with Colonel Hawkes and the officers of the regiment for the very efficient state in which he tound the corps. The Brigadier returns to Saugor in a mouth; he visits Goona on his way back from Gwalior. Three villages have been simultaneously plundered and burnt by the rebels; one in the Bhopal territory, another near Rahulgash, Dickens, the District Superintendent, went out yesterday after them. Mr. Temple, when he hears this, may be induced to visit Saugor sooner than was expected. It is confidently reported that the Bengal Brigadier and staff leave this at the end of the rains, and that the Saugor District will be made over finally to the Madras troops. Nowgong is to be given up as a military station, and the wing of the European regiment now there is to go to Jubbulpore, which is to be held by a half regiment in future. This will give more house accommodation to Jubbulpore.

THE NANA.-We learn from the Indian Empire that the "so called Nana, who is believed to be a professional beggar, is to be released by order of the Government of India. He is, we believe a native of Cutch, and wishes to return to his country. He is reported to be wholly without means, and, under any circumstances, has a right to be restored to his home. We cannot believe that the Government will permit him to go without compensation. At one time there may have been reasons for suppressing the evidence on which the man was arrested and subsequently detained; but now the parties concerned in his long imprisonment cannot be cleared in public estimation without some show of authority, since it has been incontestably proved that the prisoner is not only not the man, but never could have been mistaken for him by any one at all conversant with the Bithoor criminal. This is the evidence of gentlemen who were familiar with him for many years." A correspondent of the Oudh Gazette says of the Nana:—" When I last saw him in 1856 he must have been about twenty-five years of age, about five feet eleven inches in height of fair complexion, stout, with a round fat-face, sharp round eyes, with a very peculiar sharp, quick laugh, his ears pierced; in fact his tout ensemble was such that at a glance the genuine Nana might be at once pointed out from any number of fictitious Nanas."

FALSE PROPHETS.—The main cause and origin of the vague feeling of uneasiness, and expectation of something, which have for some considerable time existed in the Upper Provinces, and unsettled the minds of men, both Europeans and natives, in the North West, is by no means such a secret, or so difficult to be discovered and understood, as many appear to think. The mysteriousness of the apprehension which exists, and the impossibility of conceiving whence any danger likely, by any possibility, to assume formidable proportions can arise, go very far, in our opinion, to justify the opinion expressed by some of the best and most vigilant officers of the Government, that there is no actual danger, but that the state of feeling referred to is caused by religious fanatics and incendiaries of the Mussulman persuasion, rich in disastrous prophecies for the British power, but poor, indeed, in ability to show whence their fulfilment is to come. It is quite well known to the Government that prophets of this description have, since the suppression of the mutiny and the banishment of the King of Delhi, been industriously circulating their vaticinations amongst the population of India, and more especially of the Upper Provinces of the Bengal Presidency and the Punjab; the staple upon which they have rung the changes being varied to suit the ignorance, the simplicity, or the bigotry of their hearers. Sometimes the Persians are in full march upon India, anon it is the "Roose" men who are coming in in formidable force; again the Mahomedan population or the Deccan and of all Southern India has risen, and even our allies the French have been coming to snatch the empire from us. If the author of these prophecies or assertions cannot be discovered, it is by no means so difficult to find the auditors, at first or second hand, or a further degree removed, for there is scarcely a European servant of the Government in the N.W. Provinces who has not at some time or other of late years been questioned by natives of the better class as to the truth or incorrectness of these rumours and much desired calamities. Meantime no one comes to assail, or rises to beard us in India;

Saugor District. A police force under Captain and armed and prepared position, we are impregnable, and may defy enemies from without, and prophets from within, our frontier. We say again that there is no real danger abroad just now; nor any probability of its arising, unless we call it into being by going to sleep on our post; and of this we see no symptom. Whilst we keep always ready, the prophets will wear themselves out, and exhaust their stock in trade, portion by portion. People once, and again, and a third time deceived, soon lose their credulity, and not only distrust, but hate their deceivers. Whilst lying prophecies and prophets fall steadily into discredit and contempt, sharp swords, vigilant officers, and disciplined soldiers are always at par value.—English-

COLONISATION IN INDIA .- We give full weight to the difficulty of the climate, as it at present exists. We go fully with Buckle, in his motion, that the fate of nations greatly depends on the sun that shines on them, and the land on which they stand. There is no doubt that like the English hours and English days, Englishmen degenerate in this land. This burning clime thins our blood, and weakens our muscles. Each succeeding generation of those confined to the land must become weaker than the preceding one. We cannot fight against degrees of latitude. When we come under the sun's burning rays, as they shine on us in this land, we may mitigate their wrath, but we cannot destroy their influence. We may struggle against them, but our bodies are frail, and our life is but of years; they shine on as fiercely for ever. Human vigour from the cold north melts away in Hindostan as does the iceberg that drifts down from the pole to the line. These considerations have their full weight with us;-but art conquers nature. We know not how their natural influences may not be counteracted in their effects, when England is within a week's journey of India. In India itself we have the means of bringing the good gifts of nature to counteract the evil ones. cold breezes of the Himalayas may be made to temper the wrath of the fierce sun of the plains of Meerut. When Nynee Tal and Mussoori are but six hours distant from any part of the Meerut district, the climate of the latter will not be so much a matter of consideration. Nature seems to have intended this, when she drew the Himalayas and the Vindya range, and the blue mountains across the burning breath of the land. On the mountain tops should be our homes, and on the plains our workshops. Even now, if the mere English labourer cannot live on the plains of Hindostan, an Englishman with a little capital may live and labour there with comfort and profit. And what undeveloped resources are there lying to his hand, such as we have already indicated. Even this district of Meerut might be made the Lombardy of India, with the Ganges Canal running through it. What an amount of mechanical power is running to waste on the great falls of that canal. What great centres of industry might not be established in the midst of the cotton soil of Malwar. What a field for English industry in sugar-cane-growing Robilkund! It has been applied there, in one instance, with the result of a princely fortune to the enterprising director. And the vast plains of Northern Oudh literally teem with mineral and vegetable wealth. What room is there for English enterprise, which would turn it into a very garden of fruitfulness. The vallies of Kangra and the Doon await but the touch of the Englishman's hand to be able to supply the whole of England with tea. Amidst the mountains, as in the Himalayas, the difficulty of climate does not exist. Go up and look at the strong men who have lived in Simla and Mus soorie for twenty and thirty years, and their strong healthy children. The bowels of the mountains there teem with mineral wealth. On their tops are hundreds of miles of the best grazing ground for sheep in the world; on their sides and in the valleys they enclose every known product of the earth. Means of communication are wanting, but they must come with the settlers.—Mofussi-

THE CIRCULAR FROM MECCA.-The Circular

(Anglice, a Bishop). It was not addressed to the Mohammedans in India, in particular, but to the followers of the Prophet in every part of the world. A copy of this Circular, written in Arabic, reached Bombay. There it was reprinted, and 20,000 copies struck off and distributed throughout Hindcostan. It is, what we stated, a sermon, and by no means a bad one, as far as the object in view is concerned. The Moulvee Karée tells all Moslems (with what truth we have no care to speculate upon) that he had received a nocturnal visit from the Angel Gabriel, who told him that, for years past, "the followers" had been very wicked; that they had taken to an indulgence in intoxicating fluids, were given to swearing falsely, and, in numerous other ways, had disregarded the precepts of their religion. The Angel went on to tell the Moolvee Karée that they had been warned by the visitations of pestilence, of famine, and other scourges, but without making any proper impression upon them, and that he (the Angel Gabriel) had now been sent to tell him (the Moolvee Karee) that unless they, " the followers," were not more scrupulously attentive to the tenets of their religion, in the year 1279 Hidgree (corresponding with A.D. 1862) they would be visited with fearful calamities unprecedented, in fact, in the history of the world. The Moolvee Karée assured the Angel Gabriel that he would do his best. Before taking his de-parture the Angel said:—"Take care! This is the first time that I have been employed to carry a message of this kind for thousands of years past; but I am warned that I am to visit the earth four times more. On the next occasion of my coming all rulers and kings will be deprived of their power, and anarchy will prevail. On the third occasion mankind will lose all relish for food, as it will taste bitter in their mouths. On the fourth occasion chastity will disappear from the earth; and, on the fifth and last occasion, there will be an end of the world."—Mofussilite.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—We thought we were on safe ground in pooh-poohing the wild reports of wholesale poisonings and massacres with which the columns of our North-West contemporaries have lately abounded; but, after all, there must be something in them, at least such is evidently the opinion of the directors of the Bank of Bengal,-and who should be better informed? These gentlemen, at their meeting on Thursday, June 12th, agreed to discount bankers' bills at 5 per cent., whilst for the discount of promissory notes collaterally secured by Government stock, they fixed their rates at 51 per cent. In other words they considered the risk greater by 10 per cent. on Government than on a private banker's securities; at least so it would appear, as they charge just 10 per cent. more interest. But this is not all. For one month the Government may possibly be safe, or at the worst for one month its securities are only 10 per cent. less safe than a private banker's. But beyond one month the risk evidently increases, for if a borrower on Government stock wants money for a longer term he must pay an extra insurance of 10 per cent.; the rate thus charged to him being just 20 per cent. more than he would have to pay on the discount of a banker's acceptance. But seriously, what is the meaning of all this? Is it a sop thrown to the other banks, a salve to the irritation they are all said to feel at the monopoly of good things the Bengal Bank has lately had; or is it that the bank is playing into the hands of the Currency Commissioner, and trying to keep down securities until he has completed his investments? must be some reason for the bank's departing so much from its usual course. We shall be told, perhaps, that it is undesirable to make money too cheap; that too great facilities stimulate unwholesome speculation and lead to dangerous reactions. Granted; still the bank must march with the times, unless it is indifferent to the loss of its business. The bank is, if we remember rightly, still 2 per cent. above the rates it charged at the end of last year. There is therefore no question, yet, of money having been made too cheap. It is idle for the Bank Directors to where if we only maintain our present states, was issued from Mecca by a Moolvee Karee suppose that the borrowing public will come to them when other monied establishments and private capitalists will lend, as they are all notoriously now doing, at lower rates. Already, in little more than two months, the Bank loans have decreased nearly fifty lacs, and it requires no prophet to foretell that if the directors shut their eyes to this conclusive evidence that their rates are above the market value of money, the rates retiring will show still greater contraction. Perhaps on the strength of their recent concessions the directors may think their loan business of diminished importance. If not, they had better look to it, for such business, if driven to seek new channels, cannot always be attracted back again when wanted.—Englishman. CALCUTTA ATTORNIES.—A petition was presented to the Governor-General in Council in February last, by the Association of Calcutta Attornies, praying that Government would adopt measures for obtaining the extension to the Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal, of an Act of the Imperial Legislature styled the "Colonial Attornies' Relief Act." To this petition was attached a certificate of the judges of her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature in Bengal, to the effect that the extension of the operation of the Act in question to the gentlemen attornies of Calcutta was in every way highly desirable. This certificate bore date in September, 1859. In consequence of so long a period having elapsed between the granting of this certificate by the judges of the Supreme Court, and the presenting of the petition it was intended to back, and also of the arrangements which in the meantime had taken place for merging the existing Supreme Court into the New Amalgamated High Court; the Governor-general in Council, before making the necessary application to the Home Government for the extension of the Act in question to Calcutta, thought it advisable to obtain the opinion of the Supreme Court judges on the subject. A reference was therefore made to the Chief Justice and Puisne judges, as to whether, under the proposed alterations to be effected in the Supreme Court, they still advised the forwarding of the petition for the consideration of the Home Government; and whether, considering the delay which had taken place in making use of the certificate under their hands, they had any objections to make as to its now being made use In reply the judges have given expression to opinions which are likely to prevent the prayer of Attornies' petition ever being complied a. In the first place they think, that with. as the petition and certificate referred to have been allowed to remain unsubmitted to govern ment for upwards of two years, it may now without any detriment to the interests of the petitioners, be allowed to stand over until after the Charter of the High Court shall have been re ceived in Calcutta. In the next place the judges consider that as the Supreme Court will cease to have any distinct existence when the judges of that court take their seats on the bench of the High Court, it remains to be seen in what position the present Attornies of her Majesty's Supreme Court will stand with relation to the new. these circumstances the judges consider that as it is doubtful, how long the extension of the Colonial Attorneys' Relief Act to Calcutta will benefit the petitioners, it will be as well to await and see what provision the Charter of the High Court may make for the admission of attornies or others, as practitioners of that Court. To us it appears a matter of necessity. if it be not the intention that the new High Court should be disgraced as are the existing Company's Courts, by the admission to its bar of men in every way unqualified for the duties they profess to perform, that the rules now existing for the admission of barristers and attornies to practise in her Majesty's Courts of Judicature, should be made applicable in every way to the Amalgamated Court. A barrister well versed in law and precedent, is of the greatest assistance to the judges on the bench, whereas the ignorant legal practitioner retards instead of expediting business. In like manner with an attorney, it is necessary that he should be versed in his profesit is at all times desirable that he should be able to do. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the Judges of the Supreme Court will make a determined stand for the practitioners of the present Supreme Court.—Englishman.

NAGPORE, June 3.—Communication between this and the sea is a subject which is occupying the attention of the local authorities to a very considerable extent, and the progress which has been made in connecting Nagpore with the head of the navigation works on the Godavery is exceedingly creditable to all concerned. By the 15th instant Hingunghaut, the great cotton depot south of this, will be in direct communication with the sea. A very fair metalled cart-road has been constructed between Hingunghaut and the head works on the Godavery near Sironcha, from whence the river affords the means of transport. The Godavery works are progressing rapidly, I hear, though I have not been on that river for some time; the grass cannot have been allowed to grow under the operatives' feet, if, as is said to be the case, the river is now navigable as high as Seroncha, which is just below Chinnoor. It is said that the works at the upper rapids, and where there is a portage, are expected to prove so successful this year that when the river fills a sufficiency of water will be retained to render it navigable as high as Muntani, a town above Seroncha, and slightly back from the right bank of the river. For my part I believe that, if they succeed in successfully damming the river at the upper rapids and again at the rocks between Muntani and a place on the river-I forget its name-not far from Balconda, water will be retained sufficient for all purposes of light draught navigation for many miles up the river. The occasional portages will offer some inconvenience no doubt, but short tramways would do away with this to a great extent, and there can be no doubt as to the great advantage the Godavery rendered navigable would prove to both the Nagpore and Hyderabad countries. The Government seems determined to test the capabilities of Mundla, for I hear a large number of native convicts have been sent there to assist in clearing a site for erecting buildings for the reception of invalid men of the British European army. The climate on the Ummerkuntuck plateau is delightful, and it is most refreshing to get there from the plains during the hot months. I know nothing more exquisite than mounting one of the wild and almost impassable Ghats, which lead from the low country to the plain of Mundla, on a hot day in April or May. The sensation as you mount above the level of the hot winds, and enter the purer atmosphere above is exquisite, the excessive heat of an Indian doopkala giving way to the genial warmth of an English summer. I believe that a sanatarium on the Mundla plateau would prove more genial to the European constition than many of the more elevated hill stations. The rains are threatening, and we have had one or two somewhat severe thunderstorms, the sure precursors of the monsoon, though we can hardly look for its advent before the 15th or 20th of the month.—Englishman.

Sylher, June 2.-We are now much as we were six months ago in these parts, nothing is settled, nor is there any appearance of anything being done towards quieting the people. rebels have most decidedly had the best of it, for they have suffered but little in their persons and property, except cattle, which the troops have not succeeded in finding,—they have none. Cossyahs do not make any secret of their intention to commence operations against us, so soon as the rains have well set in; and the general belief here is, that they will not hesitate to recommence hostilities, when they judge the wet weather will prevent our troops moving. There was a row at Bhyniss Ghaut a few days ago, between a few sepoys of the Sylhet Light Infantry Battalion and some people of the country, whom they were trying to press into their service to carry their baggage; the result was that one man on either side came to grief, and were brought in here on charpoys, hors de combat. A few days before this our new Assistant Magiscontrived to excite the wrath of an insane faquir. who made a furious assault upon him, and but for the interference of some of his people, would speedily have left us minus an assistant magistrate. The Cossyahs, rebels though they be, deserve a great deal of credit for the plucky way in which they have defended their stockades. They fought well so long as they had their stockades to protect them from the bayonets of the troops, but it was hardly to be expected that men so indifferently armed would stand a close-quarter engagement with men who, in point of offensive weapons, were so far their superiors. However, knocked out of one stockade they went to another, and if the first were not entirely demolished, it would be speedily repaired and reoccupied. They appear to be well supplied with both commissariat and ammunition. on the hills is now so high and thick that it shuts out every breath of air, and the labour required to move through it is something painful. -Englishman.

GOWHATTEE, June 1 .- We hear in these parts that the people in Luckhimpore are not quite so easy, or confident, in the maintenance of peace as our officials would have us believe. I had a letter a day or two ago from Deebroghur, whence it is mentioned that the submission made by the Abors, and their declaration of a desire for peace, cannot be relied upon; and it is now affirmed by several parties who have lately arrived here from Upper Assam, that both Nagas and Abors are known to be collecting arms and ammunition. Where they get them from is a puzzle to everybody, and nothing has surprised us so much as the freedom with which the Cossyahs have expended their powder. The only prisoners taken that we have heard of up here, are some thirty odd Nagas, who descended into British territory, between this and Sylhet, for the purpose of obtaining food, they said, but being armed, Inglis, the assistant-commissioner in those parts, made prisoners of them, and has now written to know what he is to do with them. North Cachar is anticipating an invasion, and a rising among the hill people, at least the tea-planters are, and such a representation has been made of the perilous state of life and property in that part of the country, that Brigadier-General Showers has sent them a detachment of fifty sepoys under a European officer for their protection. It is said here that the General is going to move his troops across the hills from Sylhet to this. Heaven help them if he does, and him too if he accompanies them, for the country is getting very unhealthy, especially between this and the hills. The grass is so high that not a breath of air penetrates, and the damp heat arising from the decaying vegetable matter washed down from the hill sides, is insufferable, to say nothing of thegases with which the atmosphere is impregnated, all deleterious to human life.—Englishman.

St. James's Church .- On Saturday evening. the 7th June, in spite of the threatening appearance of the weather, a large concourse of the residents of Calcutta assembled in the Circularroad, opposite the European Asylum, to witness the ceremony of laying the first stone of St. James's Church and the Boy's School attached to it. Precisely at the appointed time, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor arrived, attended by his staff and customary mounted escort; and, after the usual preliminaries, descended the steps prepared for the ceremony into the trench where the stone was to be laid. Several of the leading clergy stood round the stone, and a prayer was read by the Venerable Archdeacon Pratt, of which, owing to the heavy dropping of the rain, but little could be heard. The stone was then lowered into its place, the Lieutenant-Governor pronouncing the usual formula, that, in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, he laid the first stone of St. James's Church to be used hereafter for the worship of Almighty God, according to the form of the Established Church. All present then joined in singing a portion of the hundredth psalm, after which a rush was made to the site of the boys' school, which is to be erected in the right rear of the church, and sion, or he will be unable to instruct counsel, as trate, Mr. King, who was out at Sateo on duty, there the same ceremonies were gone through, considerably abridged by the rain, which now came down heavily.

MILITARY OCCUPATION OF GWALLOR .-- It appears that the question of the retention of Morar. within twelve miles of Gwalior, as a permanent cantonment for British troops, is now under the consideration of Government in the Military Department; and, connected with this question, has arisen the consideration as to whether there is any objection to the occupation of the fortress of Gwalior itself by British troops. We should suppose that there is every objection to either occupation, if the Maharajah be unwilling to consent, as by the treaty concluded with Scindish at the commencement of the year 1844, immediately after the battle of Mahrajpore, it was agreed that Scindiah's territories should be held by his own troops, commanded by British officers: and then was created the Gwalior Contingent, which took such a prominent, and at one time such a very serious, part in the campaign of 1857. Since the mutiny and annihilation of the contingent, and the subsequent treachery of the Maharajah's lushkur, who joined the rebels, Scindiah's territories have been in the first instance at his desire, and afterwards with his assent, occupied by the troops of the British Government; but if treaty rights are to be respected, the Maharajah's objection to have either Morar or the fortress of Gwalior so occupied should be listened to. As, however, circumstances have totally altered the state of affairs which existed when the treaty above referred to was concluded; and as we never again can allow Scindials to maintain a native army, it would be as well to annul the said treaty; remodel our relations with the Mahrattah potentate; formally take the military occupation and defence of his territory into our own hand; and if necessary, station British troops in the commanding and important fortress of Gwalior. This is the course which a wise and provident policy indicates, for we cannot allow Indian fortresses, and specially those of considerable strength and dangerous prestige, to be commanded by native potentates, and garrisoned by their troops. We must be the holders of all forts in India, or we shall have endless troubles and disturbances .- Englishman.

LALLA JOTEE PERSHAD has gone to Simla on the invitation of his Excellency the Commanderin-Chief. Rumour has it, that the great contractor has been, or is about to be requested to resume his connection with the Commissariat Department.

COLONEL NORMAN, Military Secretary to the Government of India, is about to have a suitable and commodious apartment in the Military Secretariat premises, fitted up as a library, and well furnished with a large supply of the latest works and periodicals. The library will be for the use of the clerks of the department, and will, for their convenience, be open as a reading room before and after office hours. Colonel Norman defrays the entire expense himself.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MOULMEIN, May 28 .- Not long since two gentlemen employed in the timber trade, proceeded hence to the Karenee country. They proceeded without being in any way molested until they reached the banks of the Khaim Phyoo, a stream of some importance which runs into the Salween river a little south of the 19 deg. north latitude, and is the generally accepted boundary between the British possessions and the Karen States, which border on the Salween. Here they were attacked, and though they received no bodily hurt, they were despoiled of everything of value they had with them. The Anglo-Burmese frontier line which stretches from the Arracan Hills on the west to the Salween, follow directly the 19 deg. of north latitude; and the Karen States, commonly called Karenee, lie to the westward of the Salween away towards the Sitang river, and are for the most part to the north of our frontier, though here and there they stretch across it, as the windings of the Khaim Phyoo diverge to the south. To the east of the Salween again are situated those Shan States, which are nominally subject to Siam, though they are in truth a race of people ignoring the right of any power to exercise any control over them. On both banks of the Salween the country is either mountainous or broken into low hills and ridges, covered with the heavy jungle out of which the teak tree raises its lofty head, towering over the vegetable world at its feet, and in truth the monarch of the forest. To maintain any degree of control over the simi-wild tribes. situated on the western or right bank of the Salween, and over which the British Government exercises dominion, is a matter of no little difficulty, and to attempt to do so on the eastern shore, where the Shan mountaineers disavow allegiance to any one, would be a simple act of insanity. In a country such as the Karen and Shan States, to maintain order and afford security to travellers or foresters, would be found a task of the ntmost difficulty, and therefore, though the Government should undoubtedly keep a police force in its own territory sufficient for any emergency, and to afford every requisite protection to all residing in, or whose avocations may call them temporarily into the country, to require more is simply absurd. If foresters greedy of gain are not satisfied with what is to be made out of the teak forests in British Burmah, and travel into States over which the British Government can exercise no control in search of a more profitable field for their labours, they must do it at their own risk, nor have they any right to complain if, having staked their all upon the venture, they lose. It is quite true that when European foresters first penetrated into the teak forests lying beyond the British frontier, they were well received, and many of them made very capital hits; but among a people so conscious of their own strength and security against reprisals, it was hardly to be expected that they would not soon find out that it was a far less laborious task to rob the forester who went to them with his money about his person, to purchase their timber, than to bark, fell, and drag it to the waters' edge for him. It may be argued that to rob the forester was to kill the goose that laid the golden eggs; it is not so, however, for these Shans and Karens can at all times float their own timber to the Moulmein market, and there obtain a better price for it than the foresters could afford to give them in their remote, and all but inaccessible forests. The news of the successes which had attended those who first ventured into these wild States, induced many others to try the same game. They reached their destination in safety, but finding little or notimber ready to hand, they unwisely bid one against the other for that which the Karens and Shans had not to give, and, to induce compliance with their desires, they displayed the means at command for paying for what they wanted. The cupidity of these wild beyond their reach the treasure they had agreed The result was what ought to have anticipated; they possessed themselves by force of that which they had not the means ready at hand to barter for, and to acquire which they were indisposed to work, when the readier method of employment a little "gentle persuasion" could be exercised at will. When Colonel Phayre, the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, was here, several complaints were laid before him, of the lawless state of the Ka-renes frontier in particular, and praying that some steps might be adopted for rendering it more safe, and representing to him that both Shans and Karens do not confine their depredations, to those who trust themselves within their States, but that both now move about in considerable bands, crossing the British frontier at will, and looting indiscriminately all whom they come across. One difficulty which at first presented itself to any efficient means being adopted for exercising a searching police supervision of the Salween river, and of the country bordering on our frontier, was, that while the Khaim Phyoo, and even the upper portion of the Salween river, is under the control of the Toungu autherities, the lower portion, including the Zounzaley river, which takes its rise not far south of the Khaim Phyoo portion, is under the Moulmein Commission. For this reason it was considered that with two police forces under different control the unity of action so essential to success could never be obtained. This difficulty was, however, soon solved by the chief commissioner, by placing that portion of the Toungu district, lying to the eastward of a line drawn south from the frontier line to the source of the Zounzalay, under the control of the Martaban police. The chief commissioner considered that it would be nece during those portions of the year in which the Salween is the great highway by which commerce find its way from the north to Moulmein and vice versa, to appoint a European officer to the command of the police force located on the Salween, and in the districts through which it runs, and recommended the same for the consideration of Government. To this the Governor-General has demurred: he considers that, as the locality in question is very unhealthy to all, and particularly inimical to European constitutions during certain seasons of the year, it would be better to appoint a highly salaried native police officer to that post. It has, however, been left discretionary with the chief commissioner, and he is at liberty to appoint a European officer, provided that the general limit for police expenditure in the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces, as already sanctioned by Government, is not exceeded. The strength of the post to be established on the Khaim Phyco is fixed at fifty men, to be made up by drafts from the several police stations in the Martabara and Zounzalay districts; in the meantime a native is appointed to the command of the force, but what police authority he is to exercise in the district, has not yet been declared. As the subject is one of considerable importance to mercantile interests in this place, I have not hesitated to detail to you minutely all that pertains to the question .- Englishman.

CURRENCY.--The Cochin Courier tells us that his Highness the Rajah of Travancore has issued a proclamation declaring that the paper currency of British India shall be a legal tender throughout his territories. "This fusion of interests," says our contemporary, "between our own and the Travancore governments, and the probable cooperation of the Cochin State at no distant period, will doubtless tend considerably to enhance public confidence in the new currency and facilitate commercial transactions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SHIPWRECK .- The British ship James Pilkington, E. Griffiths, master, from Liverpool, wa totally wrecked on the night of the 17th June on and lawless people became excited, and very a sandbank near Bassein, at a distance of about naturally so. They had not to sell what was twenty-five miles to the nexthward of Bombay. wanted, and they were loth to see conveyed away Two of the crew drowned.

THE LATE GALR AT BOMBAY. -Since the 9th June, when we experienced the first heavy fall of rain of the season, we have had main nearly every day with occasional squalls from the southward On the nights of the 10th and 11th June there was a good deal of lightning with distant thunder over the ghauts. On the night of the 13th it rained heavily for several hours, and these were some very heavy showers next day: but it was not until the night of the 14th that we had the real burst of the monsoon. From about 11 o'clock P.M., till noon of the 15th, it blew a fresh gale from S. S. West, with hard squalls which came up about every half hour. Fortunately the shipping in the harbour were well prepared for bad er and no serious accidents have occurred The ships Virginia and Zouave dragged their anchers for a short distance and got foul of each other; but we are glad to learn that, with the exception of some injury to the stern frame of the former vessel and to the bulwarks of the latter. caused by the collision, no serious damage was done to either vessel. The Childwickbury also dragged her anchors and got foul of the Good Success, but happily without much injury being done to either. The Voterun and the Joshua w also in collision, by which the former vessel sustained considerable damage to her bulwarks, &c The tide of the 14th June was the highest that has been known in Bombey for the last twenty years. The sea made a clean breach over the portion of the Apollo and Arthur Bunders which juts into the sea, but without doing any material damage; and a great part of the sea-wall on the Esplanade has been washed away. A portion of the Lady Jamsetjee Causeway, which unites the island of Bombay with Salsette at Bandora, has been seriously injured on the Mahim side, and it was for a time rendered impassable to wheeled carriages. A large number of co-cos-nut trees were blown down in different parts of the island during the gale. The P. and Q. steamer Overs, with the outward China Mail, took her pilot (Mr. Goward) to sea, having had to slip the pilot boat to prevent her from filling and going down, owing to the heavy swell just outside of the harbour. The Orissa only made three miles in three hours after starting on her voyage—the wind and tide being dead inst her. On the 15th the P. and O. Ca's steamer Chine arrived with the English mail of the 18th May from Suez and Aden, and it was found impossible (ewing to the heavy gale then blowing) for several hours after her arrival to land her mails and passengers. During the gale the wreck of the Beechworth went to pieces on the Caranja shoal, and was drifted on shore in different parts of the herbeur. The gale has done considerable mischief on the sea board at Several native craft laden with Maragon. grain, cocos-nuts, &c., were driven on shore near the dockyard, and three lives have been lost. A number of men belonging to the crews of the wrecked bosts swam ashore, and two men who clung to one of the wrecks until they were so exhausted that they would have been drowned but for the timely assistance rendered them, were saved by the exertions of Mr. Murphy, the Assistant Superintendent of the Harbour Defence Works, who caused a boat to be manned and sent to their rescue when no other boat would venture to leave the shore. Large quantities of timber in logs, several hundreds of which have since come on shore, were floating about the bay at Mazagon in all directions. These were washed off from the land at the Warree and Tank Bunders, and have caused considerable damage to the sea-walls and the harbour and dock works at Mazagon, as well as to the sea-wall in the course of construction by the Elphinstone Land Company. A great portion of the Warree Burder road has also been swept away, and a deep channel cut through it.-Times of India.

GOONA.—Perhaps it may be interesting to your sporting readers to hear that the annual shooting arty of the C. I. Horse killed this year, in April and May, a head of large game for every day they were out. The bag was eight lions, twenty-seven tigers, twenty-four bears, two panthers, and no

ZAMETRAR. son to believe that the statement put forth by a Bombay contemporary, and copied by all the local paper, sthat Colonel Lewis Pelly, the British Consul at Zanziber has been living for some months back in constant danger of his life, the Arabs having formed a plot to assassinate him on account of the efforts made by our Governmen te suppress the slave trade, is an erreneous one Colonel Pelly may be said to exercise in Zanzibar a power not inferior to that of the ruler of the island, and if it were known that a conspiracy existed to assassinate him, the knowledge would be but a prelude to a few dozen of Arabs being executed. We have seen parties who met Colonel Pelly at sea at a date later than any intelligence from Zanzibar is likely to have reached Bombay via Aden. Colonel Pelly was on board H.B.M.'s brig Ariel, which was moving down the African ceast to look after a reported Spanish slaver. It is quite true that some ships have been seized by the royal cruisers which were not legally capturable as slavers. Under a convention, Muscal has a right to draw from the African coast and Zanzibar 'domestic servants' and 'labourers. Vessels thus freighted were seized as slavers by the Ariel, but in several instances released by the consul, who, on this very account should be, as we believe he is, rather popular than otherwise at Zanzibar, where he most certainly is powerful.'

EUROPEAN DISTRESS IN BOMBAY.—The presen extent of European destitution in Bombay is a subject of the most painful and startling interest. The repeated applications at the police-office for relief by seamen, and other Europeans in a higher sphere of life, who have been allured to this country in the hope of bettering themselves, is a mat ter of notoriety, and the magistrates have done all in their power to render the assistance sought for, until they have drained and exhausted the poor box of every fraction it contained. What are these poor distressed men now to do, who are able and willing to earn their livelihood, but cannot obtain employment to enable them to do so? The shipping-office is daily thronged by seamen in search of work on board ship, but as the vessels in harbour have their full complement of hands, no work is obtainable, and these men are consequently compelled to roam about the streets and alleys of the town in a starving penurious condition, begging in many cases from every one they meet, and living from hand to mouth in the best manner they possibly can. It is time that a remedy were provided to check the spread and growth of this great and increasing evil, which is a slur on the British name in India, Catholic Examiner.

KURRACHEE, June 15 .- The trial of the marshal of the Kurrachee jail was concluded on Thursday, the 12th instant; the unfortunate man has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment with " rigorous" labour. The prisoner was indicted on four distinct counts under Section 405 of the Penal Code for a criminal breach of trust, and found guilty of all of them. The magistrate, Mr. Kemball, was assisted by five European assessors selected from the European comreunity for their ability and discrimination. The jury was strong in its recommendation to mercy; but Mr. Kemball, though admitting that there was a culpable laxity in supervising the jail accounts, did not consider the offence committed as susceptible of extenuation. During the mutiny of 1857 Mr. Kinnersley laboured very successfully, and with a zeal scarcely surpassed, to provide tents and other articles for the use of the bodies of troops which were sent to the Punjab. Lakhs of rupees then passed through his hands; but his integrity remained far above the breath of suspicion. Even in the midst of the most trying temptations his services were brought prominently to notice, and elicited the high commendations of the Bombay Government. The indenture held by Messrs. Dunolly and Co. to lease the salt fields of Seergunda, a creek in the delta of the Indus, has expired, and this profitable field of speculation is now open to public competition. The Seergunda salt beds are capable of yielding an enormous quantity of the mineral without apparently diminishing the vast do so.

The Phenix:--" We have good | resources of these mines. The total quantity of salt exported during one year has be mately estimated at 5 lahks and 84 thousand manuals. Salt is one of the most extensive and materal productions of the country, and is very largely experted to Calcutta and Madras ; it has been subjected to a chemical analysis, and pronounced to be of a very superior quality. The aggregate value of the customs sea borne trade in 1861 and 1862 has been estimated at Rs.2.96.65.543 being an increase over the preceding year to the extent of Rs. 29,28,650. The trade of Sind has received an impetus in the establishment of several European mercantile firms in Kurrachea. working in direct communication with influential agencies in England and other parts of Europe. From the earliest period after the conquest a steady increase has been perceptible in the Sind trade; this indication of progress in the commercial horizon betokens an unmistakable feature of encouragement toward the field of speculation and enterprise. To the capitalist whose exertions are well directed by a judicious expenditure of money in the soil, an abundant harvest would be realised. This consideration has doubtless induced one or more of our European merchants to embark in agricultural operations, and under the liberal rules for the redemption of waste lands, leases have been taken up of uncultivated ground where facilities for irrigating such lands may be supplied at a moderate outlay.

KATTYWAR, June 11.—The history of the Joonsghur affair is as follows:—Anuntjee Amerchund, of blue book notoriety, who had been for upwards of fifteen years the dewan, or chief minister of Joonaghur, was dismissed from his office about three years ago by the present Nawab of Joonaghur. Anuntjee attributed his downfall to the influence of un old and trusted lady in the palace who was the nurse of the Nawab, and his most influential adviser, being one of the most intelligent persons in the palace. Determined to wreak vengeance on Joonaghur, Anuaties brought three of its principal men into a scrape. who are at this moment suffering imprisonment on a charge of being implicated in the late Waghur rebellion. It is now nearly seven months since they were accused, and up to the present time nothing definite is heard of their being tried, or released, or made over to Joonaghur, whose subjects they are, and who claims them as such. When the chief men were thus separated from their master, Major Barr proposed to have Joonaghur attached. that the old lady, Chaetee Boo, might be driven out, as Major Barr represented to the Bombay Government that her influence over the Nawab was very pernicious. The political agent's proposal was disallowed, and the three Joonaghur men were ordered to be made over to the Nawab. Major Barr remonstrated against the making over the prisoners to Joonaghur, and Government has taken out of his hands the prosecution of the men, and referred the case for disposal to the Resident of Baroda. Seeing that the game was out of his hands, Anuntjee tried a stratagem which, for the moment, seems to be successful. He and other Nagurs have succeeded in creating dissension between the Nawab and his mother. It is alleged that a favourite dancing girl of the Nawab was bribed to induce his highness to leave Joonaghur and reside at Buntley, about six miles from the former place. At Buntley the Nagure have mustered pretty strong, and the Nawab has been, and is, prevented from communicating with his mother, although he is said to have expressed. a desire to see her .- Times of India.

EUROPEAN MENDICANCY IN KURRACHEE. Paper states that European beggars have begun to appear in that city; one of these miserable men were sent to the Magistrate's office, but was told that nothing could be done for him there. Another applied to the Commandant of Police; that functionary, equally powerless as the Magistrate, recommended the supplicant to enlist; but every man cannot enlist, for many are disqualified by disease, debility, malformation, shortness of stature, and other causes, from becoming soldiers. Women too are often left destitute, and for the society must provide if Government serves to AFRICAN EXPLORATION.—The Royal Geographical Society has forwarded to that of Bombay information for the use of another expedition into Eastern Africa. Beginning at the south the Nyassa is entirely in the hands of Livingstone and other Zambezi travellers such as Count Thurnheim. Livingstone has established early access to the southern end of the Lake, and has announced his intention of exploring the whole of it at the earliest opportunity. Proceeding northward, the itineraries of native traders supply enough information for the present rude wants of African geography, of the country between Quiloa and the Nyassa; and we have received slight, but definite, knowledge of the same through Roscher's ill-fated exploration, followed up, as it has been to some degree, by the Baron von der Decken. Taking yet another step, we arrive at the track of Burton and Speke. The fourth and last section of known country is to the eastward of Mombas. whence Baron von der Decken has lately travelled to Klimandiaro, and where he still proposes to travel. Thus there is no urgent call for a new expedition that should leave the coast of Africa between the Zambezi and Mombas; but Eastern Africa is almost untouched between Mombas and the Red Sea. Of routes that may be adopted the first is to ascend the Juba, the Ozi and other rivers as far as they are navigable. They have all been visited by slaves, and opposition might be experienced on entering, partly from that cause and partly owing to hostilities between the Somauli and the Massa The second and the most difficult would be a land exploration through the Somauli. The most promising course would be to land at Wogadoxo. Additional interest is given to this exploration by the fact that Lieutenant-colonel Rigby, lately Consul at Zanzibar, is firmly persuaded that some Englishmen are now in captivity among the Somaulis. The last course would be to adopt Mombas as the head quarters, and thence to pass into the interior by a route to the northward of that travelled by the Baron von der Decken. It is surely time that Captain Speke and his party were heard of on the Nile.

NORTH CANARA.-Nearly two months have passed since the district of North Canara, with the exception of Coondapur talook, was transferred from the Madras to the Bombay Presidency, and little more is known now than then, in Bombay, regarding it, save perhaps by the few immediately interested in its welfare. This is a sad pity, as the district is naturally a very rich one, requiring only foreign aid and enterprise to develop its resources. The district, as it now stands, consists of five talooks, with a total area of three thousand seven hundred and seventyfour square miles, and a population of under 400,000 Hindoos, Mahomedans, and Christians, the Hindoos numbering about four times as many as the other two classes combined. The Christians live mostly on the coast; they are almost all of the Roman Catholic religion, the descendants of the Portuguese, who once overran the western coast. Of the Mussulmans there are three distinct races the ordinary Mussulmans of India, who have emigrated from the surrounding districts; the Navayets (new-comers), a curious tribe who came over from Arabia, and have established themselves in the various coast-towns, especially in Butkul, which seems to be their head quarters; and the Siddies, descendants from African slaves, who, notwithstanding a considerable admixture of Indian blood, still retain the distinctive woolly hair and dark skin of their African ancestors. Of the Hindoos there are upwards of twenty-two classes of Brahmins, and thirty-two of ordinary Hindoos. Among the latter are numbered the Singayets, a caste of considerable interest to the ethnologist. Although the district is divided into five talooks, viz., Supah, Yellapur Sircy, Ankola, and Honore, it is familiarly divided into the country above, and that below, the Ghauts. The country below the Ghauts is a comparatively narrow strip, running along the whole coast. Its

Dr. G. C. M. Birdwood, whose energy and is composed of decomposed laterite, which rock 11,430 by the Master's order will have to be paid specify for hard work are well known, has been underlies it. The laterite of this part of the by the plaintiff Jadunathjee Maharaj, the residue country is excellently suited to building purposes, for which, indeed, it is extensively employed Magnetic iron ore is largely developed in it in some places, and very richly in Fortified Island, near Honore, where, indeed, it was worked by the Beypoor railway company, until they found another mine nearer home. No soil seems to be so favourable for the growth of the cocos-nut, palm, and other trees as that formed of this decomposed laterite. and large tracts of it may be had for the asking. and the paying to Government of the assessment. It is also singularly well suited to the growth of the aloe, which here yields a fine fibre. capital of the country below the Ghauts is Honore a snug and pretty little station, where are situated the Zillah Court, the Treasury and Cutcherry establishments, and the gaol. It is a wonderfully healthy little place, enjoying a temperature which never varies more than six or seven degrees, and never rises above 85 degrees in the shade. It is one of the few stations in India in which cholera is unknown. It would form an excellent sanatarium for invalids for whom a hill climate would be unsuited. A few miles inland from the sea the comparatively level plains begin to merge into the mountains, which rise up to the height of 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, where the temperature is ten or fifteen degrees lower than on the coast. Many of these mountain sides near the sea afford excellent sites for the growth of coffee, which has been successfully cultivated, though as yet rudely, and to no considerable extent. There are many fine parts for tea land also. The hills are covered with jungle, in which grow many very valuable trees. Among them may be enumerated teak, blackwood, satinwood, sandlewood, cinnamon, camphor, the talipot palm, and a host of other trees and plants useful on account of the timber they yield, or for other purposes. The areca palm, pepper-plant, bamboo, &c., are found above, as below the Ghauts, in great abundance. Many parts form good cotton soil, although little has as yet been done in the way of cultivating that most useful plant. Still, the success of what has been attempted affords considerable encouragement to men of enterprise to embark in the undertaking. The scenery above the Ghauts is fine beyond description, and two of the loveliest waterfalls to be seen anywhere are met with here. These are the Gairsoppah and the Lushington Falls. The former consists of four distinot falls, each possessing a peculiar character and beauty, which precipitate themselves over the brow of a perpendicular rock into a valley a thousand feet beneath. Well may Gairsoppah be called the "Queen of waterfalls," by those who have travelled thousands of miles to gaze upon her beauties. The Lushington Falls are smaller, but very beautiful. It would be a vain attempt to describe their loveliness and grandeur, they must be seen, in September. The country above the Ghaus has only one great drawback—it is most unhealthy, and has been more than usually so of late: so that the district, before much underpopulated, cannot now supply labourers in a sufficient number to any of the public works. Sircy, the capital town of the country above the Ghauts, is a most pleasant place of residence for Europeans, who are not subject to the fever, which there proves so fatal to natives. There is endless trouble there with servants, however, as they no sooner enter Sircy than they fall ill and want to leave. The roads throughout the district are good; indeed none could be finer than that from Sircy to Cuttegal; several new ones are being made. Nothing has been done as yet at Sedasheghur. It is reported, however, that the works will be put in progress at the termination of the monsoon, which commenced on the 7th June .- Times of India.

COSTS OF THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE. question of costs in this case which had been re ferred to the Tax Master has been decided by that officer in favour of the defendant, the Editor of the Satya Prakash, who has been allowed the "general costs" of the action. The bill of costs of the defendant's attornies (Messrs. Acland and soil, except what consists of the sand of the shore, Prentis) amounts to Rs. 14,300, of which Rs.

consisting of the costs of the demurrer, &c., the defendant himself will have to pay. It is said that the plaintiff's own costs, according to his attorney's (Mr. Leathes) bill amounts to Rs. 26,000, while, independently of that, he had privately expended about Rs. 10,000 during the progress of the suit. Adding to all this the costs of the Tax Master, plaintiff is fairly muleted in the sum of about Rs. 50,000, a punishment which he really deserves.

FREIGHTS.

Lo Liverpool—Cotton, 23 Sa. Od.; Seeds, 21. 5s.

Imports (Bombay, June 27).—Varns.—The market for Grey Twists continues very firm, and prices show an upward tendency. In consequence of the extreme rates demanded by holders no sales of importance have transpired. Turkey Red Twists are quiet. Sales of Orange are reported. Metals.—Copper continues neglected, and the prices have again receded a little. Iron has been in very good demand, both British and Swedish Bars have been in fair request at higher rates. Pageots remain firm. Lead—Sheets have been in demand at better prices; Pig is quiet. Tin Plates are neglected. Quicksilver is dull and quoted Rs. 38. Coals still continue slow of sale and are quoted Rs. 12 to 13. Cochineal attracts but little attention as yet. Saffron continues quiet, and the value has receded a little. Cordage.—Manilla is in demand at better rates; other sorts are unchanged.

Exports (Bombay, June 27).—Cotton.—Prices have gained an advance of Rs. 5 to 10. News from Liverpool up to the 2nd inst. has stimulated the market to more activity, and a further advance was established in the prices. While the European houses continue to restrict their operations, mative dealers have operated very freely, and large transactions are reported for delivery after the rains. Holders are very firm, and demand higher rates. Oileceds.—The market remains firm and quiet. The supplies of both Linseed and Rapeseed are very limited; the former is held at Rs. 6-6 as, and the latter at Rs. 7-6 as. Sesame is held in small stocks.

and for want of operations is nominally quoted Rs. 40. Niger and Poppy Seeds are out of stock. Ground Nuts can be had at Rs. 26 to 27. Hemp.—The market exhibits a better feeling. Coffee.—The market is queet, and the prices of both Mocha and Malabar have become a little cheaper. Pepper.—Malabar has become dearer in price, and quoted Rs. 83 to 89; Blutcoll is unaltered in value. Saltpater.—A moderate inquiry exists for this commodity. Bengal and

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, June 17 .- The extreme dryness of the weather, almost amounting to drought, is exciting some anxiety; but as, in ordinary years, much rain falls in the interior towards the latter end of June and all through July, we still cherish the hope that meteorological aberrations may not have any disastrous influence on the expected bumper crop. So far as shipping has been concerned, nothing could be more favourable than the weather at Colombo for the past fortnight, an almost unbroken dry calm having prevailed.

Our total exports amount to 507,000 cwts., and the Severn, which is likely to sail about the 21st, will almost make up 514,000. We shall then have more than two months of the season to complete our predicted quantity of 550,000 cwts., and we feel confident that this figure will be reached. So that after all, the short crop season 1861-62 will not be far below the average. Where the coffee has all come from we cannot take upon us so say, but it is evident enough that the large Badulla crops are telling on the total.

Our average annual export for the past five years has been 600,000 against a shipment of only 34,000 in 1837. What shall be our average the island has been completely filled up.

export when another score or quarter century of years has rolled over Ceylon? If we can get a railway, roads, and cheap manure, it is hard to fix a limit short of what demand enjoins. As regards labour, the result has always been better than our fears, and the effect of placing good vessels on the Manaar Ferry has been altogether favourable.

While we write, we believe Sir Charles McCarthy is at Mansar, seeing and judging for himself as to the improvements required in the great northern route. His Excellency has not yet appointed a gentleman to act as treasurer in the room of Mr. Saunders, who is likely to leave by the mail steamer at the end of this month. present steamer takes away Mr. Smedley, district judge of Kandy. Captain Pritchard, the master-attendant of Colombo, goes home in the Severn, compelled to seek a change of climate in consequence of having suffered from hepatic disease complicated with an affection of the chest. Within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, we believe, there has not been such an exodus of Government scrvants from Ceylon.

The proposal mooted in the Imperial Parliament of reducing Ceylon from an independent colony to a mere province of the Indian empire, has, as might have been anticipated, created no other feeling save indignation here.

The distress in Lancashire has awakened the sympathies of the community, and subscriptions have been paid to be forwarded to the Lord Mayor of London.

Small-pox has prevailed to some extent at Colombo, but, on the whole, the health of the country is good. Our obituary, we regret to say, contains the name of Mr. Edward Winter, of Baddegamme, a young man of much promise. He was the son of the late Mr. George Winter, a gentleman who spent the larger portion of a long life in developing the resources of Ceylon. Much sympathy is felt for Mrs. Winter, widowed, and now bereaved of her son .- Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA. - By the Dutch mail steamer we (Singapore Free Press) have Java papers to the 14th May: - There is no news from Banjermassing. The pirates that were do-ing so much mischief amongst the islands in the Java sea had disappeared, and they are thought to have proceeded to the China sea. The Government has purchased a silver siri box, manufactured at Padang, for 3,840 florins, to be sent to the Great Exhibition at London. A model of the sluice works and dock gates at Sourabaya have also been made for the same destination. A correspondent of the Handelsblad states that the island of Makian, formerly so fertile, has been completely laid waste by the recent volcanic eruption. Not one of its 4,000 inhabi tants remains upon it, and there is not a blade of grass to be seen. The twelve villages which were to be found on the island have been more or less destroyed. Some of them have been buried to the depth of 30 or 40 feet under sand, stones, and ashes. How many of the inhabitants have found their graves by this calamity has not been fully ascertained, but it is reported that out of Babawa alone (a village of about 1,000 souls) only about a half made their escape. The bodies of 63 persons have been found under the ruins of the mosque in the principal village, while about 60 persons were found suffocated in a cave. These high numbers are, however, exceptional, and the loss of life at Babawa must be ascribed to the circumstance that from its inland position the inhabitants had not a sufficient number of prahus to enable them to escape. Stones of the size of a 11 lb. shot were thrown upon Halmaheira, about ten miles distant, while the explosions were heard at Banda, Amboyna, Menado, Kema, &c. At the last named place, about 120 English miles from Ternate, the flashes were distinctly seen, while ashes fell over a great part of the east coast of Celebes. A great mass of mud has flowed out of the crater in different directions, and a small but deep bay in Military Letters.

INDIA OFFICE, London, Dec. 31, 1861.

Military.—No. 494.

TO H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOVERNOR GEN.
OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

MY LORD,—Par. 1.—I have received and considered in Council your military letter, No. 252, dated October 17, 1861, transmitting an application from Major Wyld, of the Staff Corps, to be permitted to leave that corps.

from Major Wyld, of the Statt Corps, to be permitted to leave that corps.

2. Major Wyld's reason for requesting that the G.O. transferring him to the Staff Corps should be cancelled is stated to be that your G.O. of September 10 last, No. 799, publishing my despatch, No. 296, of the 25th July, has materially altered the conditions, as previously understood in India, under which an officer of H.M.'s Indian army was permitted to enter the Staff Corps, it now appearing that the officers of that corps will be denied the privileges as to retirement on pension of the rank attained after twenty-two years' service, conferred in the Government reconlation of 1796. twenty-two years' service, conferred in the Govern-ment regulation of 1796.

3. As the formation of Staff Corps is not to be

3. As the formation of Statt Corps is not to be considered complete until after the 22nd October, 1861, you would have been perfectly justified in cancelling Major Wyld's appointment to that corps at his request, subject to my approval. You have however, considered it necessary (the appointment and consequent promotion having been reported for my approval) to transmit the application for my consideration and orders.

my approval) to transmit the application for my consideration and orders.

4. You observe, in paragraph 5, that whatever may have been this officer's intention as to availing himself of the privileges of the regulations of 1796, there is reason to believe that many officers have joined the Staff Corps on the understanding that this privilege would be available to them, and, you add, they were fully justified in that expectation.

5. I admit that the werds of the 9th paragraph, of the 3rd Clause, of the Royal (Staff Corps) Warrant, are susceptible of the erroneous interpretation which some officers have thus placed upon it.

upon this point, however, were clearly exmy despatch, No. 296, dated 25th July last.

my despatch, No. 296, dated 25th July last.

7. It was there stated (para. 3,) that officers of the Indian army, who might, at the time of joining the Staff Corps, have acquired, under the regulations of 1796, the right of retiring on the pension of their rank, would be allowed to retire on the pension of the rank which they then held, whenever they might subsequently retire. It was added, that "the right of retiring on the pension of the rank they hold at the date of joining the Staff Corps will preserve to local officers, who have been fortunate in their promotion, the benefit of the rate of pension they may have acquired by their previous service in the army."

8. I pointed out, on the other hand, in paragraph 6, the undue advantage that would be given to officers of the Staff Corps if it were conceded that they should be entitled to claim the pension according to rank, in respect of rank obtained in the Staff

9. By the publication of this despatch, with your general order, No. 799, on the 10th September, the officers of the army who may have elected to join the Staff Corps under an erroneous impression upon this point will have had time to reconsider the subject and to rack application to have their application. ject, and to make application to have their appointment, cancelled before the formation of the corps.

10. The arrangements for the amalgamation of the British and Indian armies, and for the special provision of a body of officers "for service in India" were not made without careful consideration by her Majesty's Government.

11. They kept in view the double object of maintaining for the officers of her Majesty's Indian forces, who remained in that service, the advantages they had enjoyed under its established regulations, and the server time they offered inducements to expression. at the same time they offered inducements to experienced and efficient officers to pass into corps organised for special service in that country, by holding out to them certain advantages that were made to attend the transfer and continuance of their services to and with those corps.

12. With this view promotion was given to many officers on entering these corps. Further promotion was secured to them in a manner in which it had never been secured to them before, and the scale and never been secured to them before, and the scale and conditions of pension according to the rules of 1836 (considered, when granted, as a great boon to the Indian armies) were adopted and introduced among the regulations of the staff corps. Their joining these corps was optional on their part.

18. The effect of the further concession which you have recommend would be to give to officers of the now recommend would be to give to officers of the Indian army who may join the staff corps, in additional staff corps, additional staff corps, additional staff corps, additional staff corps, additional staff co Indian army who may join the staff corps, in addition to the advantages already secured to them by the staff corps warrant, which are many and great the further privilege of claiming the retiring pension of major or a lieutenant-colonel in all cases two (2) years sooner than other officers of the staff corps could claim them, two (2) years sooner than they themselves could have claimed them under the regulations of 1836, or, except upon rare and uncertain contingencies, under those of 1796.

14. This privilege if conceded at all, must be tain contingencies, under those of 1796.

14. This privilege, if conceded at all, must be allowed to every officer of the Indian Army who joins the Staff Corps, and I see no reason for assuming, as stated in paragraph 15 of your despatch, that there will be but few officers who would desire to avail themselves of this very important privilege.

15. In the 18th paragraph of your despatch you observe that it has some to your knowledge that several officers have arrested their applications to join the Staff Corps since the publication of my despatch, No. 296; and you add, it may be assumed that others who have actually joined the corps have done so under the belief that under the terms of the done so under the belief that under the terms of the Royal Warrant they would in the course of three or four years acquire the right to retire on the pension of Major or Lieutenant-Colonel.

16. I regret that there should have been any ground for misapprehension on this point, but I see no cause for altering the resolution upon the subject no cause for altering the resolution upon the subject which has already been communicated to you.

17. The object of those officers, who, as you state, have arrested their applications to join, seems to have been rather to retire as soon as possible than to serve in India; but they have no ground for complaint. They have had the opportunity of chosing, out of three courses, that which may appear best calculated to promote those views; by remaining in the local service, and availing themselves of the regulations of 1796; by remaining in that service, and retiring under the regulations of 1836; or by joining the staff corps, and retiring eventually under the latter rules.

18. H.M.'s Govt. consider it only right to place the officers who may, as you justly assume some may have joined under a mistaken view of the meaning nave joined under a mistaken view of the meaning of the 9th para. of the 8rd clause of the Boyal Warrant, in an equally favourable position.

19. Maj. Wyld's request, that his appointment to the Staff Corps and consequent promotion may be cancelled, may be complied with.

20. You are authorised also to cancel the appointments to the Staff Corps of all officers who may make

6. The intentions of her Majesty's Government spplication to you for this purpose, stating that they non this point, however, were clearly explained in have been misled on this point.—I have, etc.,

CHARLES WOOD.

A further reference on this subject having been transmitted home, the Gov. gen. in Council has now received the final orders of H.M.'s Govt., who have determined that the decision announced in G.G.O., No. 799 of Sept. 10, 1861, must be upheld.

The appointments to the staff corps of all officers who may make application to withdraw, stating that there have been wited as weards the application of who may make application to windraw, stating that they have been misled as regards the application of the retiring regulations of 1,796, to that corps will be cancelled; but it is to be clearly understood that on this plea alone can appointments once made to the staff corps be annulled.

All applications from officers now in India to with the staff corps under this order must be

RETIREMENT ON THE VETERAN ESTABLISHMENT.

Fort William, May 20.—No. 550.—The foll. paragraphs of a military letter fr. the Right Hon. the Sec of State for India to the Govt. of India, No. 115, dated March 24, 1862, are published for general information

Letter dated Dec. 18, 1861, No. 850.

Para. 9.—[Para. 8.]—The cases of warrant officers promoted on the veteran estab. who have applied retire from the service have, until recently, been specially considered, and in almost, if not in every case, the full pay of the commissioned rank has been granted on retirement.

granted on retirement.

10. When considering an application from an officer on the veteran estab now in this country, I observed that, although there were rules for the retirement of officers holding unattached commissions (G.O.G.G. No. 322, June 6, 1851), there were no rules for the retirement of officers on the veteran estab.; I accordingly decided that, to entitle an officer on the veteran estab to retire on the full pay of his commissioned rank, he must have served the time which would have required had he remained in the warhe would have required had he remained in the war-rant grade to entitle him to the full pay of his rant grade to entitle him to the full pay of his former rank in that grade.

11. Under this decision Lieut. Buckley, whose services at Delhi are so well known, is entitled to the full pay of his commissioned rank—viz., 6a. 6d. per diem—and, having applied to retire before the 1st October last, to the additional allowance of £50 per annum referred to in G.O.C.C. May 18, 1861.

HALF STAFF ALLOWANCE TO NON-COMMIS-SIONED OFFICERS.

Fort William, May 20.—No. 551.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 149, dated April 14 are published for general information:—
Letter from No. 297, of 1851, dated Nov. 15

Letter from No. 297, of 1851, dated Nov. 15.

Proposal that the rule granting half staff allowance during furlough to non-commissioned officers of the Public Works Dept. may be considered applicable to non-commissioned officers of all departments, and further, that the men acting may be granted the full allowance of appointments during the absence of the permanent incumbents.

1. It has not been the practice hitherto to issue in this country to non-commissioned officers or soldiers of the Dept. of Public Works, while on furlough to Europe, any portion of their staff salary, as the rule in the code of regulations of that department applicable to such men does not recognise the grant which clearly was intended to apply only to leave taken in India, as the allowances of men so absent are to be drawn by the executive engineer of the division to which they are attached.

Public Works Code, Section III.

Public Works Code, Section III.

Persons in the Military Service.

Para. 10.—Non-commissioned officers and soldiers employed in the public works dept. may be allowed leave of absence by the local government for any period not exceeding two years on m.c., provided that no such leave be granted within two years after return from a previous leave. The local government may also grant leave on private affairs for any period not exceeding six months after six years serriod not exceeding six months after six years service, provided the exigencies of the public service admit of it.

Men obtaining leave as above will be allowed half their staff salaries, together with their military pay and batta, but no travelling allowances.

Their allowances will be drawn by the executive engineer of the division to which they are attached.

Para. 9.—In the cases of non-commissioned officers the public works dept., who may be entitled to half staff allowance during furlough, the amount which they are entitled to receive on this account is always to be specified in the last pay certificates given to men on their embarkation

Rules for Residence in Cantonments.

June 6.—No. 227.—H.E. the Gov. in Council is pleased to publish the foll. rules for regulating the residence of officers and others in mily. cantonments, which are to form part of the Qrmr. gens.'s regs.:

OCCUPATION OF HOUSES IN CARTONNENTS

1. A mily cantonment is, as its designation implies, a locality set apart primarily for mily and medical officers, chaplains, soldiers, European and East Indian subordinates, and their families; and limits are fixed for each cantonment, in order that limits are fixed for each cantonment, in order that the space within which mily, authority may be exer-cised should be publishy recognised.

- 2. Houses situated within such limits are cons mently by priority of right available for officers and oldiers above described.
- The above rule is not, however, to interfere with gentlemen of the Covenanted Civil Service as regards the houses usually occupied by them is mily. cantonments.
- 4. Regimental officers are required to live as mear 4. Regimental officers are required to live as mear their lines or barracks as is practicable. A certain number of houses for each regiment will, therefore, be set apart in each cantonment by lecal command-ing officers, and every opportunity should be taken advantage of to adjust the present inconvenient dis-tribution of officers in cantonments, so as to bring all stations under the above arrangen nent in sems
- 5. Staff officers may be allowed to live in any part of a cantonment
- 6. The rate of rent of all houses in a conton should be registered by the staff officer of the sta-tion, and recorded together with the precedings of all "house boards."
- 7. Other claims for house accommodation noted in the margin of gentlemen and others will be coasidered and adjusted by the officer commanding the station with due respect to their rank and position, and with regard to the availableness of houses in the cantoument for their use; but these gentlemen cannot retain any house that may be absolutely required for an officer of the military force at the sta
- 8. Houses within the limits of a cantonment, built on ground the property of Government, whether held on lease or not, are liable to be occupied as above, under the control of the officer commanding the station. Houses built on land not the property of Government, or held on freehold tenure, or occupied as shops, are exempt from this liability.
- 9. In the case of necessity arising, requiring the removal of a non-military tenant to make way for removal of a non-military tenant to make way for an officer, not less than one month's notice in writing must be given to the owner as well as the tenant of the house that the house in question is required. No summary ejectment is ever to be permitted, and the greatest consideration should be shown to the occupant whose removal on public grounds is rendered necessary. The officer commanding the cantonment may, however, extend the period of such notice, when circumstances will admit of it, and other quarters should be provided for the person if removed as above, whenever practicable.
- 10. The register of houses eccupied and vacant, referred to in para. 6 of this order, is to be kept in the station staff office, alterations being made in it from time to time, and no house is to be taken by any non-military officer unless with the consumant of the officer commanding the station, where e of the officer commanding the station, where duty it will be to see that such occupancy of house will not interfere with public convenience.
- 11. In order that the number of dwelling-house onment, available for civil and military in a cantonment, available for civil and military officers, and officers of public departments, missionaries and others, may not be unduly diminished, no house, built on Government land or land leased from Government, or assigned to Government for its own use, hitherto occupied as above shall be converted into a shop, or otherwise rendered unsuitable as a residence except under the sanoton of the officer commanding the station; but any houses occupied as shops on the promalgation of this order will not be liable to be registered as dwelling-houses, unless the owners wish it, or his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief may consider it absolutely ne-
- 12. House Boards can only assemble on houses erected subsequent to 1813, when the G.O. on that subject was first promulgated.
- 13. At stations such as Secunderabad, where the ground is foreign territory, but assigned by the Nizam's Government to her Majesty's Government for military purposes, the above rules, as regards the rental of houses and allotment of officers in the casetonment are to have equal effect. Bangalore is appeared from the operation of these rules.
- 14. These rules are not to have retrospective effect: t nor are they to disturb the residence of officers and others at the present moment, except in cases of extreme and proved public inconvenience. Their object is to secure gradually, and as oppositunity offers, a better arrangement for the future.
- 15. In ordinary cases the decision of the state commanding officer should be considered final, appeals may be heard and decided by the o appeals may be heard and decided by the classes commanding the division, and, if necessary, they may be submitted for the orders of the Commandes-in-Chief—those submitted by gentlemen of the Civil Service being forwarded with the observations of his Excellency, for final disposal by Government.
- Officers public works and other departments; Henegous and Rast Indian subordinates, &c., in the civil or public works department; missioneries and other residents.
- tiHouses built prior to the establishment of Military justicities not being included under these raise.

SINDH RAILWAY.

PUBLIC WORES DEPARTMENT. RAILWAY No. 54 OF 1861. SINDH RAILWAY.
To the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., G.C.B., Secretary of State for India.

Fort William, June 29, 1861. Sir,-We have the honour to enclose a minute by the Hon. Sir Bartle Frere, in which we all cordially express our concurrence regarding the ad-mirable promptness of action and loyalty to their employers, displayed by the agent and chief engineer of the Sindh Railway Company, Messra. Neville Warren and John Brunton, on an emergency when the successful progress of the railway was seriously threatened by the sudden desertion of the contractor.

2. Circumstances, explained by Sir Bartle Frere in his minute, prevented his exhibiting at the time the real amount of service rendered by these gentlemen. The opening of the railway has now afforded him an opportunity of doing fuller justice to their merits. And we desire earnestly to press upon her Majesty's Government and the Railway Board that such good service at a time of need should not pass without special and substantial acknowledgmen We have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and humble servants, CANNING. and humble servants,

H. B. E. FRERE, R. NAPIER

Enclosure to Railway Letter No. 54 of 1861. Dated 24th June 1861.

Minute by the Hon. Sir H. B. E. Frere.
The opening of the Sindh railway for traffic from the Kurrachee to the Kotree terminus has been officially reported, and this appears to me to afford a favourable opportunity for bringing to the notice of Government, and of the Board of Directors of the Sindh Railway Company, the very great obliga-tions which I consider they are under to Mr. Neville Warren, the resident agent, and Mr. John Brunton, the chief engineer, for having completed the line in the face of very great difficulties, within three years from the commencement.

2. I refer more particularly to their conduct in taking charge of the works along the entire line of one hundred and twelve miles, when abandoned by the contractor, Mr. Bray, who embarked for England without notice, leaving daily wages, &c., unpaid to the amount of more than 125,000 rupees with only thirty odd rupees in the hands of the agent, who had no means of raising more money.

8. It is not easy to convey an adequate idea of the difficulty of taking up so large a work in such a country and without notice. But when I consulted Messrs. Neville Warren and John Brunton as to what could be done to avert the ruinous and dangerous consequences of a suspension of the works, they expressed their willingness to undertake to pay up the workpeople in arrears due to them by the contractor, and to carry on the work on account of the Railway Company, if assisted with funds from the Government treasury, and such other ways as it was in the power of Government to afford.

4. This was done, and so great was their energy, and so excellent their arrangements, that agents the railway company and of the contractor, with pay-sheet and money to pay the workmen, were at each place of muster. The men, many thousands in number, were all paid up, and the work taken over, measured up, and continued wit occurrence of a single breach of the peace. and continued without the

5. This latter circumstance was to me the most satisfactory of all, for the people were much and justly exasperated. Some thousands of them were old Belooch soldiers of the Ameers, used to come to blows on every slight provocation, and wholly fearless of consequences, when they fancied themselves wronged. The result was, however, entirely in accordance with the generally excellent conduct of the railway company's own servants since the commencement of the work.

6. In reporting these occurrences to Government at the time, I did not dwell so much on the value of the service done to the railway and company and to Government by Messrs. Warren and Brunton as I should otherwise have done, because the resumption Campbell, 15th N.I., 3 mos.; Lieut. W. L. P. Drummond, 38th N.I., 4 mos.

Boshow Estab.—Lieut. B. H. Mathew, Engrs., 6 mos. at least six months, and probably a year, sooner than would have been otherwise possible. The execution has, I believe, been on the whole much below the rates of the schedule payable to the contractor, and the salaries of the large railway staff, who must have been almost entirely idle during the suspension, have been saved.

Under these circumstances I feel bound to give Messrs. Neville Warren and John Brunton the credit which is their due, and to record that the ans which led to this successful result would probably not have been attempted, and certainly could not have been attempted, without the forethought and fertility in resource, the energy, public spirit, and good feeling of these two gentleme

8. I am not aware whether any additional salary en granted to the officers of the railway com pany during the time they have had the execution as well as the superintendence of the work. Such addition, I believe, is usual, and, if so, it has, I submit, been fairly earned in the case now under consideration.

9. But besides what may be the usual remune ration for additional trouble and responsibility to which they may be entitled, in common with the er members of the railway establishment, I think that Messrs. Neville Warren and John Brunton deserve some substantial mark of the satisfaction of Government and of their employers, for having averted from the railway a very serious calamity and ensured its completion much sooner than would have been possible had they done the duty for which they covenanted and no more. I would mark this hatically as a proof that the servants of guaranteed companies do not, as it is sometimes asserted. think chiefly how they may protract work, and draw their salaries as long as possible.

10. I submit this minute to his Excellency the Gov. gen., in the hope that it may be sent to the Governor of Bombay, and to the Secretary of State, for communication to the railway company; and that any extra salary which the railway company may, on consideration of these circumstances, see fit to assign to these gentlemen, during the time they have had the extra labour and responsibility of executing the works of the Sindh Railway Company, be approved by the Secretary of State.

11. I feel certain that my former connection with Sindh, and the great interest I have taken in the railway, will be accepted as an excuse for any irregularity in the mode of doing what seems to me a simple act of justice, but which it would be difficult for me to do through any other channel.

H R E Foror

I heartily concur. Sir Bartle Frere's recommendations should be pressed with the whole force of the Government of India.

CANNING.

Jan. 27, 1861. I entirely concur. Jan. 27, 1861.

The Capture of the City of Ningpo. ADMIRALTY, July 14.

A despatch, of which the following is a copy, has been received from Vice-Admiral Sir James Hope the Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's ships and vessels on the East India and China station:

No. 196. Najaor, May 17, 1862. My Lord,—You will be pleased to lay before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the accom-panying copy of a despatch from Captain Dew, of the Encounter, detailing the capture of the city of Ningpo, by the squadron under his orders, assisted by two French gunboats.

2. Taking into view the very small force at Captain Dew's disposal for storming the walls, this achievement is of a character which reflects the very highest credit on the conduct of all who were engaged in it, and fully justifies the entire reliance I placed on his judgment and ability when I ordered him on a service which I foresaw would require a very large measure of both.

8. The immediate departure of the mail precludes my bringing, in detail, the circumstances which led to this collision with the rebels under the review of your lordships; this I propose to do by the next opportunity.

4. Two hundred of Colonel Ward's troops, detached for the protection of the foreign settlement, arrived the day after the action, and five hundred more have since been despatched, which will constitute a garrison sufficient to insure the safety of the city.—I have, &c. J. Hope, Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief. The Right Hon. Lord Clarence Paget, C.B., Secretary of the Admiralty.

REPORTING ATTACK AND CAPTURE OF NINGPO. | with Mr. John Ashton, assistant paymaster, he was Her Majesty's ship Encounter, Ningpo, May 10.

Sir,-I found it necessary to capture the city of Ningpo and drive the rebels out under the following circumstances :-

You are aware, sir, that the rebel chiefs had be informed that if they again fired, either on our ships or in the direction of the settlement, we should deem

This morning, at 10 A.M., the Kestrel and French vessels Etoile and Confucius were fired on by the Point battery. I cleared for action in this ship, when a volley of musketry was fired on us from the bastion abreast.

The undermentioned vessels-Ringdove, Kestrel, and Hardy, with the Etoile and Confucius, French gunboats, now opened fire, with Confucius, French gunboats, now opened fire, with shell, on the walls and batteries, which was replied to with much spirit from guns and small arms.

At noon, having silenced the guns and knocked down the battlements, exposing the top of the wall twenty-five feet thick, at a point where I intended to scale, I ceased firing and went to dinner. At two I landed and installed a party of marines, under Mr. Alexander D. Douglas, midshipman, in a house commanding the walls, got scaling ladders ready, and when joined by Lieutenant Kenney, the senior French naval officer, I scaled the walls, meeting with a most determined resistance. Twas here the gallant Kenney, one of the first on the wall, was dangerously wounded.

I now advanced and took possession of the Salt Gate, keeping up a heavy fire on the enemy, who, under cover of the houses, returned it. At 4 P.M. under cover of the houses, returned it. At 4 P.M. I sent the Hardy, Kestrel, and Confucius, with orders to cut away the bridge of boats, pass up, and shell the south and west gates. This duty was most ably performed under a galling fire, kept under by the Conjucius and Hardy, while Lieut. Henry Huxham landed on the bridge, spiked the guns in battery there, while Mr. Leach, assistant-engineer, second class, cut the chains, then opened the bridge, when the three vessels passed up into position.

In the mean time the enemy made desperate efforts to regain the Salt Gate, by front and flank attacks, and in one of these latter the bayonet and spear nearly met; it was when leading on his men in one of these charges that Lieut. W. N. Cornewall fell. Words cannot express our sorrow for the loss of this gallant and amiable officer.

At five o'clock, owing to the flank movements, all opposition ceased, when we passed on to the North Gate, and joined Com. R. G. Craigie, who had scaled the walls and taken the gate with some opposition.

From the masthead the rebels were seen to leave the city, so I returned to the Salt Gate, placed the Taoa-tai and Imperial soldiers, who now landed from their junks, in charge of the city, and re-em-barked our own and the French people.

I was most ably assisted throughout the day by Lieut. Kenny and Monsieur Caligny, commanding the Etoile and Confucius respectively, and the men under their orders; the severe wound which deprived me of the services of Lieut. Kenny is much to be regretted, and the manner in which the Comfucius was handled and fought reflects the highest credit on her commander.

I esteem myself particularly fortunate in having had such able gunboat commanders as Lieuts. Hux-ham and Archibald G. Bogle; the manner in which they worked their vessels in this narrow river, with a spring tide running, and the beautiful practice of their guns when close under the city walls and exposed to round shot and musketry, is beyond ail praise. They speak highly of the conduct of their officers and men.

I have much pleasure in bringing to your notice the conduct of the officers and men under my orders; where all behaved so well distinction would be invidious. Lieutenant Hugh Davis, with Mr. H. H. Rawson, midshipman, commanded the seamen when Lieutenant Cornewall fell. Acting-lieutenant E. C. Tinling, ably assisted by Mr. William Cantlow, boatswain of this ship, got the howitzer on the walls and into action. Mr. James B. Scarlett, assistant engineer, second class, a volunteer, was one of the first on the walls; Dr. A. Irwin, surgeon of this ship, was continually under fire when attending the wounded.

When on the wall, the ship was in charge of Mr. Edmund Swaine, master, and he was of great service with Mr. William Ferns, gunner, in covering our landing with the pivot gun, manned by cooks

Mr. Hewletts, acting interpreter, did good service, in the performance of which, when in company repeatedly exposed to the fire from the wall

I regret that our casualties, a list of which I beg to enclose, are so many; but under the circumstances, considering the vermin nature of these rebels, I felt that if one blow was not followed by another, most serious consequences might result to the foreign settlement, and, the shelling having had but little effect, our very safety rested on the capture of the city.

The delight displayed by the Chinese at the fall of the city, and the driving out their hated oppres sors, was something extraordinary. Throughout the day the bank of the river opposite the city was one sea of heads, and, though round shot and bullets flew plentifully about them, they never moved.

I enclose a plan of the attack.

I have, &c.,

R. DEW, Captain and Senior Officer. To Vice-Admiral Sir James Hope, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief.

ADMIRALTY, July 15. In consideration of the successful engagement bove detailed, the following promotions have taken place, dated this day :-

– Commander Robert George To be Captain. -Craigie.

To be Commander.—Lieutenant Henry Huxham To be Lieutenant.—Acting-Lieutenant Edward Charles Tinling (contingent on passing the required examinations).

The names of the other officers mentioned in the despatch have been favourably noted.

DR. CARTER, F.R.S.—The Bombay Branch Royal Asiatic Society, at a meeting held on the 12th June, recorded a minute expressive of their regret at the resignation of the office of Secretary by Dr. Carter, F.R.S., who has held the office for fifteen years with the greatest benefit to the Society and honour to himself. The Society have presented him with a microscope of the value of a hundred pounds sterling as a mark of their esteem; and have elected him an Honorary Member.

A RIDICULOUS PANIC.—For the last few days an absurd rumour has been industriously circulated among the native community, to the effect that the railway works on the Bhore Ghaut having been frequently interrupted by accident and other causes, Government have resolved to offer a sacrifice of a hundred children to the goddess on the Ghauts; and that for this purpose several Seedees have been employed to kidnap any children they can get hold of in the streets. The vernacular journals, be it said to their credit, are doing their best to undeceive the people in respect to these absurd rumours.

THE SICK-ROOM IN INDIA.—A lofty matted room, in which the venetians are partly, and the glass windows wholly, closed to keep out the blinding glare and fiery heat; a light bedstead, with cotton mattress for his bed, posts, tester, and curtains all mattress for his bed, posts, tester, and curtains air removed; the broad punkah swinging to and fro over his head, and fanning him with mild movements of air already warm; bare white walls around him; the beams and rafters of the flat roof above him all exposed; these are the externals of his sick room. There he lies in his white linen and wide Turkish drawers, upon the surface of his bed, not in it; watching the movements of the punkah as it swings; counting the folds of its deep frill; counting the watching the movements of the punkan as it swings; counting the folds of its deep frill; counting the rafters of the roof; following the silent movements of a lizard, as with sprawling feet he creeps to the musquitoes on the walls and swallows them by dozens; or interested in that delightful cobweb in the corner; where a clever old spider, who has learned many "dodges" in his long experience, draws into his cruel wiles the strongest flies. No cooling breezes laden with fragrance blow for him; dust streams in a very corn window; by day the sir is fire it is still with fragrance blow for him; dust streams in at every open window; by day the air is fire, it is still hot by night; no pleasant songs of birds, no sound of the surf-roar falls upon his ear; no trim maidens wait upon his comfort, speaking the tongue of his child-hood, but grown men are his attendants, impassive though they be gentle, who speak a language every word of which reminds him that he is a stranger in a strange land.—Dr. Mullens's "Brief Memorials of the Rev. A. F. Lacroix."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, July 23, 1862.

INDIAN FINANCE.

WHEN an ex- hancellor of the English Exchequer and the Financial Minister of India come to an open rupture on so simple a matter as the proper mode of keeping accounts, they must not be surprised if individuals less versed in the science of figures distribute, with the impartiality of ignorance, equal blame to both. There is a French saying, Quand les gens d'esprit se battent les sots se mettent aux fenètres, and in the present instance neither of the distinguished disputants has taken the slightest precaution to avoid the scandal of publicity. Sir Charles Wood, indeed, may plead in extenuation of his own outburst of temper the defiant disobedience of his subordinate, as well as the provoking inaccuracy of the data on which he had to found his annual exposition of Indian affairs. On the other hand, Mr. Laing may, not unreasonably, complain that a member of the Vicerov's Council should be saubbed and rated as if he were a mere copying clerk in a second-rate house of business. Whatever his errors and shortcomings, he was entitled to be treated with deference and respect, not only by virtue of his office, but also in acknowledgment of the great services he had rendered in reducing the chaos of Indian finance into something like order and harmony. That his principle was utterly wrong cannot be denied, nor can we commend or justify his persistent disregard of the instructions of the Home Government; but even this should not have brought down upon him a rebuke so severe as to necessitate his resignation of the post which he had filled with such credit and success. It must be sonfessed that Mr. Laing is not himself disposed to take a too modest estimate of his own merits. He is certainly not warranted in assuming to himself the chief credit for having restored confidence throughout India, neither has he any grounds for saying that Sir Charles Wood's despatch of the 9th June "holds (Lord Canning) up to the public of England as a weak ruler, led by an ignorant or unscrupulous Chancellor of the Exchequer into financial blunders which have created a deficit." According to Mr. Laing, when he landed at Calcutta in January, 1861, "the aspect of affairs was full of gloom and danger. The urgency and long continuance of the financial crisis had not only created a general feeling of alarm and insecurity, but had, to a great extent, shaken confidence in the Government. Nearly all classes of the community were, for one reason or other, deeply dissatisfied, and animosities of race and party never ran higher." mate for the military charge at home was stoutly denies the reality of any loss by the were exasperated by the breaking up of the old system and the destruction of their legitimate prospects: the non-official European residents were at open feud with the Lieutenantgovernor of Bengal; while the natives generally were agitated by the fear "of an indefinite succession of new and unpopular taxes." In the midst of all this turmoil and confusion. Mr. Laing-like Neptune raising his placid head above the stormy waves, and husking them into calm repose-fortunately appeared upon the stage, and in less than four months a deficit estimated at upwards of £6,000,000 was extinguished. "The effect in India was great. Confidence in the future and in the Government was almost instantaneously restored, and the chorus of grumbling which pervaded Indian society was changed at once into one of hopefulness and satisfaction." Lord Canning's subsequent measures harmonised with the policy seemingly inaugurated by his Chancellor, and gloom was replaced by cheerfulness, danger by security. After thus sharing so largely in "the signal success of the concluding act of Lord Canning's Indian administration," Mr. Laing feels it impossible any longer to "serve under a Minister who views a material part of that policy so differently as to think that it calls for public censure and disavowal." But Sir Charles Wood had neither penned a line nor breathed a word in disparagement of the late Viceroy's policy. His strictures were confined to the inaccuracies contained in the financial statement for which Mr. Laing alone was virtually responsible, and his complaints were twofold. In the first place he accused the Indian Minister of omitting to debit his account with "loss by railway exchanges," in the teeth of direct orders to that effect; and secondly, of placing a repayment to the credit side as if it his income." And further on he exultantly were a permanent source of income. Properly follow Sir Charles through his able, if sometimes angry, speech of Thursday last.

The Secretary of State for India began by reminding the House of the astonishment that everybody experienced last year on learning that the expenditure for 1860-61 was larger than that for 1859-60, notwithstanding that a considerable reduction had been effected in the outgoings. It turned out, however, that instead of the reported increase of £213,000 there had been an actual diminution to the extent of £4,400,000, and it is positively affirmed that Mr. Laing was aware of this fact when he made his strange contradictory statement. Then in the following year there were two very singular mistakes, one of which involved an error of a million sterling, through an arbitrary manipulation of the Home charges. Similar mis-statements recurred in the estimate for 1861-62, the Indian Government omitting loss by exchange £473,000, and reducing the Home charges by £317,000. The expenditure for that year was estimated at £41,054,000, and the income at £41,294,000, leaving an apparent surplus of £241,000, but an actual deficit of £550,000, after taking due account of the £790,000 omitted. Now, with regard to the deduction from the home charges, Mr. Laing explained that as the esti-

The efficial clames complained that they could nearly the same for 1861-62 as for the previno longer live upon their salaries; military men ous year, whereas a smaller number of troops was maintained in depet, he naturally con cluded that the Accountant's Department of the India-office was in error. This assumption he had clearly no zight to make, and it turned out that there was an arrear of the War-office not belonging to the year in question, but requiring to be paid within it, which had equalised the two statements. "The result was," to quote the Secretary of State," "that the charge for 1861-62 was less than it ought to have been by two sums of £473,000 and £317,000, or a total of £790,000." And to make the matter still worse, Mr. Laing acted upon his supposed surplus by abandoning the License-tax, and causing an actual deficit of £581,000. Again, in 1862-63 the alleged surplus has been converted into a deficit of £285,000, and very much owing to the same causes; that is, by omitting loss by exchange £458,000, and reducing the home charges by £529,000. These omissions bring the estimated surplus of £1,432,000 down to £440,000, and as taxes have been repealed to the extent of £725,000, there remains "a yawning chasm " of £285,000.

Mr. Laing's financial aberrations may be traced to three sources-omission of the loss by exchange, the treatment of repayments as income, and a confusion of ideas with respect to cash balances. To begin with the last first:-In his financial statement he dwells with marked emphasis upon the "unerring accuracy" of the Cash Balances as a test for ascertaining the general result of the Indian financial situation, and goes on to illustrate this position: "If a man makes all his receipts and payments through his banker, and contracts no debts or obligations, the balance in his bank-book at the end of the year must show whether he has or has not lived within anticipates a Cash Balance of £17,050,678 em to understand these charges it is necessary to the 30th April, 1863, "which will exist in actual rupees, and be entirely our own, subject, as far as I am aware, to no extraneous claims or liabilities whatever." No doubt, this is a pleasant prospect for a Chancellor of the Exchequer or for "any other men." Seventeen millions of hard cash, "entirely our own," is the most satisfactory culmination of a financial year that can well be imagined. Unhappily, her Majesty's Secretary of State for India takes great pains to dispel any fond illusion arising from the mere fact of a large balance in hand, and conclusively shows that it is the result not of a monetary plethora, but of borrowing more than was actually wanted. Owing to the urgent representations of the Indian Government power was obtained from Parliament to raise a loan to supplement their anticipated shortcomings, The home expenditure being defrayed in this manner the Indian Treasury was relieved from immediate pressure, and the cash balances consequently accumulated, but not "up to the amount of the excess of the loan." No proof. therefore, can thence be adduced of the largeness of the surplus revenue, any more than the mere fact of a large balance at a bank neces sazily implies freedom from debt, and absence of pecuniary obligations.

The dispute arising out of loss by exchange is a far more complicated question. Mr. Laing operation. It is, he says, purely a matter of account. It cannot be regarded as a charge on the revenue of the year, as it has not been paid in the course of the year, and is owing to no one at its conclusion. But according to the Secretary of State there is an actual bonâ fide loss of twopence in every two shillings expended on railways. The railroad contracts were made at a time when the rupee was worth only 1s. 10d., but it has since risen to 2s., and the difference is the loss incurred by Government, and which has to be made good out of the revenues of India. Of this there can be no question, and yet Mr. Laing refuses to regard as a charge upon revenue that which is to be defrayed out of revenue, merely because the money is not paid as a positive item out of the Treasury. The case is simply this: the Government is credited only 1s. 10d. for 2s., and, consequently, incurs a real and absolute loss of twopence, or in the year of £458,000a sum not to be overlooked, one would suppese, before declaring a surplus.

On the next point the Indian Minister, though wrong in principle, can at least adduce the example of Mr. Gladstone in extenuation, if not in justification, of the system he has pursued. The charge made against him is that of taking credit, as an item of revenue, for the repayment of £700,000 advanced on account of the China war. Undoubtedly this is as much revenue as the million received from Spain, or the anticipated malt credits, which the Chancellor of the Exchequer unhesitatingly used as a pretext for remitting the paper duty. Mr. Laing in like manner thinks himself warranted in remitting a portion of the Incometax, and also of the Import Duties, because he has received an unexpected windfall from the English Government. According to the French system extraordinary receipts are entered in a Supplementary Budget, but as that practice does not prevail in this country there is no alternative but to enter them in the ordinary way as part of the income for the particular year in which they happen to be received. Clearly, however, no remission of taxes should be based on grounds so entirely devoid of permanence. Mr. Laing's defence of his financial exposition betrays the querulousness of illhealth, and at times descends into regular scolding. Instead of contenting himself with a calm enunciation of the reasons that guided his conduct, he indulges in covert sneers and offensively sarcastic remarks at the expense of the Secretary of State, his official superior, and, finally, resigns his post on the plea that undeserved censure had been cast upon Lord Canning's administration. Irritated by the aggressive attitude of his late subordinate, Sir Charles Wood fell into the same error of taste, and spoke at times in almost a contemptuous manner of the Minister who, more than any other man, has aided to restore the finances of India to a healthy condition. What sort of labour this must have been may in some degree be gathered from a retrospective glance at the year preceding the mutiny. In 1856-57, with the exclusion of railways, expenditure and income very nearly balanced each other,-the former being £33,300,000, and the latter £33,375,000, showing a small surplus of £75,000, but, including railway expenditure, there was an actual deficit of £474,000. In 1857-58 the deficit amounted to £8,390,000, in 1858-59 to £14,187,000, in 1859-60 to £10,769,000, in 1860-61 to £4,021,000, and in 1861-62 it was reduced to £595,000, while in 1862-63 it will probably not exceed £284,000, so that in 1863-64 a perfect equilibrium may be anticipated, and even a surplus at least as large as in 1856-57. Of course, everything depends on the maintenance of tranquillity, and the absence of such disturbing causes as famine, pestilence, and rebellion. The present Viceroy has already enjoyed a varied experience in public affairs and in the government of men, and is believed to be guided by sound and liberal principles both as a ruler and a diplomatist. He has commenced his vicerovalty under the most favourable auspices, and though, as Sir Charles Wood justly observed, "We know by past experience that danger may lurk beneath the most tranquil appearance," still a new era does seem "to have dawned upon India, and an amount of improvement is going on of which there has been no example in former times."

CORRESPONDENCE.

AN ORIGINAL SUGGESTION. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-At present there appears to be a discussion regarding the amalgamation of the Royal and the Angle-Indian Army. Now, India, as far as I can see or hear, appears to be a subject which the two Houses of Parliament discuss with little spirit, owing, I should be inclined to suppose, to the fact that few of the peers of the realm have ever seen or resided in India. Now, I would ask whether it is fair that the interests of two hundred millions of people do not demand greater consideration than heretofore, now that India (to use a metaphor) is recovering I have been for years an observant from a fever? eve-witness of India, its people, and its peculiarities, and I can only say that I consider that it would be fair to allow some few officers and civilians, whose rank and position, or merit, would allow them to be deserving of the honour to be honorary members of either House of Parliament, according to their position, to further the interest of India; for, depend upon it, that this question of amalgamation is a measure of no immaterial consequence to England, for our position in India must be maintained by our Indian army, and I have no hesitation in stating that the interests of that army must not be neglected or despised.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS-JULY 17. COVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary for India whether his attention or that of his Council had been directed to the memorials of her Majesty's covenanted civilians, praying for the redress of certain grievances. The right hon, baronet would recollect that he had put the question a couple of times before?

Sir C. Wood said the memorial had been received, but it would require great consideration. There were certain calculations of a very complicated character which would have to be gone through in order to see what the real state of the case was. He quite admitted that the case was one which required action on the part of the India-office, and he could assure the hon. gentleman that the memorial should receive the most careful, and he might say the most favourable consideration.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES OF INDIA.

Mr. A. MILLS asked the Secretary of State for India whether any official information had been received by the Government with respect to the rumoured symptoms of disaffection in the North-West Provinces?

information whatsover upon the subject. He h heard, like the hop. gentleman, that there se to be some movements on the part of the Makemedan population; but he believed there was not the slightest cause for apprehension of any kind.

THE FORCE ON BOARD THE "SANSPAREIL" Colonel Sykes asked the Secretary to the Admiralty whether the 1,000 supernumerary officers, engineers, seamen, and others, said to be now on board her Majesty's ship Sanspareil, under orders for China, were surplus to the regular naval establishment in China, or were intended to fill up vacancies; and, in case they were surplus, how they were to be employed?

Lord C. PAGET said the Sansparell was sent out for the relief of the gunboats in India. There was a considerable number of officers and men whose time had expired, and this ship was sent out with fresh officers and crews. They were not surplus.

VOTE OF CREDIT ON ACCOUNT OF CHINA.

General PEEL said when the right hon. gentleman brought forward his budget he stated that a sum of £500,000 would be referred to China, but he did not know whether it would be necessary to ask for any vote of credit. He wished to know if it was the intention of the right hon. gentleman to ask for any wote of credit or account of China during the present Session, and, if so, whether any portion of it would be applicable to the service of the present year. If not, out of what fund the expenses for the Indian forces which had been voted by Parliament were to be paid?

The CHANCELLOR of the Exchequer said the right hon, gentleman had put a question of which he had not given notice. He could answer only as to the vote of credit. There was no intention to ask for any such vote. There was an unexhausted sura of £700,000 applicable to the expenses of the year. The sum which he estimated for China in the month of March last would stand at £500,000. He was not aware that that vote of credit could be applicable to any operations that had taken place since the pacification of China. The purpose for which it was asked was in order to complete the payments on account of the China war, and his impression was that it must be exclusively confined to settlements of that kind.

THE INDIAN REVENUE ACCOUNTS.

In the evening, the House having resolved itself into a Committee upon East India Revenue Ac-

Sir C. Woon, in moving certain formal resolutions, after a few preliminary remarks, referred to the differences between Mr. Laing and himself on the subject of these accounts, expressing his regret that there should be any personal ingredient in these differences. He complained of the extreme inaccuracy of the accounts transmitted from India, which, he said, had been a source of the greatest annoyance to him, and which deprived the public of the means of knowing what they had a right to know—the real state of the Indian finances. He then proceeded to show, in details of figures, the alleged errors in the accounts furnished from India for the years 1860-61, 1861-62, and the estimate for 1862-63, accompanied by explanations of the sources of the errors, which it is impossible to compress into a summary that would be intelligible. The result in 1862-63 was that Mr. Laing had over-The result estimated his surplus about £1,000,000, and, having remitted taxes to the amount of £725,000. he had really a deficit of revenue in that year. Mr. Laing, he observed, had assumed that, the cash balances in the Indian treasuries having increased, he must have a considerable surplus revenue. Sir Charles argued that this was an untenable assumption, and that Mr. Laing's theory was erroneous. He then discussed the question as to the loss by exchange of the rupee into sterling money in the railway accounts, being 2d. in the rupee, which loss had been omitted in the accounts sent from India, insisting upon the fallacy of the reasons assigned by the Indian. Government for the omission. He disputed Mr. Laing's views upon the subject of the repayment of advances, another disturbing element in the Sir C. Wood said he had received no official accounts, professing his utter astonishment at the arguments he had employed to support and justify these views; and he reiterated his own opinions upon the subject. Having thus cleared the ground, he proceeded to state what the finances Having thus cleared the of India really had been in the last three years:-

The result showed, he observed, a deficit of revenue in each year, which he expected would disappear at the end of the present year, as we were approaching, he thought, a sound system of Indian finance. He stated the progress made in public works in India; and, with respect to cotton, he had been informed, he said, by Sir George Clerk that the growth of cotton had considerably increased. He was decidedly of opinion that the Government ought not to interfere in this matter; that an adequate demand would produce an adequate supply; but all assistance needed by cotton merchants in conducting their own transactions, he added, should be afforded. He adverted to the changes that had been made in the Indian Councils and the Governmental departments, and in the law tribunals in India; to the state of the Civil Service; and to the reductions in the army. He dwelt upon the good effects which had resulted from the policy now pursued towards the native princes of the country, and from the measures taken to create an intermediate class connected with the land between the chiefs and the peasantry. To these measures, the merit of which was due to Lord Canning, the Government had determined, as a proper compliment, to carry out as soon as practicable throughout British India a permanent settlement of land tenures. Our Indian empire, he remarked, had suffered a shock which had left its lesson. Our power had been sustained by military strength; but a source of still greater strength would be found in the attach. ment of the people of India. In conclusion, Sir Charles paid a warm tribute to the character and services of Lord Canning.

Mr. H. D. SEYMOUR thought that Mr. Laing's mistakes were excusable, the Government of India having concurred in his views, and Sir C. Wood not having given him timely notice of the errors. As to some of the questions, Mr. Laing, he thought, whether right or wrong, was not open to animadversion. He urged the necessity of a larger expenditure upon roads in India, and that more discretion should be left to the Government in India. He complained of the present home administration and of the great expense of the department.

Mr. Smollett admitted that there had been a great reduction of expenditure in India and a material advance in the prosperity of the country; but he complained that the management of the Indian finances, a clear and simple matter, was very faulty; that the deficiencies were caused by extravagance; that there was a mystification about railway transactions, and protested against the mixing up of the public money of the Government with the private money of adventurers. Besides railways, the Government patronised other companies, which were floated by means of the mischievous system of guarantees, and hence the derangement of the Indian finances, over which the House did not exercise a proper control.

Mr. Gregson observed that, if there had been no Government guarantee, there would, in his opinion, have been no railways in India. He made a few remarks upon the points in dispute between Sir C. Wood and Mr. Laing.

Mr. VANSITTART blamed Mr. Laing for his hasty ntterance of a prosperity speech, and, upon the ssumption that he had a surplus of £903,814, throwing away a large amount of revenue.

Mr. CRAWFORD accused Mr. Smollett of having spoken of Indian railway companies without s correct knowledge of the facts. Upon the financial questions, particularly with reference to the loss by exchange of the rupee, he explained the effect of the arrangement between the Government and the railway companies, and his own view of the subject, which, to a certain extent, coincided with that of Sir C. Wood. As to the cotton question, ment to interfere. It was a matter of satisfaction to observe, he said, the great extension of the products of India. He expressed his gratification at the statement of Sir C. Wood.

Mr. Kinnaird condemned the manner in which Mr. Smollett had spoken of individuals, and the attack he had made upon the Madras Irrigation Company.

Colonel Dickson defended Mr. Smollett, who, he thought, had justly exposed a scheme that could not be remunerative.

Mr. Buxton said a few words upon the exchange

Colonel Sykes insisted that this question was erely one of accounts, and as to the repayment of advances, the question was not worth discussion. He objected to the large number of European troops maintained in India.

After some remarks by Mr. Marsh, who suggested a tax upon jewellery and ornaments in India,

Mr. PULLER, in the course of his observations upon the questions in dispute, remarked that a good deal of confusion arose from the partial and incomplete character of the Indian accounts.

Sir C. Wood made a detailed reply upon a few points (the Committee having dwindled down to about thirty members), and the resolutions were then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.-JULY 18. BANK OF BENGAL.

Mr. NICOL asked the Secretary of State for India if it was his intention to sanction the clause. No. 28, in a Bill introduced into the Legislative Council of India on the 12th day of February, 1862, entitled "A Bill for regulating the Bank of Bengal," by which clause it was declared that "it shall be lawful for the bank to buy bills of exchange for the purpose of remitting funds to meet bills or letters of credit drawn by the bank in favour of their constituents in the agency department, and to grant letters of credit payable out of India for the use of their constituents in the agency department."

Sir C. Wood said that the subject was one of great importance, and, as it was under the consideration of himself and Council, he could not of course answer the question at present.

INDIAN TROOPS IN CHINA.

General PEEL asked the Secretary of State for War out of what funds the Indian troops in China, who had not been voted by Parliament or provided for in the Estimates, were to be paid.

Sir G. C. LEWIS replied that the reason why the regiments now at Shanghai were not included in the Estimates was, that when the Estimates were prepared, the Government did not anticipate that the Indian regiments would be detained in China. They were, however, detained there in consequence of apprehended danger to the English merchants at Shanghai. In reply to the question as to the mode of defraying the expense, he said that he hoped that the vote for the land forces would not be exceeded; but, if it should turn out that that vote was exceeded, then the ordinary practice in such a case hitherto had been either to apply to the Treasury to sanction a transfer from any other vote in respect to which there might be a saving, or to propose to the House a vote to cover the excess. He believed that it was contemplated to make some alteration in the Appropriation Act this year, and he was not sure, therefore, whether it would be any longer competent for the War Department to make a transfer from one vote to another, and, consequently, should there be an excess of expenditure, it would be necessary to propose a vote to the House for the purpose of covering it.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.-July 21. INDIAN BALANCES.

Mr. Ayron called attention to the large balances held in India and in England on account of the Government of India, and to the manner in which the finance accounts for India laid before the House were made up; and asked whether any part of the balances would be applied to-principles of political economy for the Govern- | which the balances had been increased, and whe ther the finance accounts would be made up in a clearer manner.

> Sir C. Wood replied, observing that the Indian accounts were in the form which had been settled by a Committee of the House, and he did not think it would be advisable to alter it.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY .-- On Thursday, the 17th, the Pasha of Egypt received on board his yacht a deputation of the directors of the Telegraph to India Company, who attended to acknowledge and thank his Highness for the support and assistance they had received in the prosecution of their telegraphic operations in the Red Sea and Egypt. The Pasha signified his gratification that his policy was approved, and promised that in their future proceedings the company may depend upon his Highness's cordial and active assistance, as he considers the telegraph to be a work directly affecting the interests of the world at large.

THE RED SEA AND INDIA TELEGRAPH BILL having received the Royal assent, the next dividend, due on the 4th of August, will be paid at the Bank of England. The transfer books at the office in Moorgate-street are finally closed, and, as soon as the annuitants are duly inscribed in the books of the Bank, transfers will be made there, as in the case of other Government annuities, and will not be liable to stamp duty. The report of the Telegraph to India Company, to be presented on the 25th inst., states that the re-establishment of the line as far as Jubal Island has been attended with satisfactory pecuniary results, since it appears that a revenue of about £7,000 per annum may be expected from it. The investigation of the line between Aden and Kurrachee shows that it cannot be repaired. The question of any new operations will depend upon the resolutions of the Treasury in relation to the Euphrates route.

THE INDIAN RELIEFS .- From 1868 inclusive five battalions will return annually from India, five more being sent out as reliefs. Those to come from India next are the 92nd Highlanders, 74th Highlanders, and 1st battalion of the 13th Light Infantry, all of which went abroad early in 1851. The two regiments that come next in order to return home are the 69th and 68th Light Infantry, which proceeded to India so lately as 1857. But their high place on the roster for return home is, nevertheless, very justly and properly assigned to them. The 69th returned after several years' trying service in the West Indies in May, 1857, but the exigencies of the service rendered it necessary for them to embark for India early in November in the same year. The stay of the 68th in England was still shorter. After the Crimea and some years of service in the Mediterranean, the regiment came home in September, 1857, but they had hardly settled down in garrison at Portsmouth when, from a similar cause. they were sent off to India in December. It would be absurd in either case to call this a tour of home service, and the authorities very properly consider both regiments as having been on foreign service since their previous embarkation for the Mediterranean. There are many other battalions now in India to which, no doubt, similar consideration will be shown. Several of them were at home but a few months from the Crimea when they were again ordered out, and in their case the fair course to pursue would be to relieve them as soon as their regular period of foreign service from the time they went to the Crimea should be prolonged by the time of their sojourn at home. Thus a regiment ordered on the Eastern Expedition early in 1854, and at home a year from July, 1856, would be brought to England about 1865. We are glad to see the authorities taking a more than usually fair and equitable view of the way in which these reliefs should be regulated.-Army and Navy Gazette.

A New SILEWORN.—The Société d'Acelimatation has received a letter from M. G. Simon, now in China, in which he gives an account of a cuhe argued that it would be a violation of the first wards the repayment of the loans by means of rious breed of silkworms inhabiting the province of Che-Kiang, and especially the district adjoining the town of Hangcheoo. The silkworm is much smaller than the common one, but does not differ from it in other respects; it has the same number of legs, the same spots, and is of the same colour; but its habits are much more independent. The butterfly deposits its eggs anywhere, but chiefly on the branches and within the interstices of the bark of the mulberry tree, on the leaves of which it generally feeds. The inhabitants do not attempt to collect these eggs. Early in August -that is, two months after the ordinary silkworm has performed its various evolutions, myriads of minute worms suddenly make their appearance on the bark of the mulberry tree, and invade the new crop of leaves which has made its appearance. They grow fast, the gardeners doing nothing more than protect them from the birds by casting nets over the trees, which are all dwarfed. As these silkworms make their appearance unexpectedly, as it were, and yield a second crop of silk without any trouble, they are called Tien-tze, or children of heaven, by the people. The warmer the winter has been, the greater is the number of these worms; they bear a temperature of 25 deg. Fahrenheit very well. Their existence as silkworms does not exceed three weeks; at the end of that time they congregate under the leaves, which they bind together, and then spin their cocoons, an operation which takes them three days. A week later, their metamorphosis is complete; the cocoon is perforated, and the butterfly comes out. The cocoons are extremely small, but from 15 to 18 kilogrammes of them yield one of silk; they are wound off in hot water like the The pekul (604 kilogrammes) of cocoons fetches from 9,000 to 10,000 sapeks (36 to 40 francs) in the market. The Chinese do not use this silk alone, but mix it with the other .- Galig-

THE ARMY IN CHINA.—A return issued from the War-office shows that the army in China, officers and men, consists of 4,359 troops of her Majesty's service; 1,556 of her Majesty's Indian service (Bengal and Punjab Native Infantry); and 70 gun Lascars. With the exception of some persons connected with the commissariat, and store and barrack departments, they are receiving Indian allowances.

PLYMOUTH, July 18.—The steamship Mauritius, 2,135 tons, James Smyth, commander, one of the fleet belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company, passed at 11 A.M. this day for Madras and Calcutta direct. She had be tween 400 and 500 troops on board, composed principally of the royal artillery and royal horse artillery. There was also a good complement of passengers and a full general cargo.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT .- (Foreign-office, July 18).—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Arnold Otto Meyer as Consul at Singa-pore for the Free Hanseatic City of Hamburg. The Queen has also been pleased to approve of Mr. Arnold Otto Meyer as Consul at Singapore for the Free Hanseatic City of Bremen.

SUTHERLAND EDWARDS.

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

—Daily News, Jan. 37, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

miner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner.

Ancedotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1863.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in thesis performances.

A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA: showing the British MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £3. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA committed.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the nails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Bouthampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southsmpton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which ease they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE only intelligence of general interest received by the Calcutta Mail of the 21st June is the confirmation of a previous statement as to the short supply of cotton to be expected from India. There will actually be a smaller quantity shipped this year than was the case last season, and the only assistance from that quarter to be looked for by our starving operatives in Lancashire is in the unsatisfactory form of pecuniary subscriptions. Collections for their temporary relief are, however, being made in all parts of India, the natives cordially co-operating with the Europeans according to the measure of their means.

The Commander-in-Chief appears to have given offence to the military community by issuing a circular letter inviting the officers to set aside a day's pay for the Prince Albert Memorial. It is to be regretted that Sir Hugh Rose should have acted in such an injudicious and courtier-like manner, and should so completely have misunderstood the true character of a national movement, which unless it be spontaneous is utterly worthless.

In Bengal Proper the struggle between Planter Zemindars and their native tenants is still going on, but in the Nuddea district many of the ryots have been prevailed upon to resume the cultivation of indigo. The same defects that were shown before the Indigo Commission to belong to the culture of that plant are now proved to attach in almost equal degree to the cultivation of the poppy in Behar. The allegations of the Hurkaru's correspondent, though exaggerated in expression, are admitted to be substantially true, and the local Government has promptly applied itself to the redress of the ryots' grievances.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal was to start from Calcutta on the 23rd of June on a tour through the Sonthal district, after which he proposed to travel through Assam, and judge with his own eyes of the present condition and future prospects of that promising

If the latest accounts from Burmah be well founded, the King of Ava, like others of his royal brethren, has made the discovery that a throne is no bed of roses. The internal state of his country is described as little better than anarchy, bands of armed robbers pillaging in all directions, and violating even British territory. It is not from the British Government, however, that his Golden Footed Majesty anticipates the most imminent danger, but from his heir apparent, who is represented as entirely influenced by the French Agent at Mandalay. The Chief Commissioner intended to Mandalay. The Chief Commissioner intended to Digitized by ticipates the most imminent danger, but from

The rumoured reverse sustained by the allied forces in China turns out precisely as we anticipated in our last Summary. weak Sepoy detachment garrisoning Kah-ding had been compelled by superior numbers to retire to Shanghai, and the whole of the surrounding country was in the hands of the rebels. A recent telegram alluded to the cooperation of a pirate fleet with the Imperialist forces, and some writers in this country seem to have been scandalised by the possibility of a British admiral acting in concert with a corsair. They appear to forget that it was this same pirate, A' Pak, who, in 1854, assisted the Ningpo authorities in destroying the piratic Portuguese fleet that infested the waters of the river Yung, and in recognition of his services was created a mandarin of the third class. For the rest, as Mr. Wingrove Cooke observed in 1857, in one of his admirable letters to the

"China always has been, and always must be, a country of frequent revolutions, secret societies, and powerful robbers. In all former times, whenever some great event lights up for a moment the historic gloom in which the common people live and suffer, we find all these influences strongly working.

The land was always full of them. When the Tartars possessed themselves of Ching one of these bendit shifts hed in the first services. full of them. When the Tartars possessed themselves of China, one of these bandit chiefs had just possessed himself of Pekin, and the last of the Ming race had just hanged himself. In 1635 the interior contained eight separate rebel armies, each with its leader, its set of grievances, and its appetite for plunder. It was a pirate who drove the Dutch out of Formosa; the son of a 'celebrated pirate' who helped the Cantones to defend their interior that the Cantones are defend their t tonese to defend their city against the Tantars; and it was a pirate who, the other day, destroyed the Portuguese piratical fleet at Ningpo. In all ages, and at all times, China has been coasted by pirates, and traversed by bands of robbers."

THE FORTIFICATIONS OF DELHI.

We believe that the up-country papers are in error when referring to the movement which took place soon after the fall of Delhi, for the destruction or retention of the fortifications of that city. If we recollect rightly, the destructive policy as regards the defences prevailed and got utterance in Calcutta, and the retention policy at Lahore. Not long after the British army captured the place, and our victorious columns opened the roads through the Doab, an engineer was sent up from Agra to demolish the fortifications and fill up the ditch with the debris of the walls, bastions, &c. A pause, however, took place, owing to the inconvenient expense which would be incurred in carrying out the work, amounting to several lakhs of rupees; and, meanwhile, the pro-ject finding its way up to Lahore, that wise and provident man, Sir John Lawrence, registered his opinion regarding the destruction of the Delhi defences in a few words of the following purport-" Don't; you do not know when you may want them." In those days the advice of that clear-headed, far seeing, and strong would not be very advisable to ignore it, or act contrary to it. Now, Sir John Lawrence, incapable of being carried away by blind feelings of revenge, as he was of being moved by craven feer, saw clearly that the British multitude was, at that time, incapable of judging calmly and dispassionately of its own future interests in this country, and he lost no opportunity of guiding its judgment, and restraining any vindictive impulses which were naturally excited by the horrors of the mutiny. His plea for the retention of the Delhi fortifications was recorded in this spirit, after mature and calm deliberation, as was, about the same time, his advice regarding the expulsion of a considerable number of Poorbeak soldiers from one of the Sikh regiments which served at Delhi, and which soldiers, having been left behind as untrustworthy when the corps took the field, were ordered to rejoin it after the capture of the place, and when the British star was again rising high in the ascendant. The Sikhs strongly and naturally objected to these natives of Hindustan Proper, who could not be trusted in the day of difficulty and danger, rejoining after the work was over, to share in the many promotions occasioned by the campaign, and the officer commanding desired that they should be dismissed; but Sir John's remark was precisely the same as in the case of the fortifications—" Don't: you do not know when you may want them." It must be admitted that the advisability of retaining or of demolishing these fortifications is both a serious and a difficult question. Our opinion is in favour of retaining the fortifications in their integrity. They were constructed especially to protect the city against danger from the north-west, and there may still some day be danger in that direction. It costs but little to keep them in repair, and it will cost a great deal to demolish them. We want a stronghold in that part of our territory, and it would be folly to destroy one which is ready to our hand. Government should, however, before any action is taken in this matter, point the attention of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to it, and get his opinion on the subject in a military and strategic point of view. Should this be done, we shall be very much surprised if his Excellency should not agree with Sir John Lawrence, and advise that the fortifications be retained and kept in good repair. We do not believe that the fortifications of Delhi cause unhealthiness in that city; and it is now well known, since it has been occupied by British troops, that its insalubrity was much and unfairly exaggerated in former years. The native inhabitants of Delhi would be found, if consulted in the matter, one and all averse to the destruction of the fortifications; and the most peaceful and timid would be numbered amongst the strongest opponents of the measure; as they asserted that mass of the surrounding population, and who would visit it nightly to rob, and to murder if opposed. We do not see that these assertions deserve much weight, as other cities, which are not walled, and are surrounded with a Goojur population, are safe from plunder and outrage. The question under notice is entirely one of policy and of military strategy; and we should be glad to hear of its being settled for or against the fortifications .- Englishman.

ALARMS FALSE AND TRUE.

"There is always something unpleasant oc-curring in India," was the remark of a well-known journalist when exaggerated accounts of the disturbances in Affghanistan reached England. It is impossible that something unpleasant should not always be occurring in or near to an empire which is as large as Europe without Russia, and is filled with turbulent peoples of various creeds and races; and it is improbable that the unpleasant events will not generally be misunderstood or magnified by English communities who have learned such lessons as those of 1839 and 1857; and who, in the isolation of up-country stations, in the depth of the hot season and in the absence of all political excitement, take refuge in such gossip as provincial towns always indulge in. For some weeks rumours have been industriously propagated in the cities of Upper India, such as preceded the catastrophe of 1857. Now all the English of Agra, including even the large European force in the division, were te be poisoned. Again, assassination or massacre in cold blood was to be the fate of the Christians. There and in Lucknow, the local journals tell us, the very day for the outburst was fixed, but on the fatal morning the sun shone out brightly as ever, and the papers appeared as usual. The panic spread, men looked to their rifles, and even ladies to revolvers, as they had not done for years. It was seen that troops were being moved and arsenals inspected, that military men were active with excitment. The native bazaars caught, if they did not communicate, the infection, which spread to Calcutta, where native speculators, unwilling yesterday to sell their Government five and a half securities at twelve and a-half premium, offered them eagerly to-day at less. In a panic people do not reason. The timid of Agra did not think of the absurdity of four hundred sepoys-for that was the strength of the native troops-thinking of attacking or poisoning a European force four times their number. They did not think of the 44,000 English soldiers in Northern India, more than there were in all India in 1857. They recalled with horror the scenes through which they passed in 1857, they remembered the incredulity, the culpable blindness of the authorities then, and re-solved to be prepared. They were right. But we must protest against the style in which local journalists have written of English fears, while declaring that they are not alarmists. cries have been translated into native papers from Calcutta to Lahore, and create the very evil which they imagine to exist. The attitude of Englishmen in India should be a dignified calmness, not a morbid fear, a vigilance which watches every straw, and is prepared for every contingency, not a terror which scents a foe in the passing breeze and cries out its alarms in the streets.

What are the facts? So far as we have been able to ascertain them they are these. The Ulema of the great mosque at Mecca have issued what may be termed a bull or pastoral to "the faithful' throughout the world. Bewailing the immorality of the present day, declaring that we have fallen on evil times when even the Muslim lead wicked lives and the true followers of the Prophet follow the ways of the infidel, the letter declares that hell is very full, and that the number of women largely predominates there. The high-priest of Islam calls on all "the faithful" to amend their ways, because the time is at hand when Mahomet and Jesus Christ will appear in Mecca, and while the former takes plundered by the Goojurs, who constitute the go forth to make Islam triumphant and bring in the last days. On the face of it this document is purely moral in its character. As with us, the second advent is a cardinal doctrine with all Mahommedans: and the Koran as well as tradition always blasphemously represents Christ as the vice-regent of Mahomet. The remarkable thing is that the letter does not mention Imam Mehndee, that twelfth Imam who has hitherto formed the great subject of Mussulman prediction, but puts Christ in his place. That there is a hidden political meaning under this it is for those who have most studied the Mussulman writings and people to judge. This is the cause of the excitement in the native mind, which probably would not have attracted more attention than the seditious proclamations of the coming of Imam Mehndee in 1859 in the Punjab, but for the action of the gallant officer who commands at Agra. Brigadier Colin Troup has tasted the bitterness of Affghan captivity, and felt the strength of Moslem fanaticism. He saw the storm of which 1839 was but the prelude in the massacres of 1857. And so, attaching importance to this circular letter, he has taken certain military precautions on his own authority. These, coupled with the recal of the artillery officers to Meerut, in consequence of the mutinous language of a gunner, and with the orders of the Commander-in-chief to officers not to be absent from their regiments when cholera broke out, have swelled the tide of suspicion. There is a new viceroy, whose misaj the natives are yet ignorant of, and who has not yet declared himself on any great public question; there is a perfect lull of intelligence and political action; the season has been very hot, and so a cause for vigilance is exaggerated by certain nervous persons who have not yet recovered from the terrors of 1857, into a serious ground for fear.

We do not deny the existence of an uneasy feeling in the native mind generally. As a nation at once powerful and Christian we were very merciful in taking vengeance. As rulers, thanks to Lord Canning, we lost the two precious years 1858 and 1859, when the people were still quivering with fear and expected us to deal with them as they deal with each other. That delay not only gave confidence, but inspired them with a sort of wondering contempt for us. And it was followed by taxation tardily imposed because openly resisted by Sir Charles Trevelyan, and by Lord Canning's native policy, admirable in itself, but, like all Indian political hobbies, ridden to death. That native policy, too, it must be remembered, has been spurned by the Mussulman chiefs. Would the Nawab of Rampore have received the insignia of the Star of India if he had not been a Mussulman? Before a Mussulman noble a British resident has more than once degraded the English name and trailed English honour in the dust. It is a Mussulman who has been allowed, by the late Bengal Government, to insult her Majesty's Agent, her Majesty's Viceroy, the Prince of Wales, the Queen herself. If to all this we add the fact that the Nana is still at large, that his agent Rao Saheb nearly succeeded in buying over the whole city of Hyderabad, and that there are many officers in India whom the mutiny and its horrors have affected for life, we see the origin of these alarms and at the same time the reason for vigi-

The cause, not for fear, but for preparation, is to be found in the character and declared policy of Mahomedanism and its fanatic devotees. While political writers in England and well-meaning philanthropists delude themselves with the idea that, because the existence of Turkey seems essential to the status quo in Europe, Mahomedan-ism is divesting itself of that blind hate, hideous lust, and fanatic intolerance which go far to obscure the grand principle of monotheism which it borrowed from Judaism, no man who has read the Koran or mixed with Mussulmans can fail to believe that a struggle will come between Mahomedanism and Christianity compared with which the rebellion of 1857 is trifling. We do not allude to Christian prophecy—that is, for the theologian. We speak of Mussulman writings, traditions, aspirations, daily prayers and conversations. The Mecca but for the walls the city would be constantly his place on the great black stone the latter will daily prayers and conversations.

Pastoral we do not believe to be an immediate warning of an Indian revolt, but to be part of a general notice to Islam throughout the world to be ready. The conflict may be yet distant-for we know of whom it is said that a thousand years are with Him as one day. So long as Turkey is strong Mecca is weak. But a fanatic Sultan is all that is wanted to precipitate the issue. Will those who write so complemently of the reformed character of Mahomedanism explain this prayer, which is offered up in every mosque throughout Islam every Friday, and which may be heard in the Durrumtollah mosque in Calcetta from the mouths of the men on whom Sir Charles Wood bestowed fifty-two lakhs of the "infidels'" money? This prayer was copied by one of the first Arabic scholars of the East in the Cairo great mosque, and by him translated, "O Lord, save the Sultan and destroy the infidels. O Lord, cause their feet to slip and sully their colours, and bring shame apon their women and make their children orphans, and cause them to waste away with grief, and their descendants and their women and their cattle (to become) a prey to the Moelems."

We share not in the alarms, we regret the un-English tone of the alarmists. But, believing that the next and last struggle of England for supremacy in Asia will be with Mahommedanism, we say—watch. Especially look to Hyderabad, lest it prove a second Delhi. We want a Henry Lawrence there.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE VICEBOY IN A DIFFICULTY.-If the "Own Correspondent" of the Delhi Gazette, or other nervous up-country journal should unfortunately happen to have been on the spot when Lord Elgin took his constitutional last evening (June 16), we shall probably hear in due course that Calcutta is in a state of siege, and the Viceroy held hostage at that "second Delhi," Russapuglah. His lordship really was, at the very outset of his ride, attacked in flank by some native ragamuffins, the chief of whom presented full at -a large roll of paper, apparently a petition, but quite big enough for conversion into a blunderbuss, by the time the report of it reached In vain the bodyguard rode between the attacking party and the beleaguered potentate, the two principals dedged them and roared the louder to the "Lat Sahib." For about three quarters of a mile a running fire was kept up; nothing daunted by the side-de-camp's orders or even by the Viceroy's indigment order to be off, the besiegers stuck to their assault, gathering in number as they went, until a promiscuous police inspector happened to turn up at a corner of the road, and by a judicious manœuvre of body guards, aides, and policemen, his Lordship was rescued at a juncture when nothing could have saved him otherwise from an ignominious retreat by fairly galloping away from We presume now that his pertinacious followers. the Viceroy has been a sufferer there may be a hope of the police turning their attention to some of the nuisances which result from the growing insolence of the lower class natives in our streets. -Englishman.

THE BENGALI PRESS .- The Indian Reformer says that of late the Bengali Press has become very active. "Every day almost a new volume, whether in prose or in verse, issues from the vernacular press, and Bengali authors are already numbered by hundreds." The works are said to be marked by "poverty of thought, meanness of conception, and effeminacy of style. Every one who can write a decent letter publishes a book; and the man who can versify in jingling rhyme sets himself up for a poet." In face of the publishing activity we do not regret the poverty of the works. Those who see only the surface of native society have no idea of the immense demand for books among Bengalis. Annually an improvement will appear in the character of the supply. At present Christian native writers on topics other than religious are as much wanted as preachers.

A NATIVE VIEW OF PERSURY .- The crime of perjury has become so prevalent in Bengal that unless Government takes some stringent measures to put it down we see no remedy for this evil. There is, indeed, a law that makes perjury penal, but that law is only a nominal one, we see no good from it. Without referring to other presidencies; in this the presidency of Bengal alone, the crime of perjury has grown to so fearful an extent that, on a low calculation, we take it that two thousand false witnesses commit the crime of perjury every day. It is not that our officials are ignorant of this fact, but we ask, how many per-jurers are convicted and punished every day? We hear occasionally of one here and there being punished, but our conviction is, that not one in a thousand is punished. What remedy is there when our judges are so slack in punishing perjury? Our judges are not indeed heart-seers, to be able to see the truth or otherwise of a case when brought forward falsely, and supported by false evidence. Since, therefore, every case must be decided by evidence, and since life and property are in peril by the amount of perjury which is so prevalent now; it becomes the duty, not only of Government but of every gentleman, of every philanthropist, of every respectable ryot to do his utmost to put down this frightful evil. Let this be done at once or we see no remedy. If our judges, having at heart the good of the country, will determine strenuously to punish with severity every case of perjury and subornation of perjury, the crime will soon diminish. There are many people in Bengal who are professional perjurers, and get their living by it, and by no other means. the Supreme Court of Calcutta, the Police Court, the Court for Small Causes, the Sudder, and every court in the Mofussil be searched and the perjurers will be discovered. They give evidence almost in every case that occurs within their beat, committing the crime of perjury for a few annas. Some of them are so daring that they constantly change their names; sometimes professing to be Hindus, sometimes Mahomedans, and thus go the round of the different courts. We remember hearing an aneodote of a case that occurred in former days in one of the Mofussil Courts. A Hindu perjurer once appeared to give evidence before a judge; he was dressed as a Mahomedan, but had the marks of a Hindu on his forehead; the judge was puzzled at his appearance, and not knowing of what religion the man was, proceeded to interrogate him thus: Tum Koran ki Bible utowega, kia Gunga panet lewga (will you be sworn on the Koran or Bible, or on the water of the Ganges?) The perjurer replied instantly, Khodawand! jisma lagow (just as you wish). All religions denounce liars as deserving of hell, but do not those who cause others to commit perjury think for a moment how they are incurring the hot anger of God by this sin? What! have they no other means of getting money; better dig-become a slaveay, beg, rather than commit this awful sin. Paridarshak (native newspaper).

Dennis Hely, for whose apprehension on account of his complicity in the affray attended with murder in the Soonderbuns last November a reward of Rs. 2,000 was offered, has been captured, we hear, at Debroogurh in Assam, after having made a vain attempt to penetrate into Burmah through the fleroe tribes on that frontier. He will be tried before the next sessions of the Supreme Court. One native has already been sentenced to death by the Sudder for complicity in this affair. A Mr. Schmidt, a tea-planter, who was kind to Hely, not knowing that he was fleeing from justice, has been charged with concealing him, but set free on bail.

THE MUSBEE SIKHS.— The Simla correspondent of the Englishman states that the 23rd N.I., or Musbee Sikhs, a corps which was raised to serve as pioneers, is on its way to Simla to assist in the construction of a road into Thibet. Sir Sidney Cotton lately tried to induce the military authorities to give him a European regiment for similar work near the new Punjab sanitarium of Cherat, but unsuccessfully.

HIBSAR, June 15 .- In all parts of India cholers is raging with more or less violence; nor are we exempt from it here. It is not many days since the first rumours of its having made its appearance in this division made themselves heard, and now there is not one district that is exempt from its visitation. Sad accounts come into this, day by day, and although every precaution man can devise is adopted by the authorities. every thing appears to fail in staying its dreaded progress. On a report reaching Sir Robert Montgomery that cholera was making its way towards this part of the country, he at once addressed himself to our Commissioner, recommending that should the disease make its appearance in any of the gaols, such as were the scenes of attack should be immediately cleared out of all their occupants; precautions being taken to ensure the safe custody of the prisoners during the time they might be kept under canvass. It is the intention, should the gaols have to be vacated, to have them well fumigated and afterwards thoroughly cleansed out and whitewashed, as it it hoped that by this means the buildings may be quickly rendered wholesome for the reception of the prisoners, should it be found that a residence under canvass is prejudicial to their health.

THE CIRCULATION OF CHUPATTEES .-- A sionary sends to the Delhi Gazette the following account of the origin of the custom of sending chupattees or cakes from village to village, which preceded the mutiny, and has been revived in some districts again. "A Hindu woman when leaving her mother's house to go to that of her husband's asked her brother to grant her some particular thing, which he refused to do. As she slowly left the house she looked back and saw her brother together with his wife turned to pillars of stone. Not knowing what to do she sat there and began to weep. In the mean time a fakir came by and asked her what was the matter; she told him, on which he told her to get a cup of water and some gourdhani and to sit by them, with her eyes shut and in silence. She did so, and on opening her eyes found to her joy that they had both come to life again. Hence arose the superstition that every sister is required to send gourdhani to her brother either on Monday or on Friday, for which he in return may give whatever he pleases. This custom is a new thing in most of the cities, but it is apparently entirely confined to the lower classes, and from the fact of gourdhani being a common food of the villagers, it would seem as if the oustom had arisen among them, and is now imported into the town. The most plausible account assigned for its distribution is that it is intended to ward off pestilence."

SRINUGGUR, CASHWERE, May 21 .- The weather has been very unsettled and very unusual, it has been very raw and gusty for some time; on the 6th about 5 r.m. there was a severe shock of an earthquake; on the 14th and 15th it rained hard for some thirty-four hours without intermission, after which it snowed for four or five hours. The valley remained white for some time, the river rose very much, so high that the Maharajah's officials collected boats at ten different bungalows occupied by visitors, fearing a flood, when all of them would have been obliged to bolt. The mint is one of the places visitors sometimes drop in to see. The letters I.H.S. introduced by old Goolab Singh into the coinage, are still continued. What appears very strange is, that nothing but Austrian and Prussian dollars are melted down to make rupees! All the account the people can give is that they get them from the Punjab. It would be interesting to know what state of the market induces parties to send such coin out of the country where they are current; the dollars or thalers generally bear date of the last century .- Delhi Gazette.

THE BENGAL COAL COMPANY have declared a dividend of Rs. 80 per share on the operations of the half-year ending 30th April. The deliveries from the depots amounted to 1,871,402 maunds, or 237,044 in excess of any previous half-year. The total out-turn was 2,319,450 maunds. The late abundant rice crop lessened the supply of labour.

RANEEGUNGE, June 17 .- A'man named Abdool had contracted with an assistant engineer of the line near this for the performance of some work. The man refused, or rather failed, to perform the extent of work he had contracted for; it may even be said he had not worked off the advances he had received. The engineer, who is responsible to his employers for all money passing through his hands, was not unnaturally anxious to see the work completed; but the means he adopted neither law nor reason can sanction. He took the law into his own hands; had Abdool seized and thrust into a small dark godown devoid of ventilation; and not satisfied with this, although the man's confinement extended over three days, flogged him into a state of insensibility. Subsequent to this the man was liberated, and at once summoned his tormentor to answer for the indignities and punishment he had inflicted in a court of law. The trial is now pending, and is the cause of most unusual excite-ment in this ordinarily quiet place. The treatment to which Abdool has been subjected has greatly alarmed the natives who are now working on the line. How the case will terminate appears exceedingly doubtful, but of this there can be no doubt, that the Assistant Engineer referred to had better for the future provide himself with a copy of the Indian Penal Code and study its provisions. If he does so, he will learn that he has placed himself within its grasp, he will find that he has subjected himself to imprisonment for one month, and a fine of 500 Rs. for incarcerating his victim alone: the chastisement involving still further penalties. By section 340 it is enacted "that whoever wrongfully restrains a person in such a manner as to prevent that person from proceeding beyond a certain circumscribed limit, is said to have wrongfully confined that person," the punishment for which I have given above. It may not be without effect if the offender in this case is made to pay the penalty of his unjustifiable treatment of the man whom he imprisoned and chastised.—Englishman.

THE HIGH COURT.-The Hindoo Patriot states that Mr. Cochrane, the present official assignee of the Supreme Court, intends to resign his office on the establishment of the High Court, and join the bar of the new Court. According to the Phanix, the judges of the new Court propose to divide legal practitioners into the following three classes :- 1. Professionals of the grade of barristers, whose line will be that of pleading, and not below pleading; 2. Professionals privileged to plead in Court, and also to act as agents for preparing cases; 3. Professionals not privileged to plead, but entitled to act as agents in the preparation of cases. An attorney of the Supreme Court has already obtained his sunnud to plead as a member of class 2.

THE PAPER CURRENCY .- The Gazette pub lishes the following statement of the amount of Government Currency Notes in circulation, of the amount of coin and bullion reserve, and Government securities held by the Department of Issue of Paper Currency on the 31st May, 1862:

	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Madras.	Total.

reserve		99,00,000		99,00,000
curities	43,48,861			43,48,861

This is fair after two months' trial. Steadily the circulation is rising above the limit of four millions. Government is over-prudent in as yet investing only 43½ lakhs.

THE "BENTINCK."-Government has ordered the assembling of a committee, of which Lieut.colonel Paton, of the Quartermaster-general's Department, is president, and the master-attendant and other officers are members, to proceed on board the hospital ship Bentinck, and arrange for the internal fittings-up of the vessel. The committee are also to frame, or suggest, the rules for the internal economy of the Bentinck, including scents availing themselves of the sanitary advantages of the floating hospital, and all other matters connected with the general management. We are glad to hear that it is the intention of the Government to extend to the general public the valuable privilege of resorting to the Bentinck for cure or convalescence, in cases of serious indisposition, with simply a reserved preference and right of prior claim for its own officers in case of a pressure upon the accommodation and resources of the ship.

Volunteer Rifle-shooting in Oude.-On Saturday evening last, Mr. Yule, our Chief Commissioner, awarded prizes to the two successful competitors, Messrs. Watkins and Forrester, who had shot for and won them some days previously, an account of the shooting having appeared in our last issue. All the leading members of the community, together with a goodly number of ladies, were present. Mr. Campbell, as colonel of the corps, introduced first Mr. Watkins, and then Mr. Forrester to the Chief Commissioner. who, in presenting the prizes, complimented each of them on their regular attendance at drill, and the progress they, together with the corps generally, had made in the acquirement of military science. The first prize of Rs. 100 for Mr. Watkins was contained in a velvet purse, with the words "Lucknow Rifles, 1862," neatly worked on it by Miss Yule. Having received it with thanks from the hands of the Chief Commissioner, Mr. Watkins asked to be presented to Miss Yule, and being so presented by Mr. Campbell he thanked that lady for her beautiful gift, Mr. Campbell remarking that he hoped the purse would be preserved long, long after the contents had been spent. Mr. Forrester received the second prize of six splendidly-bound volumes of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." We regret that the attendance of volunteers was very scanty, not more than four or five being present, and they not even in uniform. We could not have believed them to be so very indifferent to taking part in a ceremony convened in honour of two of the most distinguished of their own body. However, we trust that the excellent remarks addressed to those present by Mr. Campbell will have reached the ears of the absentees, and that they will be productive of the most wholesome effect for the fu ture. The ceremony, though not long, was very gracefully conducted, and seemed evidently to be a source of satisfaction to all.—Outh Gazette.

GAIETIES AT SIMLA .- The gentleman visitors at Simla, civil and military, have tried their skill at cricket, against the mercantile and uncovenanted of the station, with ill success, although the former had on their side Sir Charles Oakley and Captain Walker, two of the best players in the upper provinces. The return-match was played on Saturday, June 7th, with the same result as the first, although a few of the old station hands were absent at a picnic. People in business here close at 2 P.M. on Saturdays, and a similar indulgence is considerately granted to the uncovenanted with army head quarters. Enjoyment at the waterfalls, the cricket ground, or the public garden, is then the order of the day. A Glee Club has been formed amongst the staff and visitors of the station, and with great success, although the prima donna of Simla in private concerts is unfortunately absent just now. Sir Hugh Rose's dinner party on the 5th was followed up, under his Excellency's roof, by a concert, ball, and supper, the Glee Club assisting at the former, aided by Herr Wymer, well known in Calcutta as a pianist of high order, and formerly director of the artillery band, now of that belonging to the 2nd battalion rifle brigade, whose excellent music charms us thrice a week. A soiree musicale is announced for the 18th, by Herr van Den Heuvel, master of the 7th Hussars band. He will be assisted by Herr Wymer and the amateurs of the Glee Club, and a great treat is anticipated.

A PLEASANT STATE OF SOCIETY .ber last an affray took place at Surulia, a village in the Sunderbuns, between a Zemindar and a party belonging to Mr. Morell, an enterprising the internal economy of the Bentinck, including landlord in the vicinity. Such affrays have been the rates to be charged to patients and convaled only too common, and Mr. Morell, having applied decamping to the hills.—Englishman.

in vain for the protection of the police, was obliged to protect himself. He is the gentleman who was pointed out, and so deservedly, in one of Sir J. P. Grant's Indigo minutes, as a model settler and an example to all indigo planters. This last affray was headed by a Mr. Hely, formerly of the Yeomanry Cavalry, and by a native. Being attended with loss of life, months after the occurrence the police offered a reward of Rs. 2,000 for the apprehension of each. The delay in taking steps for their capture was as culpable as the neglect in not establishing a sufficient police force in the district, for thirty-four of the subordinates implicated have been sentenced by the Sudder to penal servitude for life and one to death. As if this were not sufficient to show the evil of bad government or the denial of all government in some parts of Bengal, a second case has arisen out of this and was decided yesterday in the Calcutta Supreme Court. Believing that Hely was sheltered by Mr. Ackland, manager of one of the Raneegunge collieries, the Calcutta police authorities sent up a warrant to search the house. It was accompanied by three European inspectors, and was endorsed by Mr. Tweedie, a young assistant magistrate of the station. Accompanied by his own European constable and native police, he joined the Calcutta party, and in the dusk of the evening, in plain clothes, the whole went to Mr. Ackland's house. An altercation took place, Ackland applied at first to the disguised magistrate and constables language of a most disgraceful character and slightly pushed Mr. Tweedie, asserting that he believed magistrate and constables to be loafers. Hely was not found. Since Ackland declined to apologise, Mr. Tweedie brought a criminal charge against him of assault and obstructing the magistrate in the discharge of his duty. The Jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty."—Friend of India.

GOWHATTER, June 7.- Instructions have been received here from the Board of Revenue to raise the assessment on land others than rice-producing land, or, as it is called here, non-rooput, from one rupee to one rupee two annas the poorah. This latter is the rate which was originally fixed for Nowgong, and it is said has been introduced here in pursuance of instructions from the Secretary of State for India, to increase the assessment on all lands, other than rooput or rice lands throughout the province. Some time back a report was called for from all the civil and revenue officers of the province, of the different descriptions of soil prevailing in their sub-divisions or districts, and of the nature and average value of the crops produced on each. It was understood at the time that the object in calling for this report was to ascertain the different qualities of soil and of the crops it produced, and on it to frame one general system of assessment for each description of soil. A measure of this kind would have done much good, but a general assessment on all lands, not rice lands of a uniform rate, without regard to the value of the crop each description of soil will produce, will have just the contrary effect. It will necessitate the demand by producers of an enhanced rate for the lower orders of crops, without any corresponding reduction in the better classes. It will have the effect of making sustenance of life a still more arduous task to an already impoverished people. There are certain lands which can well afford to pay a far higher assessment than they do, but there are other and poorer soils which are already greatly over assessed. At the present time nothing can be more impolitic than to introduce any changes, the benefit of which is not at once apparent to the people, but to order a heavier assessment than heretofore to be levied on these lands, is rank insanity. The hill people are troublesome enough in all conscience, but as though that was not sufficient, here is the Government doing its best to raise as much disaffection among the people in the plains as its own folly has already created in the hills. If this order for enhancing the assessment of non-rooput lands be carried into effect, it would not surprise me to hear of whole villages

SILK IN THE PUNJAB.—At Daria Pattan, on the Upper Ravee, lives a Kashmeree named Jafir. For the last twenty years he has been engaged in rearing silk worms, an art which he first learned at Peshawur. He finds his own acclimatised eggs better than those brought from the hills, and preserves them through the hot weather in a place underground. The worms are spread out in low mud huts or even in small tents, with nothing between them and the ground but mulberry branches. He produces twenty seers of silk he can wind from four to six seers a month, and he can sell the produce at Umritsur for fifteen rupees eight annas a seer. He has his troubles, for the zemindars will not always sell their mulberry boughs, and his monopoly is so complete that his own son is not allowed to approach the worms too nearly. Silk has also been recently reared both at Holta and at Umritsur, through the exertions of Mr. Cope, and the specimens have been favourably reported on by competent European authority. Umritsur is already a great mart for raw silk. The annual importation is valued at nearly fifteen lakhs of rupees. The bulk comes from the region beyond the Hindoo Koosh, but contributions are received from Kashmere, Bengal, and China. The principal manufactories are at Lahore and Mooltan. Hitherto a belief has prevailed that the climate of the Punjab is too hot and dry to admit of the successful production of silk, and the experiments made at Ishore under the auspices of Government some years ago tended to confirm this impression. But the instances above mentioned warn us against premature conclusions, and the greatness of the object demands judicial patience. China is the indigenous clime of this beautiful textile, and tradition assigns the first planting of the mulberry to the Empress, so valuable is its estimation. But in what part of China is it reared? "In Che-Keang," says Davis, "which province, with the only three others that produce fine silk, namely, Keang-nan, Hoope, and Sye-chuen, is crossed by the thirtieth parallel of latitude." A lance at the map will show how nearly this situation tallies with that of the Punjab. It is also a highly alluvial country, intersected by numerous rivers and canals. The soil is manured with the mud which is dug from the rivers assisted with ashes or dung. The chambers in which the worms are placed are so contrived as to admit of the use of artificial heat when necessary; and the hatching of eggs is either retarded or advanced, by the application of cold or heat, according to circumstances, so as to time the simultaneous exit of the young worms exactly to the period when the tender spring leaves of the mulberry are most fit for their nourishment. The Baree Doab canal will supply abundance of water, and the adventurous Jafir, under Mr. Cope's directions, has already planted cuttings of the Chinese and Philippine mulberries. If the Punjab be not too hot and dry for silk it is certainly not too cold; its rivers are never subject to the degree of frost which anmually congeals the Oxus and Yarkand for months. The value of the silk is best exhibited in the distance which it is now brought from Bokhara to Peshawur, occupying thirty-nine days' journey. And we need not tax our memories to recal the successive struggles of the Assyrians and Medes, the Persians and Greeks, to monopolize the trade; or how the caravans from China dragged along.

" Per syrtes iter æstuosas, per inhospitalem Caucasum" over the mountains of Pamir and across the Caspian desert for two hundred and forty three days to the sea-coast of Syria, until the monks, by transporting eggs by sea from China, enabled Justinian to produce his own silk at Constantinople to the wonder of the Tartar ambassadors; or how the manufacture afterwards spread to the factories of Palermo and Lyons. We heartily hope that our Government will not refuse to encourage the experiments which private indi-viduals have initiated, to naturalise this costly and oveted fibre in the irrigated plains of the Punjab.

THE BARAITCH DIVISION in Oude is for the future to be called the Fyzabad division.

PRACTICAL LEGISLATION.—The drafts of two Bills of some importance have been published officially by the Bengal Legislative Council, and will be brought before it next session. framed on the model of the English Act, provides that from the year 1865 all owners of furnaces in Calcutta will be required, under heavy fines, so to construct them as to make them smoke-consuming. Mr. Seton-Karr, in his statement of objects and reasons, says:-" The increase of smoke from furnaces now used in Calcutta, and the nuisances arising therefrom, have been brought to the notice of Government both by the Municipal Commissioners and by the Commissioner of Police Any person who looks round on Calcutta from sny elevated place during the working hours of the day may easily satisfy himself of the existence of this nuisance, which is one, indeed, requiring no further proof." The other Bill is a revival of that introduced into the old Legislature by Sir John Grant in 1857, for the abolition of that Indian curse—begar, or forced impressment of carts and labour for troops on the march. The principle of the Bill is that the military department should be left to provide for its own wants in the open market, like companies or individual merchants. There will then be no checks to trade, no extortion by licensed officials. The Bill does away with forcible impressment, except in emergencies. In such cases provision has been made for an adequate rate of remuneration to the men pressed into service, for their prompt and regular payment by an official accredited from the civil and not the military department, and responsible to the former, and for the speedy check or redress of abuses. Another admirable provision is that no carter, &c., is to be aken beyond the next civil station, or for more than one hundred miles from the place of impressment, without his consent, and if so taken on, he is then to get double hire.

Almoran, June 8 .- The tea cultivation on the hills progresses favourably; a few more speculators and capitalists have arrived here to try their chance in that speculation. I hear that the Government plantation at Deoghur has been sold to a mercantile firm for a lakh of runees. The Punjab Government, we understand, intends to improve the several post-offices on the frontiers.

The commissioner of Kumaon has strongly remonstrated against the introduction of the departmental rules of the post-office in these nonregulation districts, as they will probably interfere with the police arrangements recently made in the interior. Except at Almorah, Sreenugger, and Kumaon, there is no regular police establishment in the interior, or on the other peaks, so that the people themselves perform the functions of the police-officers, and for which no remuneration is allowed .- Hurkaru.

TORTURE BY THE POLICE. - The Mofussilite records a shocking case of torture by the Meerut police. A dressing case, belonging to the wife of a staff officer, was stolen, and on suspicion three servants were committed to gaol. One was a native nurse. Her treatment is thus described :-"A poor woman is suckling the child of an European officer, and on suspicion of theft is sent to a prison; apart from her mental suffering, she must, under the circumstances, have suffered severe bodly pain, and whilst in this condition she is drugged, dishonoured, and disgraced by the chief constable and his deputy. Can it be wondered at that when she was released and restored to her service she was so ill as to render it advisable to send her to the hospital?" These Mahomedan police officials were convicted and sentenced to only imprisonment for three years in Meerut gaol instead of to transportation to the Messes. Sandeman and Cranston have been appointed surveyors of steam-vessels in the port of Calcutta. The Act recently passed (V. of 1862) prohibits any steam-vessel plying in or from the port which is not furnished with a certificate for the surveyors. As in English ports, accidents such as were very frequent some months ago will thus be prevented. The large steamers of the P. and O. Company will be subject to survey, if necessary, like all others.

THE VICTORIA CROSS is to be conferred on Lieutenant T. Cadell, of the late 2nd Bengal Europeans, and on Lieutenant E. T. Thackery, of the Bengal engineers, for daring, courage, and cool intrepidity during the siege of Delhi.

CAPTAIN B. W. D. MORTON, deputy commissioner, Assam, has been appointed to take charge of the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills. General Showers' dictatorship is thus at an end.

THE MUTLAH SCHEME progresses. The Englishman states that, as the railway from Calcutta to the new port is nearly finished throughout, buoys are to be laid in the river, a light-ship is to be stationed at its mouth, and pilots sent to make themselves acquainted with its navigation.

THE INDUS TUNNEL. — The Delhi Gazette learns that the boring of the Indus Tunnel at Attok is making satisfactory progress. "The gallery at present is completed on the East side 605 feet, on West, 420; total, 1,028 feet out of 1,505, the whole length of the gallery; 480 feet remain to be done. The Indus this year is very low, the bridge-of-boats usually taken down in April still standing. The weather is described as being most unusually cool and estimate. BALA BULWUNT RAO has been appointed an Honorary Magistrate in Jubbulpore.

Public Offices. - The Hurkaru hears that Government has sanctioned for Calcutta a sum of Rs. 354 lakhs for the new suite of public offices in Calcutta, on the site of Writers' Buildings; 8 lakhs for the new Post-office, and 61 lakhs for the new collegiate buildings.

LANCASHIRE RELIEF FUND .- All the native and English employés in the Locomotive Department of the G. I. P. Railway, Bombay, have subscribed one day's wages to the Lancashire Relief

HYDERABAD, June 8 .- Owing to some complaints which have been made by the officers em-ployed in the construction of the cotton road from Hingunghaut, in the Nagpore territory, through Chanda to Chinnoor, near the junction of the Pein-Gungs river with the Godavery, the Nizam's Minister has represented to the Resident how impossible it is for the Government of the Nizam to prevent causes of complaints arising in so remote and inhospitable a country, except by using coercive measures. It appears that the complaints made to the Resident, and by him difficult to induce these people to work, and beyond acting as randarees (guides) to the traveller, and carrying light loads for wayfarers from village to village, they will do little or nothing. There is, of course, a more civilised class in the district the agriculturists; but these men, when not tending their khets, are usually employed either winnowing grain or cleaning cotton for the females of their families to spin, and then weave into coarse "homespun." These men cannot, of These men cannot, of course, be expected to leave these legitimate pursuits to assist in the construction of a public high-way of which they do not as yet see the advantage to themselves. There is likewise in the larger villages and towns other classes, mechanics and others, whose employment debars them from dreaming of rendering any assistance to the road maker; so that the engineer is thrown for labour entirely upon the dhers of the towns, and the wilder and more uncontrollable dwellers in the jungle, for the labour he requires. These latter are exceedingly quarrelsome and most expert thieves, and their depredations form the chief subject of complaint. They have a great fancy for carrying off the working tools which are placed in their hands, and though they seldom do so while the tools are entrusted to them, they mark well the place where they are deposited after working hours, and fail not to purloin as many as they safely can during the dark hours of the night. These they conceal in some safe place near at hand well-known to them, and appearing as usual on the following morning at the place of muster avert suspicion from themselves. This practice they will continue until they have acquired a supply of iron sufficient for their present requirements, or as much as they can with safety convey away from their temporary place of concealment to the hills in which they have their homes. Their sudden disappearance, of course, at once marks them as the thieves, and the aid of the nearest village authorities is invoked in capturing the fugitives and their spoil. Their failure to do as they are required is generally ascribed to complicity, whereas it might far better be set down to fear, as the villagers in the low country have a very salutary dread of exciting the animosity of the wild hill men, who would not hesitate to repay any attempt to capture them by a general loot of the village in which their adversaries dwelt on the first favourable opportunity. To the peculative propensities of the only labourers the road makers can procure, and the weakness of the village police, are due the frequent complaints which reach the Resident, and through him the Minister. As suggested by the Minister the easiest method of guarding against a recurrence of these objectionable practices will be to attach military guards to each large gang of labourers on the road; their presence alone would be sufficient to deter the coolies from resorting to the practices complained of. From all sides accounts are reaching Hyderabad of the prevalence of cholera, and of the frightful ravages it is committing. A day or two since most distressing accounts were received at the Residency from Akola, in western Berar, of the fearful mortality resulting from this scourge. The gaol had had to be cleared out, and the prisoners moved into tents, while the gaol itself was being well cleansed, fumigated and whitewashed, the deaths among the prisoners having been very numerous. Now we have news from Mohdaveram that cholera has broken out there with exceeding virulence, as well as in nearly all the surrounding villages. There is little prospect of the disappearance of this scourge until the rains set in in earnest: it is greatly to be hoped the monsoon is not now far off .- Englishman.

Mr. Logary. initiated person that the gold exists in very small proportion to the ironstone and other minerals: but when the fact is known that in the Ural gold mines the washing of the gravel is remunerative if it yields one-twelfth ounce of gold to the ton, it does not astonish one to find that there are persons who believe that India may yet again furnish its quota of gold to the currency of the world." But there will be no "rush" in India as in Australia, as some journalists have feared, since gold-washing and surface-digging barely remunerate the poor people of the country. The men who will, therefore, be induced to patronise our Indian gold fields will either be capitalists or joint-stock companies, the advent of whom will confer immense benefits upon the country.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS .- H.M.'s 66th regiment will after the rains be removed from Cannanore to Bangalore and occupy the dragoon barracksthe dragoons removing into the new barracks at the race course. H.M.'s 105th regiment from Trichinopoly is to relieve the fusiliers, which are to be removed to Cannanore. It appears that no European troops are henceforth to garrison Trichinopoly; Bellary may, in all probability, share the same fate, seeing what an unhealty station it is for European troops.

THE METAPOLLIEM BUNGALOW .-- On the recommendation of Mr. Grant, the collector of Coimbatore, seconded by the Board of Revenue, Government have acceded to the proposal of Mr. Smith, the hotel-keeper on the Shervaroy Hills, to occupy the public bungalow at Metapolliem, and to open an hotel there for the convenience of travellers. Adopting the board's suggestion, the Order in Council directs that the bungalow shall be placed at Mr. Smith's disposal for four months experimentally, as was lately done with respect to that at Beypoor, free of charge. On the expiration of that period the board will report whether Mr. Smith gives satisfaction, with their opinion of the terms on which the lease should be continued. He is also to have the use of the furniture on the premises, conditionally upon his engaging to keep both furniture and buildings in good order. The latter are to be first properly repaired and supplied with punkahs, venetianed doors, &c., at the cost of the State. Government further instruct the collector to set the Coimbatore Bungalow similarly to rights, expecting that Mr. Smith will tenant it also.

ROMANISTS IN TRAVANCORE.—The remarkable movement which lately took place in that portion of the old Syrian Church in Travancore which persecution forced to acknowledge the Pope has succeeded, after three centuries, in securing independence for the Church. Lately the Syro-Romanists sent a deputation to Mesopotamia, where one of the number was consecrated Bishop, who, on his return to Travancore, declared for a separation from Rome. With scarcely any exception all the Syro-Romanists, estimated at 81,000 souls, gave in their adherence to the new Bishop, and the Romish Bishop is left with not more than ten or twelve parishes.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES.—The Governor-general in Council has decided that, when subordinate officers leaving their head quarters on duty are required to travel, their bona fide railway fares shall be paid (except in the North Western Provinces, where free passes are granted) at the public expense; menials and ministerial officers who draw less than fifty rupees a month being furnished with third class accommodation, and permitted to draw, in addition, any daily travelling batta to which they may be entitled under the rules; and ministerial officers who receive fifty rupees a month or upwards being provided with second class accommodation, but disallowed batta, referred to the Minister, were of a nature which gives some interesting information regarding the except when the batta allowed to them under the rnles exceeds the railway fare, in which case they may draw the difference only in addition to the railway fare.

OOTACAMUND .- The large bridge at Paulghaut known by the name of "Culputry," and which cost the Government nearly thirty thousand rupees, was completely washed away, in one night, by a heavy fall of rain,-assisted by the strong current of water over which it stood. The Monsoon has partly set in, which renders the place very agreeable and pleasant.

DEATH OF THE REV. MR. McCALLUM.—The Free Church has sustained a severe loss, through the sudden death of the Rev. Mr. McCallum, which sad event took place within an hour after his arrival at Bangalore, from Madras.

Soldiers' Club at Secunderabad .-Adye, C.B., has been most successful in establishing a Soldiers' Club in the important station of Secunderabad, where there are about 3,000 English soldiers. The subscribers amount to about 1,200 non-commissioned officers and men. The subscription of the non-commissioned officers is eight annas each monthly, and that of the private soldiers four annas. The average attendance on ordinary nights is between 360 and 400 men, and on the nights when concerts are given by amateurs of the various regiments (once or twice a week) nearly 1,000 men have been present in the Club. although it cannot conveniently hold half the number. An official report of this success has been made to Government, but as the committee desire to increase the attractions of the Club, the public are asked to assist.

THE NEILGHERRY NETTLE .- Mr. McIvor, the Government gardener, has submitted to the Madras authorities a statement on the cultivation of the Neilgherry nettle, which is so valuable for its fibre. The plant grows wild all over the Neilgherries at elevations varying from four thousand to eight thousand feet, and this indicates the temperature best suited to the perfect development of the fibre. From the crop of July an average produce of from 450 lbs. to 500 lbs. cf clean fibre per acre may be expected. Of this quantity about 120 lbs. will be a very superior quality; this is obtained from the young and tender shoots which should be placed by themselves during the operation of cutting. The crop of January will yield on an average of 600 lbs. or 700 lbs. per acre, but the fibre of this crop is all of a uniform and somewhat coarse quality.

RIFLE SHOOTING .- The cup offered as a prize for the best rifle shot by his Highness Prince Vurmah Rama was won by Private Fesser, No. 7 Company, Madras Volunteers.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FORTIFICATIONS OF BOMBAY.—The Bombay Review describes Colonel De Lisle's plan for the fortification of Bombay. He proposes to convert the numerous rocky islets scattered about the harbour into citadels with batteries of Armstrong guns. The most important of the works hitherto undertaken is the fortification of the Oyster Rock. Here the foundation has already been completed, and the rock is girded up to high water mark with a formidable wall of masonry backed by concrete as hard as iron. When the casemated battery for forty-five 100-pounder Armstrong guns is finished, Oyster Rock will be a miniature Gibraltar, impregnable to any iron clad ships that are ever likely to visit our shores. It is part of the plan of this powerful battery to crown it with a revolving cupola on a similar principle to that of Capt. Coles's newfloating batteries. A strong battery placed on the Carinja shoal, and another on the Middle Ground, on which work will be begun this monsoon, will cross fire with the Oyster Rock, and effectually guard the approach from the open sea to the roadstead. The inner channel is covered by another series of batteries. In the fort itself it is proposed at once to alter the Hornby Battery of the castle, in front of the arsenal, for the reception of Armstrong guns; while on Cross Island the ground has been cut away for earthwork defences, and on Butcher's Island an earthwork battery of six guns has already been constructed. Even should the cross fire of these batteries fail to stop the enemy's advance there is still another secure harbour beyond the island of Elephanta in which the shipping might take shelter, and the approach to which also will be defended by batteries of Armstrong guns. Two lakhs of rupees last year and five lakhs this year have been set aside for this important work.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE KURRACHEE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The trade of the port during the past season has greatly increased. Cotton has become a considerable article of export. From the Custom House returns, as furnished by the collector, the amount of cotton shipped during the past four months of the year has been to Bombay, 25,375 cwt., to England, 5,255 cwt. "Indigo has also been shipped in large quantities to England, both direct and via Bombay. The quality is inferior to either Bengal or Madras, and the way it is manufactured, is objected to in the home markets, but this it is hoped will be remedied ere long. During the past season the trade of the port has been greatly injured by the adulteration of almost every kind of produce offered for sale. The committee think the matter might be referred to the commissioner in Sind with a request that some law should be passed on the subject. This year white teel seed, the chamber are aware, has come to market with 20, 30, and in some cases 40 per cent. of dust and rubbish-while in former years from 3 to 5 could be calculated upon as the loss in cleaning. This is owing to the very high prices paid, and the great demand there has been for France.'

FEMALE EDUCATION is spreading in the province of Guzerat, according to a correspondent of the Times of India. In the city of Surat in 1852 a small girls' school was established. At first it was supported by monthly contributions from some wealthy persons, especially Meer Jaffer Ally Khan; finally Rs. 1,500 were collected and invested. The school is now adopted by Mr. Warden, the judge of Surat, and apparently flourishing.

KATTIAWAR .- The Bombay papers direct attention to the state of Kattiawar. It seems to be overridden by a body of Mahajuns, who are said to have all the chiefs in their power, to maintain correspondence with each other, and to keep their respective masters ignorant of all that transpires on their estates. The Deccan Herald says:— "There is scarcely a crime which they have not committed, and more than once they have been permitted to imbrue their hands in blood with impunity. An English barrister is, however, now upon their track, and if, with the assistance of the English press, he does not hunt the scoundrels down, we have no hesitation in saying that it will be from obstacles thrown by the executive in the way of justice."

Madagascar.—We read in the Pondicherry Moniteur that M. de Montigny, who has been on leave for some time at Paris, has just been charged with an important mission. By order of the Emperor he leaves for Madagascar, and if we are well informed his mission is to negotiate a treaty with Radama II. The same journal contains a letter addressed to L'Ami de la Religion, by M. Lambert, who signs himself envoy of the King of Madagascar, contradicting the report of an insurrection in Madagascar. In the interest of truth, says M. Lambert, and also of the mission which-I fill at this moment in Europe, where I have been sent by the new sovereign of Madagascar, to invite the continental Powers to open relations of friendship and commerce with the great African Island, permit me, Mr. Editor, to express a doubt as to the authenticity of the news published in your columns. Such reports appear to me of a nature to prejudice the work of civilisation, undertaken so generously of his own accord by King Radama II., and may cause uneasiness to Europeans, who feel disposed to emigrate to that distant kingdom.

SEDASHEGHUR.—A letter in the Bombau Review describes the progress made in the new cotton port of Sedasheghur. Of the new road, six miles long from the wharf in Beitkul cove, one-half has been opened out for a width of twelve feet. Beyond landing a few engines and pile-driving machinery nothing has been yet done in constructing the wharf and piers. The road from Dharwar to Beitkul, so much required by the merchants for the transmission of cotton, is about sixty miles. Yellapoor is about twenty-five miles above the ghats, and thirty miles or so from Dharwar. There are four assistant-engineers at work on this road, which has been opened as far as Mulapoor, about fifteen miles from Sedasheghur.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, June 11 .- The rebels are with drawing their forces from above Nanking, and are proceeding to re-occupy the country about Shanghai, from which they had been driven by the allied troops. For the last few months we have regularly recorded the capture of towns, villages, and stockaded positions by our own and the French forces, assisted by the force of "disciplined" Chinese under the American, Ward. The admiral's plans have hitherto been to clear the country of rebels for a distance of about twenty-five miles from Shanghai. In various expeditions, in none of which the forces numbered more than one thousand five hundred, many places were captured, without a single casualty, by the mere superiority of Western artillery.

Large quantities of Taeping plunder were recovered at several of the places captured, and divided among our soldiers and sailors under the name of loot; by some unaccountable neglect, none of this easily won treasure, possibly amounting in all to half a million of dollars, was applied to the relief of the famishing losers who are refugees in Shanghai. This career of plunder has been pretty suddenly checked by the arrival of one of the leading Taeping generals. the Chung Wang. This did not take place, however, until the French admiral's life had paid the penalty for this series of loot-hunting excursions. That species of bravery which leads a man, sword in hand, to assault a rebel post that has been thoroughly shelled for a couple of hours, and in which a few frightened soldiers are usually found, is not worthy of a really great officer, and we have already recorded our regret that the troops should achieve such easy triumphs, and take large spoil for their trouble. In the case of Nan-Jao, however, where Admiral Protet fell on the 17th ult., there was more courage wanted than the attacking force imagined; for, instead of, as usual, finding the walls deserted and the garrison in a panic of terror, they were suddenly faced by an ambuscade which had laid under cover during the two hours' bombardment. It was then that a volley carried the fatal messenger to the French admiral, whose death was a signal for a most indiscriminate carnage on the part of our allies at the taking of Cholin, on the 21st ult. With the capture of Cholin is likely to close for the present our account of artillery practice upon towns and villages of the loot-yielding description. The noise of our doings has reached Nanking, and has resulted in the despatch of "The Fighting King" (Chung Wang) to the Shanghai province. This rebel chief is reported to have taken a very practical view of existing affairs. His first step was to give foundation for a rumour that an immense force was menacing Shanghai. This rumour, as was intended, caused the withdrawal of our expeditionary forces from the captured towns, which we had indulged the hope of garrisoning with handfuls of men and guns. soon after the capture of Cholin, word was brought to the English admiral that the town of Kah-ding. held by Major Taylor and a party of the 5th Bengal Native Light Infantry, was seriously threat ened. A return to Shanghai was at once ordered and on the Queen's birthday our troops started with guns and reinforcements for Kah-ding. An Armstrong gun with ammunition had previously been sent on in charge of seventeen sailors and six Sikhs. On the way, however, there is reason to suppose that the "Jacks" went on shore to loot, for the half dozen boat-loads of ammunition and provisions was taken and the Sikhs killed, while the "Jacks" returned to Shanghai without a scratch, reporting themselves to have fought desperately. The only Shanghai newspaper-which seems, by the way, to be hopelessly sold to the military interest-is quite silent upon this remarkable little circumstance, as well as upon a good many more points on which it becomes a journal to speak out. The relief party, which proceeded to Kah-ding to rolieve Major Taylor, found the country in a changed state, consequent, it is said, upon the superior tactics of the Chung Wang. It was continually employed in making mock attacks, with banners, on various parts of our encampment successively. This mode of procedure was eventually found to be so perfectly easy to the enemy, whose numbers are large, and so painfully harassing to ourselves, that the place was decided to be too hot for us, and an order was given to withdraw the garrison from Kah-ding and make a general return to Shanghai, and there remain at bay. Of course the various posts were re-occupied by the rebels as soon as we vacated them; so that, on the whole, Chung Wang's tactics show him to be a man of some judgment. He has, in effect, driven us back to Shanghai; and, beyond the loot and a little experience in the field, we have gained nothing at all by our country excursions. The sudden accession of force to the Taiping ranks has drained the army at Nanking, and the Imperialist gunboats (small craft carrying a bow gun) are engaged in another desultory attack upon the forts on the river-bank fronting the Shanghai appears to be sufficiently defended for the present; if it be not surprised there is not much to fear with the existing force to defend it. There will be a good deal of trouble yet, and we are now certain to find in the rebels a much more formidable foe than we did in the army that San-ko-lin-sin led.

From the ports on the coast south of Shanghai there is little news. Ningpo is still as when we last wrote. The rebels are said to be mustering in the district, probably with a view to trying the chances of a recapture. A few more firearms have been seized on board ship. It is only too evident that more forces will be wanted to establish Imperial sway in the districts about Ningpo and Shanghai.

In Hong Kong there is nothing doing to call for attention. The heat is still comparatively moderate. The Governor is said to be going home, as soon as Mr. Mercer, the Colonial Secretary, shall have come out to relieve him. Among the military movements we hear that Wardley House is to be given up on the 31st of July. All leave has been stopped in Hong Kong, and several officers who have proceeded to Shanghai and the North have been put on duty there. Colonel Moody, of the Royal Engineers, has returned to Hong Kong from Shanghai. Deputy Commissary-General Horne has gone to Japan, invalided. Deputy! Adjutant General Mansergh has been invalided from sunstroke.

In Japan matters are going on smoothly. It is reported that a steamer owned by Japanese has arrived at Shanghai, having been worked by a native crew. It is said to be only one of a prospective fleet about to be organised for foreign trade. The Japanese evidently do not possess that timidity of innovation which marks their Chinese peighbours.—Overland China Moil.

A correspondent of the North China Herald gives the following details of the capture of Cholin by the allies:—

"The place appeared strong, with plenty of banners and spears on the walls, and there was a small outwork outside a gate at the south end of west wall. Close to this was the water gate. high bund ran along opposite, south-west of the city, which afforded a good position for Armstrong guns. This was taken advantage of. Under the line of fire of these, and more advanced, were the two French 32's. Our own 32's were placed so as to play on the wall to the left of the gate, and to create a breach. The Armstrongs' duty was to enfilade the western side of city wall. A party of 67th were pushed forward into some houses close to the afore-mentioned small outwork, which had been abandoned by the enemy, who, however, kept up a steady fire from the walls, and succeeded in killing one man and wounding another. The 32's opened fire about 11 A.M., making their usual very good practice, the enemy replying with some small guns, jingalls, and musketry. At day light on the 20th all our guns, being in position, opened fire-the Armstrong sending the wooden sheds and defences on the wall flying about the rebels' ears, and the deep-voiced thirty-twos playing away steadily to make a breach in the wall. found that large numbers of Taipings were kept | The French were on left of the creek, all ready to rush up to the wall, and make their bridge when the proper moment came. The 31st were with their ladder and storming parties in houses, not very far from the south face of the wall; the Punjaubees in rear of them, and a little to the right; our bridge-making party was in the creek all ready to push up at a moment's notice in fact, the arrangements were, as they have been all along, well considered, and as perfect as any mortal arrangements well could be. After an hour's firing the advance was ordered. French got over and on the wall, the 31st were well to the front, and the Punjaubees advancing When the men were under the rapidly. walls they were saluted with showers of bricks by the defenders; but notwithstand-ing this, the walls were speedily manued by troops, and the rebels were seen scuttling through the town in every direction. They, however, had been so earnest in their endeavours to block us out, that they had most effectually shut themselves in, were jammed at one of their own gates, and many of them were shot down. The most appeared full of drowned and wounded, spears by hundreds were floating on the water, and were strewn all over the place. They had even thrown away a number of their muskets and some double-barrelled guns-an unusual thing for them to do. Almost every house we entered contained dead and dying men. The rebels had at this place a novel addition to their means of defence, consisting of long narrow deep pits, with steps down them, dug just inside the parapet, and roofed with planks covered with earth. These are evidently intended as a protection for their soldiers against our shot and shell. Nominal rolls of the rebels were found, and also a document, saying that the barbarians were near the place, telling the garrison that there was not the slightest reason to be afraid of them; but that it was just as wise not to leave the city and walk about in the country while they were before the town. The water gate was most effectually blocked up with beams and sunken junks, the gates barricaded with blocks of stone, palisades, and bags of earth, which took some time to open. At two o'clock the order was given to set the city on fire. The order was executed with such rapidity that the Sikhs had hardly time to get the ponies out of the town, and most of the last collected had to be abandoned. A great many dead hodies were hurnt. At night there were thousands of armed rebels cruising about around our camp, and at daylight we could, without exaggeration, see between 6,000 and 8,000 armed ruttians running backwards and forwards in a purposeless manner. What they were about and what they intend to do was wrapped in mystery. News having come that Kahding and Woosung were threatened, the whole force returned via Nanjao to the Wong-poo River, and thence by gunboat to Shanghai, after a successful campaign of seventeen days, and with a very small amount of casualty."

CEYLON.

Colombo, June 30 .- The year 1862, like the three which preceded it, seems destined to be distinguished for meteorological aberrations. The first three months of the year were more than ordinarily rainy; the three now closing have been the reverse, to such an extent as to induce apprehensions for the great crop. Some coffee in the lower and hotter districts has actually been lost, having withered and dropped from the trees; but we are glad to state that reports from a large number of the planting districts now agree in reporting abundance of rain and the safety of crop. At Colombo the weather continues oppressively hot, with far less rain than is usual at this season of the year. We are looking forward to a wet July, and we fear we must make up our minds to heavy rain in the north-east monsoon to restore the equilibrium of the seasons.

Our total shipments to date have reached 523,000 cwts. There is still a good deal of the Badulla crop to go forward, and the new crop from the lower districts will come dropping in during the next three months—the concluding months of the season. We see no reason, therefore, to withdraw from our estimate of a total out turn of, at least, 550,000 cwts.

The great topic of the fortnight has been the meeting of the revivified Planters' Association, under the presidency of Mr. Gavin. Mr. R. J. Corbet, of Kotmalie, was unanimously recommended as the planters' representative in the Legislative Council. Mr. Gavin, in an able address pointed out the wants of the country, mainly in respect to roads and bridges, of which we have not, especially in some remote districts, such as Badulla and Happootella, anything like a sufficiency. On this matter there can be no difference of opinion, and the feeling in favour of a railway seems to be again in full force. The Association have instructed a committee to address the Governor on the subject, so that we shall probably have some definite information ere long. We have heard that the Council will not meet until August. The Governor left Jaffna on the 26th, and is not expected in Kandy until the 12th of July.

His Excellency's visit to the north and east of the island is likely to bear good fruit, in the shape of improvement in the means of transit and the accommodation for coolies. The labour question, especially in the shape of immigration from new sources, is to be pressed on the attention of Government. On a full supply of labour, there can be no doubt, the prosperity of the colony entirely depends. Hitherto our wants have been fairly supplied, and our hopes are good for the future. But, clearly, neither Government nor the planters should relax their efforts. A judge of the Supreme Court of Bengal who was recently amongst us, while believing that our great danger would be a failure of the labour supply, from the superior attractions soon to be offered in the Mysore, and other parts of India, bore cordial testimony to the good relations subsisting between employers and employed. There can be no doubt that—with rare exceptions—this is the fact; and as the best method of dispelling misapprehensions said to exist on the Continent regarding mortality amongst coolies on estates in Ceylon, we are glad to observe that measures are to be taken to ecure reliable returns. There can be no doubt that in the early years of coffee planting, and in particular seasons since, the sickness and mortality were serious; but nothing at all like what the figures representing arrivals and departures would indicate. Indeed, for many of the deaths of poor famine-stricken wretches who came here merely to die the climate of Ceylon ought not to be held at all responsible.

While the planters have been thus crying out, "Give us roads, bridges, facilities for the intro-duction of labour,"—the members of "the Service" have been equally urgent in their demands for promotion. "Who is to be acting Treasurer? Who is to be the acting District Judge of Kandy? are the anxious queries of those whose names figure on pieces of pasteboard with the magical initials C.C.S. following them. The Governor is the Sphinx to whom the questions are addressed, and as yet his replies are understood to be duly Sphinx-like. Mr. Saunders is to remain to the end of the year, so as to enable the Secretary of State to decide the vexed question. If an outsider does not get the prize Mr. Vane seems to have the best chance, although Major Skinner has the strongest claims on the score of good service to the colony; for the acting appointment of District Judge of Kandy, Mr. Murray, Deputy Queen's Advocate of Jaffna, and recently District Judge of Batticaloa, is the favourite. The outside public console is the favourite. themselves with the belief that everything as regards the service will be arranged in the best possible manner.

The Governor and family have been thrown into mourning by the death of Sir Benjamin Hawes, Lady MacCarthy's father.

A subscription in favour of the distressed Lan cashire operatives has been started, and we trust a sum worthy of Ceylon will be contributed.

The health of the country is good .- Colombo Overland Observer.

Family Remittances.

Fort William, June 6.—No. 601.—Hitherto family remittances to the Cape of Good Hope by officerand soldiers of British regiments serving in India have been sent by the Governments of the several presidencies in India to the Colonial Government at the Cape.

2. It is more convenient, however, to the Golonial Government that the remittances to the payees should be disbursed through the Commissariat at the Cape, which is in account with the War-office.

3. In consequence also of the more regular communication between England and the Cape than between that colony and India, the family remittances, if sent hence to the War-office, will be disbursed more expeditiously and regularly under its instructions, by the Commissariat at the Cape, than if sent direct to the colony as hitherto.

4. Accordingly, from the 1st July next inclusive 4. Accordingly, from the 1st July next measure, all family remittances made from India to the Cape of Good Hope by officers and soldiers of H.M.'s British forces are to be included equally with those for pyment in England, in the monthly abstracts of the control of the contro remittances which are transmitted from the several presidencies to the War-office in England, leaving it to the War Department to give the necessary directions to the commissariat officer at the Cape for the payment of the sums so remitted.

5. In order that the War Department may be able to separate the remittances for the Cape from those to separate the remittances for the Cape from those for England, regimental paymasters are clearly to distinguish the former by placing the words "Remittance for the Cape" against each sum in the column for remarks in their statement of family remittances. War-office Form, No. 327.

6. For the remittances for England, which are included in that statement, separate remittance vouchers will, as hitherto, be forwarded to the regimental agents, but paymasters must distinctly undermental agents.

ORGANISATION OF A STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, under date the 6th June, 1862.

Read again financial resolution No. 84, dated 13th May, 1862.

In this resolution the preparation of commercial and financial statistics was referred to as one of two objects to be kept in view in the re-organisation of the financial department.

There is, H.E. the Governor-general in Council observes, a mass of statistics in the administration reports of the different local Governments and among the records of the various Government offices, but they are not compiled on any uniform plan nor brought together in any central office, so as to show the statistics of the Empire.

It is very obvious that it would be greatly for the advantage both of Government and of commercial community to have regular methodical compilation and annual publication of such returns of trade, navigation, and finance as are published in England by the Board of Trade and the Treasury, and such compilation and publication would, in the opinion of H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council, be best effected in the financial department, which would have most need for statistical information, and has large experience in compiling statements and returns received from all parts of India.

The financial department must, however, H.E. in Council observes, be careful to make no demand for statistical information except from its own officers, without first ascertaining from the department of Government concerned whether it can be obtained without overloading public officers with extra work. As a general rule the fewer details required, the more valuable and correct will be the information. An general rule intelligent officer could often himself give a concise report of the general features of the trade in his district, which would be accurate and valuable, while if he were called upon for complicated returns he must leave them to careless subordinates or neglect more important duties.

The returns of the English Board of Trade should, H.E. in Council is of opinion, be taken as the basis of action, and each head gone through to see how far it is applicable to India without entailing any serious trouble or expense. Endeavours should be made to induce the different local authorities to keep their statements in the uniform form thus adopted, or, if kept differently for local conve-nience, to reduce their figures of measure or value to a common standard.

The Chamber of Commerce will, his Excellency in Council believes, gladly give valuable assistance as to commercial statistics. Other branches of statistics, of national importance, might be gradually added, as of population, like those of the English Registrar General, and agricultural statistics; but this should only be done cautiously; and the Government will abstain from anything like merely statistics, confining itself to those which have an immediate bearing on practical legislation and government.

A Statistical Society, aided and encouraged by the Government, but self-managed and voluntary, would be a most useful adjunct to any scheme of official statistics, and would embrace many fields of useful and interesting inquiry which a Government could undertake, while the advice and assistance of its leading members would be of great use in assisting the Government to frame its own returns and disown inquiries.

Offers of aid have been received from some gentlemen who contemplate the formation of such a society, and, as a first step towards the practical attainment of the above objects, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to appoint a committee, consisting of the Hon. Mr. Erskine, the Hon. Mr. Bullen, Mr. G. Smith, the Hon. E. Drummond, Mr. Grote, and Mr. E. C. Bayley, as representing the Government (with power to add to their number) for the purpose of revising the Board of Trade and there official returns and of reporting to the Council of the consistence of the construction of other official returns, and of reporting to the Government as to the forms and regulations which they would recommend with a view to the compilation of an uniform system of imperial statistics in the newly created branch of the financial depart-ment, N.W. Provs. and the Punjab.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, July 28, 1862.

"PAX VOBISCUM!"

WHILE declining controversy Mr. Laing is nevertheless determined to have the last word. He nails his colours to the mast, and the last words he utters as the waters close over his head are, "No Surrender!" Or, rather perhaps, while evading the combat he, Parthianlike, discharges a farewell shot at his victorious foe. Here, we trust, the war of words is at an end. The Secretary of State may well repose upon his laurels, and forbear to follow up his advantage to extremes. In the ex-Minister of Indian finance he has encountered a foeman worthy of his steel, and may well rejoice to have come off "unwounded from the dreadful close." No man in her Majesty's dominions can be more cognisant than himself of Mr. Laing's merits as a financier, or more able to appreciate the eminent services he has rendered in eliminating order out of chaos. It will be no easy task to replace the ex-Chancellor of the Indian Exchequer. The experience he has acquired during the eight een months he has held that arduous post is in itself a sufficient reason for overlooking any little eccentricities of temper and occasional symptoms of insubordination. Conscientious, indefatigable, and tenacious of his purpose, Mr. Laing may surely be pardoned for a spice of obstinacy in a matter in which he so firmly believed himself to be in the right. The field, too, is extremely limited whence to selecta successor, and to carry weight in the Council or with the community at large he must be a man of some mark, and well versed in public affairs. No mere clerk from the Treasury will meet the requirements of one of the highest and most responsible departments of the Indian Government. It is not everyone who will succeed as Mr. Laing has done in gaining the confidence of both Natives and Europeans, and in steering clear of the innumerable rocks and shoals that beset a public career in the East. Some allowance may fairly be made for the irritability of disease, and every true friend of India will rejoice to learn that the two distinguished statesmen whose disagreement has caused such a deep feeling of regret, have consented to forget their personal differences for the sake of the public weal, and that mutual concessions have brought about a permanent renewal of friendly and official relations. Claudite jam rivos, pueri; sat prata biberunt.

OVERLAND ROUTES TO INDIA.

IF ever it be permitted to departed spirits to "revisit the pale glimpses of the moon," and take an interest in the affairs which concerned them while living, greatly must the shade of Lieutenant Waghorn have exulted on glancing at the Italian news in a recent number of the leading journal. It is within the memory of the present generation how the project of an overland route to India through Egypt was ridiculed as the impracticable notion of a monomaniac, and all sorts of horrors conjured up as infesting that "region dolorous" between the two seas.

Where all life dies, death lives, and nature breeds, Perverse, all monstrous, all prodigious things, Abominable, unutterrable, and worse
Than fables yet have feign'd, or fear conceiv'd, Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire.

If less shadowy and appalling than these dire shapes, the Bedouins were at least a real and substantial danger, and it was confidently predicted that without the payment of "black mail" no caravan would ever reach either Suez or Cairo in safety. Undeterred by the exaggerated apprehensions of the timorous or the wilful misrepresentations of interested persons, Lieutenant Waghorn held fast to his grand idea, and lived to see it partially realised. Instead of the patient slow-paced camel and the dreary canal-boat, light vans and steam-vessels were gradually introduced, but only to prepare the way for the railroad from Alexandria to Suez. Steamships of continually increasing speed have been placed on the line on either side of Egypt, while in France the lumbering diligence is as much a thing of the past at the pterodactyl or the dodo. And now the classic Brundisium is proposed as a substitute for the Phocæan Massilia, and thus every Indian officer or civilian will be enabled en route to accomplish the "grand tour," so lately the exclusive privilege of the rich.

On the 11th instant the House of Deputies at Turin, after a careful discussion prolonged over three days, passed a Bill empowering the Government to arrange with an Anglo-Italian Steam Navigation Company for the conveyance of the Mails between Ancona and Egypt. This, however, is only the preliminary step, for within twelve months from the present date the railway will be completed along the Adriatic coast as far as Brindisi, "when that famous ancient port will become the starting point from Italy to Egypt, and the journey of the overland mails will be shorter by fifty hours than it is now by following the Marseilles route." It is true this line will only be practicable for passengers unimpeded by heavy luggage, but that can easily be forwarded as at present from Southampton. Even by way of Ancona there will be a saving of at least thirty hours, while the more leisurely traveller will have the opportunity of traversing Burgundy, crossing the Alps at Mount Cenis, and visiting Turin and Bologna. Yet another and an easy route is suggested "from London to Ostend, across Belgium, and up the Rhine to Basle, Lucerne, the St. Gothard, Magadino, Arona, Milan, Piacenza, Bologna, and Ancona. The St. Gothard or the Luckmanier may as speedily be bored through as Mount Cenis, and Switzerland, Central Germany, and Belgium, may have as strong an interest in overcoming the rivalry of Marseilles on one side, and Trieste on the other, as England and offering an advance from 41 to 71 rupees a Italy very clearly have."

To this country it is a question of paramount importance to maintain an expeditious and uninterrupted communication with India. But in the event of a war with France there would remain only the circuitous voyage through the Straits of Gibraltar, with the constant danger of encountering the enemy's cruisers. No arguments can be needed to prove the expediency of having two strings to one's bow, or the inexpediency for a great commercial nation to be dependent on a rival and not always friendly Power. We trust, therefore, that our own Government will render every possible encouragement to the establishment of an alternate route through Europe, so that in war or in peace our communications with the East may ever remain unbroken and unimpaired.

COOLIE LABOUR IN ASSAM.

An official correspondence recently published in the Calcutta Gazette indicates, on the part of the Assam tea planters, the same indifference to the immutable laws of political economy that has lain at the root of the deplorable disputes between indigo planters and the ryots in Lower Bengal. It seems that "the Assamese, as a class, consider it a reproach to handle the hoe," a prejudice that is attributed to the degraded position which the labourer formerly filled in that country. The foreign settlers, however, appear to be as little disposed towards agricultural pursuits as the aboriginal population, so that when a demand for labour arose on the establishment of tea plantations the supply was found wholly inadequate for the purposes of this new cultivation. The price, indeed, 2½ rupees per mensem, was not very tempting, and thus the planters were reduced to the necessity of importing Coolies from Bengal. But in that market they had to compete with the emigration agents who were sending labourers to the West Indies and the Mauritius, and, consequently, wages gradually rose to 41 rupees per mensem. At that rate many of the Assamese themselves were induced to accept service under European employers, and the reproach attached to hired labour has been gradually wearing out. And not only has false shame disappeared, but a positive excitement has been created by a rumour that the Executive Engineer, Upper Assam, was willing to pay as much as 74 rupees per mensem for building barracks and road-making. This rise was, perhaps, excessive, but it is admitted that for the sake of certain collateral advantages, such as firewood gratis, employment for their families in picking tea-leaf, and residence at home — the Coolies preferred plantation to "navvy" work. Such being the case, Lieutenant Nolan had no alternative but to offer an equivalent in money, or fall under the censure of his superiors for allowing the work of his department to get into arrears. To a certain extent he obtained the use of convict labour from the jail at Debrooghur, but even with this assistance he was unable to do all that was expected of him, and Government had declined to import Coolies until local labour could not be procured for 5 annas a-day, or 9 rupees 6 annas a-month. As already remarked, the executive engineer may possibly have been too hasty in month, but it is more certain that the planters were endeavouring to keep down the price of labour below its legitimate value. The profits on tea growing have been systematically represented as something quite out of the common run, as they well might be where rent was merely nominal and the cost of cultivation so low that the cultivators could barely live upon their wages. But this state of things could not, and ought not, to endure for any length of time. The land was granted on liberal terms because of the difficulty in procuring labour, but not that the planter might make a rapid fortune. It is a very old maxim that the labourer is worthy of his hire, and that a fair day's work is entitled to a fair day's wage. Good masters make good servants all the world over, nor is there a more false economy than to grind down a working man to the lowest rates of subsistence allowance. As Major Hopkinson wisely remarks, "A rise in wages never yet injured any agricultural or industrial undertaking that had any real pith in it, and which was really congenial to the country in which it took its rise." The tea planters, therefore, must be content with little less than cent. per cent. profits, and remember while making a handsome provision for their own families, that something is due to those by whose aid this competence is achieved. At the same time, the superior officials have done well to check the excessive zeal of the young officer charged with the executive engineer's department, and recommend recourse to contracts instead of running up the price of labour by offering more than he fair market value. The discussion, however, is curious, as affording on a small scale an epitome of the indigo dispute. We find the planters eking out low wages by collateral advantages, and suddenly uttering shricks of alarm because their labourers have discovered that they are inadequately remunerated for their services. We find, too, a good natured official describing them as the pioneers of civilisation, and bewailing the loss of the "commercial prosperity," for the promotion of which improvements are needed. Then the Commissioner steps forward and claims for the workman a fair remuneration for his time and industry, while at the same time he reminds both his subordinate and the tea planters of those elemental principles of supply and demand which they were so ready to overlook. "It is a confusion of means with the end." he goes on to say, "to suppose that whatever promotes the increased growth of tea must be desirable, and the arguments for keeping a population at minimum wages and working them as slaves are nearly the same." Major Hopkinson is willing to afford every reasonable assistance and encouragement to the European capitalist, but he does not lose sight of his primary duty of protecting the native labourer and obtaining for him his rightful share of the produce of the soil. Finally, we have the Lieutenantgovernor descending from on high to adjust differences and restore harmony among all classes — and the Anglo-Indian journalist vehemently abusing the Commissioner and decrying all official authorities as the natural enemies of the non-official community. But how is it that Englishmen, when far from their native land, never bethink them how pleasant a thing it might be for brethren to dwell together in unity?

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE NIZAM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL." SIR,-I observe in your issue of the 14th July an article extracted from the Friend of India, in which there is an outrageous attack upon his Highness the Nizam. It is alleged that " his demeanour towards the British Government has become more insolent than ever," that he had "heaped up upon the English name and English officers a series of petty insults which could no longer be tolerated," that he had declined to receive the insignia of the Star of India, that he had encouraged plots and conspiracies against the English, and that it had "become necessary to coerce the Nizam into due subjection." To this end it is further advised that we should coalesce with the Robillas and Sikhs. Of the Arabs it is said that it would be difficult "to detach them from their pledged fidelity" to the Nizam, but the Rohillas, being mere mercenaries, it is suggested that they "dislike and despise all Hindustani Mussulmans," and have a blood feud with the Arabs; and of the Sikhs in the Nizam's country, that they "are animated by the old Khalsa hatred of their Mahomedan oppressors, and that they would gladly take service with us.

This wretched intrigue with the most abandoned classes of the population of Central India is recommended as a measure to be pursued by her Majesty's Government with a view to destroy by a treacherous revolt the native Prince, under whom they have sought and received protection, and the means of subsistence, for the last century.

But what is the Nizam's offence? In 1857, during the mutiny, it was felt and acknowledged by every one residing in Central India, that the individual safety and the maintenance of British authority in the whole of the country, from the Nerbuddah down to Cape Comorin, that is, over the whole of the Peninsula, depended mainly upon the line of policy adopted by H.H. the Nizam and his minister Salar Jung.

The late kingdom of Nagpore, on the northeast, was ripe for revolt, and was with great difficulty kept under; all the Mahratta States on the north and west were in actual rebellion; emissaries from the north were everywhere employed throughout the Nizam's territories to corrupt the soldiery and raise the population; all the noblemen in the city were eager for rebellion, the contingent force under European officers was more or less affected, and for many months danger was apprehended, and existed everywhere.

Day by day the rebellion spread; a long delay occurred in the arrival of European troops, the siege of Delhi lingered, and at one time was partially raised; the massacre of Cawnpore had taken place; our small force in Lucknow was surrounded and apparently lost, and everywhere the chances against the English seemed to increase dangerously; it was impossible to foresee the result, but the prevailing native opinion was that the English Raj had come to a violent end.

During all this time the Nizam and his minister never wavered in their fidelity. If they had hesitated or shown a mere lukewarm attachment to the English Government rebellion would have spread in twenty-four hours, not only throughout the Nizam's country, but in all the neighbouring States, for in all other places the hopes of the disaffected were chiefly fixed upon the Nizam. His Highness was stanch to the backbone, and it was mainly owing to the faithful loyalty of this Prince and his most able and sagacious minister. and their unflinching allegiance, that Europeans were not massacred and the English arms thrown back upon the coast throughout the whole of the Peninsula.

After two years' delay it was the pleasure of her Majesty's Government to recognise these services, and it is with reference to the instructions then received that these charges are now made against the Nizam. The Nizam hesitated to receive the Order of the Star, and he declined to cede Berar, and therefore he is an insolent traitor!

Let us consider the grounds of his hesitation in the one case, and of his refusal in the other. Davidson's conduct, as a public officer, has al-

It may be assumed that his Highness is not particularly well versed in terms of heraldry, as understood in the West, and it was natural that he should accept their meaning in their actual sense. In translating the rules of the Order, the heraldic terms " collar and chain," were described in Persian, "a yoke and fetter," and his Highness having always associated these ornamental appendages with convicts and slaves, not unreasonably wished to know how far he should be committed in assuming what he had heretofore considered as the badges of servitude and crime. Again, the Star of India contained the impression of her Majesty's face, and it is contrary to the most strict article of the Mahomedan Creed to make any graven image, much more for the head of a Mussulman Government to wear it on his own person. These were difficulties in etiquette which it was necessary to remove, even if his Highness had personally not seen any objection to the insignia. It was necessary to satisfy the acruples of his bigoted followers and subjects, particularly the priests; and nothing can be more unfair than to impute to insolence and disaffection a demur which arose, in fact, from the necessities of his position, and which ought to have been foreseen by her Majesty's advisers, or her representative in Calcutta.

As regards Berar, the Nizam merely adhered to his traditional policy, in declining to cede that province to the English Government; and the renewal of this demand on such an occasion was both ungenerous and in bad taste. In 1851 the Governor-general offered to cancel the debt of seventy laklis due by his Highness to the Company's treasury, if he would cede Berar and some He declined, and made great other districts. efforts to repay the money due; and reduced the debt to fifty lakhs. In 1853 the negotiation was renewed. His Highness again most positively refused to cede a foot of ground by treaty; he admitted the military power of the British, and his inability to defend his own territory, but a voluntary surrender of any portion of his dominions he peremptorily declined. He consented. however, to assign a large portion of his kingdom to British management as security for his money obligations, and a new treaty was concluded on this new basis.

In 1860 her Majesty declared her gracious intention to bestow honours and rewards upon the Nizam and his minister for their tried fidelity in the hour of our great peril, by restoring a portion of the country which had been assigned in 1853; and the Indian Council injudiciously availed itself of the opportunity to renew its attempt to get possession of the coveted province of Berar in perpetual cession. Is it because the Nizam had risked his life and kingdom to maintain his allegiance to the English Government during a season of extreme danger that he was now bound to undergo the shame and degradation of transferring to a foreign State a portion of his hereditary dominions? In 1853 he said to General Lowe, in full durbar, "Sir, if I made over my subjects to the British Government for a debt due by myself I should be ashamed to meet my father and grandfather in Paradise. I cannot do it; take the country by force, but do not ask me to give it up voluntarily." The mistake was to change the free gift of her Majesty into a huckstering negotiation, suggested by the sordid views of the cotton merchants in Manchester and Liverpool. Berar produces large quantities of cotton; it is under European management, and the staple produce is fully available for the use and benefit of our merchants, and it is a mistake to covet this province as a perpetual possession; but whether or not, it is no proof of disaffection on the part of his Highness the Nizam, that he adheres to a determination which is founded on right principle, and which he has always fully and fairly avowed.

Again, the Friend of India declares that Colonel Davidson, the Resident at Hyderabad, is unfit for his position because he did not carry out the orders of the Governor-general as regards Berar, that is, that he had not coerced the Nizam into surrendering this province.

The distinguishing characteristic of Colonel ways been his strong determination to carry out | the orders of Government exactly as they are given. Many people think that he does this excessively. I feel quite sure that Colonel Davidson would have had no more power than his predecessors to persuade the Nizam to alter his traditional policy; and the only part taken by Colonel Davidson was, probably, to intimate to his Government the disinclination of the native Prince to give up Berar. No fault whatever is attributable to Colonel Davidson; although it is probable that the Indian Government may have visited upon him the displeasure which rightly or wrongly attaches to an abortive negotiation.

It is melancholy to observe how the English public is misled with regard to the people and princes of India by the unprincipled misrepresentations of the journals devoted to the selfish and sordid interests of English capitalists and those who are still insatiable for annexation; although that policy has already brought us to the verge of ruin. The Friend of India is, and always has been, the unscrupulous advocate of British aggression; and has pandered, unfortunately with success, to the ambitious aspirations of the people of England, who are, unhappily, not aware of the crime and danger of this line of policy.—I am, sir, yours obediently,

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS-JULY 25. PIRACY IN THE EASTERN ARCHIPELAGO. In reply to Mr. CRAWFORD,

Mr. LAYARD said that the attention of the Government had, of course, been called to the account which appeared in the public papers relative to an attack on the Borneo pirates, which constituted an additional service rendered by the Government of Sarawak to the cause of civilisation, humanity, and commerce in the Eastern Archipelago. The attack was very effective, and the most notorious pirates in that sea were captured and punished. The Government had long had under consideration the importance of endeavouring to put a stop to piracy in that quarter. The Government of the Netherlands had already given orders that their ships of war should act with the British for the purpose, and he trusted that the Spanish Government would, before long, join the Governments of England and of the Netherlands in putting a stop to a system of piracy which had brought incalculable evils on the people of Borneo and of the Eastern Archipelago.

PRINCE OF WALES ISLAND, SINGAPORE, &C.

Mr. LINDSAY asked whether the Government of India had intimated to the Secretary of State for India its intention to introduce into the settlements of Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, and Malacca, the provisions of Act X. of 1862, being "An Act to consolidate and amend the Law relating to Stamp Duties;" and whether the Secretary of State for India had received through the Government of India a remonstrance of the Singapore Chamber of Commerce against the Extension of the said Act to the Straits Settle. ments.

Mr. T. G. Baring replied that no despatch on the subject had been received at the India office. INDIAN PRIZE-MONEY.

Sir M. FARQUHAR asked the Under Secretary for India what was doing with reference to the Delhi, Lucknow, Kirwee, and Indian prize-money generally; and the reasons for the long delay which had taken place in posting the officers of the 19th, 20th, and 21st Hussars, now in India, they having volunteered for those regiments nearly eighteen months ago.

Mr. Barmo said that a warrant had been issued for the distribution of the Delhi and Lucknow prize-money. The distribution of the former had been commenced on the 1st of December last, and that of the latter on the 31st of December. The rolls which showed the shares to be paid here not having been paid in India had just reached this country. Those rolls, as far as they related mainder, after payment of such liabilities and to her Majesty's forces, had been sent that morn-expenses as may remain to be provided for, be and the distribution of the shares yet to be allotted would commence there on the 1st of September next. So far as the officers and men of the late East India Company's local army were concerned, the distribution of the unpaid shares would commence at the same date at the Indiaoffice. The rolls relating to the unpaid shares of the Lucknow prize-money had not yet been received by the Government, but, from the date at which the distribution commenced in India they were expected to arrive by every mail. As soon as they reached this country steps would be taken for the distribution of the unpaid shares at Chelsea Hospital and at the India-office in the same way as the Delhi prize-money. With respect to what he might term the minor prize-moneys the principle of their distribution had been dedecided upon by the Treasury, and orders had been issued to the law officers of the Crown to prepare a Royal Warrant on the subject. Some delay had arisen in the preparation of the warrant, in consequence of the unfortunate illness of the Queen's Advocate, but there would be no further postponement in the matter, inasmuch as it had been placed in the hands of the Admiralty Advocate, in order that the warrant might be issued at once. In the case of the Kirwee prize a question had been raised as to the forces which had a right to share in it, and the delay in coming to a decision as to the principle on which it should be distributed had arisen from an anxiety on the part of the Treasury and the Government that the advocates of the claims of the forces on either side might have an opportunity of stating fully the case of the larger and smaller forces which were to share in the prize. In reply to the last question he might state that considerable delay had no doubt occurred in posting the officers to which it referred. It was only lately that the Secretary of India had addressed a despatch to the Government of that country on the subject, requesting that no unnecessary postponement might take place. The House must recollect that it was a matter of exceeding difficulty so to provide for the redemption of the pledge given to the old cavalry officers that their promotion in the new regiments should not be worse than in the old, and to combine with that the placing on a proper footing the other officers who might have volunteered for those regiments.

EAST INDIAN NAVAL ALLOWANCES.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE called attention to the recent reduction of "batta" payable to the Admiral on the East India and China station by the withdrawal of that allowance from the flag, arguing that the pay of the Admiral on that station should be restored to a sum that will place the emoluments of the Commander-in-Chief on a footing that will enable him to maintain the dignity of his position, and more in accordance with the allowances of military Commanders-in-Chief in the various Presidencies.

Mr. Cochrane complained of the withdrawal from the navy of many privileges they formerly possessed.

Lord C. PAGET replied to Sir J. ELPHINSTONE, observing that officers went out to the command under a distinct understanding as to the amount of the allowances.

CEYLON RAILWAY.

The final meeting of this company was held on Wednesday, the 23rd inst., at the London Tavern. The report stated that the capital has been repaid to all the proprietors except three, who have not yet claimed their proportions. The Act for dissolving the company has received the Royal assent. The capital belonging to the three proprietors above referred to will be paid by the directors to the Accountant general of the Court of Chancery for investment till claimed; and as soon as the payment to the Accountant general has been made the company will cease to exist. There is a balance in hand of £2,881, arising chiefly from forfeitures on shares. The directors recommend that out of this sum £1,500 be appropriated by the proprietors, and that the re ing to the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, applied as compensation to the secretary and clerks for the loss of their appointments. secretary, after having devoted seventeen ye the undertaking, had earned by his constant, zealous, and able exertions, the confidence and esteem of every member of the board.

A formal resolution adopting the report, and the recommendations therein, was passed unanimously.

The Chairman then declared the business at an end, and that the company was wound up.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the posttion and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Bonourable Court of Drectors of the East India Company.
On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 22;
ex, on cloth, in a case, 23. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3a. er, on cloth, in nished, £3. 3s.

nished, £3. 3e.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to reader it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the nances of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid dows, and the trunk roas conspicuously coloured. The newly-equired district in Burman is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honoursule East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Sixe, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA: with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

—Daily News, Jan. 21, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jun. 25, 1862.

miner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner.

Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make "The History of the Opera" a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances.

A work of unquestionable merit and of sacceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Efferteering Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in 10to Chinates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly benefic al. Manutactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) only by DINNEFORD and Co., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the World.

PRITCHARD'S DANDELION, CAMO-MILE, RHUBARB, and GNGER PILLS.—This peculiar preparation of Dandelion acts particularly on the irrer, thus avoiding the use of mercurials, and will be found invaluable to parties suffering from a sluggish state of that organ, or who have resided in India or other hot climates; whilst the well known stomachic efficacy of camomile, rhubarb, and ginger, renders these pills the most happy combination possible; and as many are at a loss for a sate remedy they will find this medicine a great convenience, which may be resorted to by all persons at any age, under any circumstances, and without the least inconvenience.

Prepared by W. Prichard, Anothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. May be had of all Medicine Vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Soundness HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Soundness minded and immediately have this excellent unguent applied to it in the manner pointed out in its accompanying directions. For thoroughly cleansing a diseased or broken skin, and for rousing its poisoned vessels or depressed nerves to healthy action, nothing can surpass Holloway's well-known Ointment. It strikingly shows its power when applied to the "old man's ulcer," which settles on the leg, and often becomes most intractable under the ordinary treatment, though none has yet withstood this cooling and healing salve. The troublesome swellings preparatory to most ulcerations of the legs are likewise reduced by the diligent application of Holloway's unguent, by giving strength to the weakened circulation through the capillaries.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every grown and the state of th the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little underthat there is no animal whose natural history, capa-bilities, and general treatment are so little under-stood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do borses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professions. and the cause of some of the most eminent profes-sionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illusdirect contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have lett unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and instructor to those who have to do with sick and sull'ering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to man and horse."—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader.

The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manuaf for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE inauguration of the new High Court of Judicature for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, which took place on the 1st July, is the most important item of intelligence received by the Bombay Mail of the 12th July. The Court is constituted as follows: -- Sir Barnes Peacock, Knight, Chief Justice; Sir Charles Robert Mitchell Jackson, Knight; Sir Mordaunt Lawson Wells, Knight; Henry Thomas Raikes, Esq.; Charles Binny Trevor, Esq.; George Loch, Esq.; Henry Vincent Bayley, Esq.; Charles Steer, Esq.; It is urged that though he did fire at his vic. Mrs. Bake, Mr. G. T. Laity.

John Paxton Norman, Esq.; Walter Morgan, Esq.; Francis Baring Kemp, Esq.; Walter Scott Seton-Karr, Esq.; Louis Stuart Jackson, Esq. As it was only on the previous day that the Judges and Officers of the Supreme Court became cognizant of the terms of the new charter, it was agreed that the High Court should not enter upon its functions until time had been given for the framing of rules and the arrangement of matters of detail.

The Letters Patent appear among other interesting Official Papers in our present issue, but for the benefit of such readers as may not care to wade through seven or eight columns of small type, we may briefly remark that by virtue of this measure the Sudder Judges are elevated to the Bench of the Supreme Court, carrying with them the powers and the jurisdiction of their own court, to supplement the powers and jurisdiction of the other, and adding to the Bar of the Court the vakeels who are now entitled to appear and plead and act, in the Sudder Adawlut. The Sudder Judges find themselves invested with all the powers, original and appellate, of the Supreme Court in addition to their own; her Majesty's Judges, on the other hand, are invested with the powers of the Sudder Adawlut. The powers of the Judges are thus made equal and co-extensive, and the two Courts merge in a High Court of Judicature for each Presidency.

The Anglo-Indian press exults in the hope that Rao Sahib, governor of Bithoor under the Nana, will be fully committed to stand his trial for numerous murders, as the result of the investigation going on at Cawnpore. The capture of one of the Sealkote murderers would also have been the subject of unmitigated satisfaction had he not defended himself so desperately that his captors were compelled to slay him on the spot. Then, a rumour has gone abroad that the ubiquitous Feroze Shah has at length fallen in a fight with some Ghoorka robbers whom he encountered while wandering amid the Nepaul hills in the disguise of a faqueer. The story, however, is somewhat apocryphal. More certain is the fate of the unfortunate creature whom the Bombay authorities threw into gaol on suspicion of being the Nana. It is admitted that the poor fellow was well treated while in confinement, but he has nevertheless died just as an order had been issued for his release. While complacently smiling at the sufferings, or complacently smiling at the sufferings, or death, of native malefactors, the European residents in India have been grievously shocked by the execution in Calcutta of one John by the execution in Calcutta of one John Rudd, formerly a private in H.M.'s 81st Regt., who had been convicted of shooting a native.

tim, it is not clear that he had any intent to kill him. Fortunately, Lord Elgin had the firmness to reject a petition with some three thousand signatures pleading for the murderer's life.

The Khassiahs are again troublesome, and have overpowered a small detachment of sepoys escorting commissariat stores. The north-west frontier is also slightly unsettled, the Khyberees having closed the Pass and assumed a hostile attitude.

The sale of the Kirwee spoils has, after all, produced no more than £350,000, a grievous disappointment to those who have been looking for a million. The Dhar prize money, valued at £100,000, is to be distributed entirely among the Malwa Field Force, commanded by Major-General (now Sir Charles) Stewart, K.C.B.

In the Queen's Speech proroguing Parliament not the slightest allusion is made to India, while China is only mentioned in the following brief paragraph: -- "Her Majesty's forces in China, together with those of the Emperor of the French, have lately been employed, in co-operation with those of the Emperor of China, in protecting some of the chief seats of British commerce in China from injury by the civil war which is laying waste portions of that vast empire."

THE COST OF THE AMALGAMATION OF THE ARMIES.

Since the 10th day of April, 1861, from which the amalgamation of the Indian and royal armies may be dated, more than a year has passed, and yet the measure is far from complete. Not to speak of hundreds of officers said, with a peculiar irony, to be doing general duty, because there is for them no employment, the staff corps has as yet no corporate existence nor fixed rates of pay, and the reorganisation of the corps of Indian artillery, if not also of engineers, exists only on The work of amalgamating has been to paper. all the authorities a most difficult and delicate duty, which has been on the whole well discharged, but we cannot understand how they will justify the great delay in completing the arrangements regarding the staff corps or in carrying out the orders for rendering the artillery really royal.

The staff corps, we have always maintained, is the first good result to India of this military amalgamation. Its strength will ultimately be mot less than 2,500 officers, the elite of the army, of considerable Indian service and experience. with Indian qualifications tested by strict examinations, knowing the natives, not disliking the country, animated by esprit-de-corps, and with the prospect in their grasp of ultimately sharing in the administrative offices of the Regulation as they now do in the Non-regulation Provinces. In the ranks of the corps should be found men who will take the place of the now almost extinct school of "soldier-politicals," who will extend the prestige of our name into all the countries of Asia beyond our frontier, who will equal if they do not eclipse the reputation which the late Company's officers so deservedly acquired as masters of the history, the antiquities, the language, and the sciences of the East. It is of importance that this corps should receive its constitution at once. We understand that the code of pay for its several grades has been at last sent to England for approval, but the rules of examination for entrance into the corps, on which its future efficiency must depend, are no nearer settlement than they were a year ago. The order is now carried out that the pay of staff officers employed in the civil department shall be included in the Civil Budget. According to the latest returns of the officers so employed, this pay amounts to Rs. 6,16,484 annually, of which Rs. 2,04,552 is in Bengal, Rs. 3,09,732 in Madras, and Rs. 1,02,000 in Bombay. The effect of the staff corps rules of promotion has been remarkable. After twelve years' service, a staff officer becomes a captain, after twenty a major, and after twenty six years a lieutenant colonel. These grades are thus given in the staff corps five years earlier than the average period after which they are attained in regiments. In the old Indian army promotion was very slow, and the efficiency of the army was thus sacrificed by the fact that men were always old and sometimes gouty before they obtained a command. While giving a boon to the officers, the State is benefited by securing younger men, at a cost of only Rs. 12,15,097 for the periods thus abridged. It should be admitted, however, that the retirement of officers on extra pension has made regimental promotion unusually rapid of late, which fact reduces the cost to Rs. 8,50,569. In Madras, for instance, out of 198 promotions of officers, some 70 per cent, were benefited by electing for the staff corps. Every year this extra expense will diminish as officers promoted on entering the corps are advanced on the cadres of transferred. Owing to the outbreak of the mutiny their own regiments. Whatever extra expense there may be ultimately, will be cheaply compen- till towards the end of the next year, when a corsated for by obtaining younger and more efficient respondence ensued which has been carried on officers than before.

engineers involves an additional charge in the posed on either side are these: The society which military estimates this year of Rs. 2,44,133, of has existed so long, supported by private subwhich only Rs. 59,476 is due to the engineers, scriptions in the fulfilment of objects of great Although the final arrangements connected with public interest, has now in point of fact a twothese corps have been published in England and partially maintained at a needless expense, and the idea is fostered in the minds of the private soldiers that they are still not altogether Queen's troops. Hence at Meerut lately the two instances of insubordination which were punished by cour martial, and were regarded as so serious that officers enjoying their ease in the Hills were summoned to their batteries. The financial results of the retirement of those officers of the Indian army who accepted the extra pension while serving in India are interesting. The total saving to the Indian budget by retirement was Rs. 16,63,978 in the proportion of Rs. 6,71,481 in Bengal, Rs. 7,47,468 in Madras, and Rs. 2,45,629 in Bombay. But from this total has to be deducted Rs. 6,81,513 for promotion, leaving Rs. 9,82,395. At first the whole of this sum will be absorbed in increased Home charges for pensions, but as casualties occur the economy of the mea sure will become evident.

When the temporary irritation caused to Indian officers has passed away, an irritation due as much, perhaps, to the fact of mutiny as to its -amalgamation-it will be found that this resultgreat measure of imperialising the Indian army has its advantages, even to India. The combined Imperial army will be cheaper than the separate Queen's and local forces, while India will be better defended by a strong European army. Officers will have in their turn the advantages of both Indian and European service, while the great political danger, which would be a dear price to pay for these benefits, of governing India by means of men unacquainted with, and therefore disliking it, is avoided by the staff corps. The sooner that corps is fully equipped the better. Friend of India.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

The Asiatic Society of Bengal is at present engaged in negotiations with the Government in reference to the transfer of its property to the "Indian Museum" now about to be established. It seems to be an inseparable accident of these societies, established for the purpose of making scientific collections and encouraging scientific pursuits, to be eventually swallowed up in one great national institution. They are the tributary streams which eventually meet in a general reservoir of scientific illustration, because the necessity of the student and the progress of natural science require the combination. The intimate relations existing between the several natural sciences necessitate means of comparison, and a museum must exhibit universality of collection. Thus the Asiatic Society, so far as regards its museum, falls before the very progress which it has been a chief instrument in securing. The society, however, with its library and funds, will still remain to occupy its old field, but it may be a question whether its prosperity will not be impaired by the loss of such an attraction as its museum has been. While parting with the collection which it has so long and so laboriously been engaged in accumulating, the society cannot fail to remember with gratitude the lengthened services and activity of its indefatigable curator, Mr. Blyth, who has succeeded in achieving a reputation which is European in its character.

It was as far back as the year 1857 when the society first came to the formal decision that neither their funds nor their present premises sufficed for the preservation of the extensive collection which they had made. Accordingly they resolved to enter into communication with the Government, urging the foundation in Calcutta of an Imperial Museum, to which the whole of the society's collections, except the library, might be the society delayed to act upon their resolution at intervals to the present date. The facts mate-The reorganisation of the corps of artillery and rial to a right perception of the conditions pro fold character to support. In one respect it is a pursuits within the geographical limits Asia. In another it is the steward of an enormous collection, to which a national and imperial interest attaches, and which involves considerable expense in its preservation. It is the private property of the society, which has hitherto provided accommodation for it, but the Government have felt bound for some time past to defray to a considerable extent the expenses connected with it. To show how these collections have entirely outgrown the limited capacity of a private society to support them we may observe that in a quarter of a century the Zoological collection has expanded from the shelves of a single case to the number of 5,000 birds, 4,000 animals, 1,000 fishes, and a larger number of reptiles, crustacea and insects. A catalogue of 200 pages attests the importance of the shell collection, which is equalled if not surpassed by that of the fossils. A valuable collection of rocks and minerals, eight thousand rupees worth of ancient coins, and a variety of sculptures, antiquities, arms and miscellaneous curiosities, swell the total value of the society possessions to the amount of two lakhs of rupees. The acquisition of this property has been made subject to the tacit condition of preserving it and rendering it accessible to the student, a duty in which the public is interested and which the public must discharge.

The Society therefore proposes to divest itself of property, part of which has not been acquired without considerable expense, but expects from the Government the observance of the tacit condition on which most of it was obtained-viz., to provide for its preservation. But beyond this the Society has no intention of yielding up its existence, nor of abandoning its pursuits. It intends to be in all respects the same as before, having made a magnificent present to the public which will not be the less appreciated that it relieves the donors from a burden which could not, in strict justice, belong to them, and which the Government have already stopped forward to undertake. The Society, of course, will preserve its library and retain its funds for the purpose of prosecuting its investigations and continuing its publications - maintaining its widely-celebrated character as the oldest Asiatic Society and most influential patron of those investigations which relate to the literature and science of Asia.

The proposition of the Society has been gladly acceded to by the Government who have thus ready made to their hands the glory of establishing an imperial museum. But at the same time for purposes of negotiation they prefer to dwell upon the prospect of the new liability which it will impose, about Rs. 6,000 annually, besides free quarters in the new museum. In this way they overlook the magnificence of the present, and exaggerate the convenience of dispossession. Accordingly, Government has recently proposed that the Society should give up their present premises, which have cost them a lakh of rupees, and for which they are to receive no return whatever, unless the accommodation for their library in the new museum is to be held an equivalent. The Society, however, may probably consider that their claims for the enjoyment of this privilege are derived from their long and successful prosecution of an undertaking which has resulted so advantageously to the public. They are surely entitled to the undisturbed possession of their present property to enable them to continue their usefulness. What may be the claims of the Government to deprive them of it is difficult to conjecture. The Government are quite ready, to judge from the correspondence, to acknowledge the services rendered to the cause of science, and the independent and useful activity of the Society. They can hardly be insensible to the valuable aid which is afforded to them in the establishment of the Museum, or of the powerful auxiliary which will remain by their side. bringing the results of private enterprise to the support of a public institution. In determining the relative claims of the two parties we think that the Society is entitled to follow the example of Brennus, and besides mere pecuniary considerations to throw into the scale the lustre which in India, a double staff—local and royal—is still private body to promote literary and scientific its past activity has shed on British India.

The Governor-General in Council, in the recent communication made by the Government to the Society, has fully recognised the great services which it has rendered to literature, archeology, and science, and the assistance it has from time to time afforded in developing the material resources of India. For more than three quarters of a century it has stood forward as the unaided pepresentative in this Presidency of literature and science. In the course of that time its various publications, especially the twenty-one volumes of its Researches, have most materially conduced to extend our knowledge of the East, and they contain a series of papers by the greatest scholars of India, whose value has been acknowledged in every country of Europe. Amougst these we may especially mention three of the late Professor Wilson, which are now about to be re-published in his collected works. Besides its own direct lahours the Society may also fairly claim the honour of having initiated a zeal for Oriental learning, especially as relating to India, which though neglected in England has been taken up with enthusiasm by France and Germany. The various Oriental Societies of England, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, and America, all acknow ledge it as their parent, and in common with ourselves will rejoice if the Society is now enabled to start on a new career with extended means of pursuing its researches .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PSEUDO NANA.-Hurjee Bromocharjee, alias Nana Doondoo Punt, who was captured in Kurrachee, and sent to Calcutta to be forwarded to Campore for identification by Dr. Tressider, late surgeon of the real Nana, has died in the Medical College Hospital. At the coroner's inquest some interesting information regarding the real Nana was elicited. Major Wroughton, of the commissiarat had frequent opportunities of seeing the Nana from 1850 to 1856. Unlike this poor faquir, he had a large full eye, light olive complexion, like the Delhi Mahajuns, and he was stout. "The only other member of the family I knew was Baber Blut, his elder brother; he was taller than the Nana, and he was unlike the man at the police." Hormu-jee Bezenjee Mody, a Parsee broker, was a servant of the Nana at Bithoor, in 1854. " He was a tall and stout man, with a large eye, beautiful round face, complexion fair, he had some slight marks of small pox on both cheeks. He was then a man aged about thirty or thirty-one, he would now be thirty-six or thirty seven. He was in the habit of speaking the Mahratta language; he could not speak a word of English." Seo Brijodass, the cousin of the pseudo Nana, said his cousin was an Adiss Brahmin. He was a writer of religious books, and was supported by alms given him; for twenty years he had lived in one place called Mera Bhaze. "He had a Thacoor there where the Hindoos would worship. I am now speaking the G-ozerattee language. Hurjee Bromocharjee would speak the same language. I did not act as his servant, but I shared with him the proceeds obtained from devotees. We were both arrested at Kurrachee Bunder, which is 250 cosses, or 500 miles, from where we live at Dwarkenauth. We had gone there seeking alms; it was our custom every year to travel about. My cousin was said to be Nana Sahib on account of a mark under the eye; we told the police what we were and where we lived; we were not sent to our country for inquiry to be made." The poor man was well treated during his confinement, his passage had been paid back to Bombay by the Candia, and he was to have received compensation. Still the question remains, why did not the Bombay officials first send him to his native place for identification by the authorities? The whole matter is not creditable to them .- Friend of India.

KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY .- The result of the sale of Kirwee spoil is less than we anticipated. only £350,000. Ackshai gold mohurs fetched Rs. 50 each. The Maharajah of Puttialla gave Rs. 49,000 for a serpeche, or tiara, Rs. 24,000 for a ring, Rs. 7,000 for four pearls. Dhuniput Sing,

THE MECCA PASTORAL.—The "Nuseehutwarra" or encyclical letter, said to have been sent from Mecca to all Mahammedans throughout the world, is supposed not to be genuine. It first appeared in a Bombay native newspaper, but the Arabic version is not forthcoming. From Bombay it has been most widely circulated. most remarkable circumstance connected with it is the quietness and utter absence of excitement among the Mussulmans themselves with which it has been received. But it is none the less worthy of notice. An English officer in Northern India intercepted a copy sent by one Mirza Kala Beg, a Shahzadah of Delhi, to his step-daughter, a resident in the district, and detained a second copy of the letter from the ex-Nawab of Banda, at Indore, to a friend and former retainer. In addition to the accounts we have already given of the contents of the letter, we understand that the writer, directed by the Angel Gabriel, declares that, in the year 1279 Hegira, which will commence on Sunday, the 20th June, vast numbers of "Insans" and "Jins" will be killed, that the Imam Mehndee and one Dygon will shortly appear, and that the latter will be slain by our Saviour Jesus Christ. The writer enjoins the circulation of the letter from village to village, town to town, and house to house. It is a note worthy fact that so far as attending the Mosque on Friday is concerned, the number of faithful Mussulmans is very small. A pious Mussulman from Central Asia lately expressed it to us as his opinion that all the Mussulmans of Bengal lead such unholy lives that they are children of the devil. From the fact that the letter is printed at Bombay with the name of the press and printer upon it. Government attach no political importance to it. The suspicion of individual officers best able to form an opinion is, none the less, that there is a hidden political meaning under it. Nor in estimating our position should we overlook the fact that our European army is less efficient now than in 1857, while the sepoy force is much The former fact is due to the "strike" caused by Lord Canning, and the influx of young recruits. Railways and the almost yearly improvements in the weapons of warfare add, however, to our military strength to an extent which it is difficult to estimate. We have just heard that the female members of the Nana's family are now on their way to Bonares if they have not already arrived there. Of this fact, doubtless, the authorities are aware, and will not fail to avail themselves .- Friend of India.

CRINOLINE.-The Rev. Mr. Gaster, a Church Missionary, while temporarily occupying the Simla pulpit, has given offence to the residents. He most properly condemned the practice which seems to have prevailed of building and repairing houses on the Lord's Day, which resulted in a unan mous resolution on the part of the residents to a reform in this matter. But he then attacked crinoline, was criticised in the North-West journals, and this is his defence. "As to crinoline. there are at least six hundred people in Simla who would attend Divine Service if they could: but the station church has seats for only three hundred and fifty. This state of affairs has been made worse by very many people taking double seats for ladies because of the amplitude of the present form of dress. Thus at least sixty people are driven out of church by the ladies' dresses, and the real question stands thus: 'How many immortal souls or how many yards of stuff from the mercer's shop shall come to church." Mr. Gaster is, we believe, a very worthy Missionary, and declares "I did not use the word 'crinoline," as I hate Spurgeonism." But he was only a temporary occupant of the pulpit, and he went about his reforms in ladies' dress in a wrong way. To be singular, either as a chaplain or a missionary, is not to be successful or wise.

INDIAN ARCHITECTURE.-In Hindoostan, the principle of division of labour at one period attained its full development. The offices of the architect being multiform, nice distinctions were made between them. There was the sthapati, or the architect, strictly so called; the sutragrahi, or ring, Rs. 7,000 for four pearls. Dhuniput Sing, measurer; the vardhaci, or joiner; and the medium-sized pearls. None of the ston of Benares, gave Rs. 12,300 for a pearl necklace. tacshaca, or carpenter. Tope is a corruption of perfect, hence the small amount realised.

the Sanskrit word sthupa, from which the word sthapati (architecture) is derived. The writer, following Fergusson, considers the temples of Southern India to be the largest and handsomest in the country. They are square in plan, thus differing from those of Northern India which are crowned by a dome. The famous temple of Juggurnath, in Orissa, is of this description: it was built in 1198 A.D., and is 170 or 180 feet in height. The famous Vishweshwar temple of Benares, built only a hundred years ago, is a compound of the prime Hindoo and Saracenic style, while the enormous temples of Bindrabun and the exquisite buildings of Muttra show the influence of the English style. Now, however, it is not the least sign of the absence of all vitality in Hindooism that temple-building on a great scale is rare, and that ruined temples are frequently met with.

COSTLY CHANGES .- The following is an approved method in which to drop some four or five thousand rupees of the public money for hobbies. Last year the office of the Presidency Paymaster was removed to the Treasury, in order. as was said, to contribute to the convenience of sick officers; the convenience being that they could mount up three stories high by a ricketty staircase and landing ankle-deep in sand and brick-dust, and then descend to the Treasury to get the "needful." Soon, however, it was found that this liberal and feeling concession was more than counterbalanced by the distance of the Presidency Paymaster's office from that of the Military Auditor-General's department; and accordingly the paymaster was moved into the notorious Mundy caves, so as to be near the Audit-office. But no sooner was the paymaster installed in the caves than the Audit-office was removed two miles away, to Park-street, Chowringhee, at the other end of Calcutta. At the same time the Military-Accountant's office, also near the caves, was ordered across the city, and removed to Russelstreet, Chowringhee, where we will leave it for the present. The Audit office, in the meantime, had not been long in No. 3, Park-street before it was ordered to No. 7, Middleton-row, where it now is; and whence again it has been ordered to "move on," returning to the premises in Bankshall-street, over the Mundy caves, whence it started on its travels a few months ago. Here we will let it rest, and we hope the authorities will do the same, whilst we take in tow another of those wandering offices which we cast off above, and conduct it back to its former berth. The Military Accountant's office, which, as we have said, was ordered from the house belonging to the Government in Coilah Ghaut-street, is now ordered back to those premises; whither also the office of the Army Clothing Agency has been directed to proceed. Finally, we hear that it is by no means improbable that the office of the Controller of Military Finance may be also ordered to move over the Mundy caves. All this is very funny indeed; but leaving personal inconvenience and interruption to official business out of the question, we believe that in our estimate of the expense of all these removals we have much understated the amount of the public money uselessly thrown away .- Englishman.

BOUNTY FOR RE-ENLISTMENT.-A most important military order has just been published. It is as necessary, for both pecuniary and military reasons, that India should have an army of seasoned soldiers as experienced officers. Accordingly, to induce men whose term of service has expired to re-enlist, sums varying from Rs. 119-14-8 for the Infantry to Rs. 136-7-2 for the Horse Artillery are to be given as bounty and in lieu of kit, &c. This will act as an irresistible temptation to most of the time expired men.

THE NANA'S BELT .- On the 19th June Messrs. Hamilton and Co., of Calcutta, sold the booty taken at Bithoer, the Nana's estate. According to the Phænix the "wonderful" belt of the Nana was knocked down for the sum of Rs. 47,000, the purchaser being an agent of the Maharajah of Puttiala. The belt consists of large emeralds and rubies set in gold, and a hanging network of medium-sized pearls. None of the stones were EXECUTION OF JOHN RUDD. John Rudd was hanged on the 23rd June before the Great Jail of Calcutta. A few European and several natives whose dress pronounced them not respectable were present, but the services of the police were not required. The Hurkaru states that Rudd was mercifully kept in ignorance of the efforts made to obtain a reprieve till he himself asked if no effort would be made to save him. On hearing that there was no hope he resigned himself to his fate, protesting his innocence of intention to kill the native. He was regularly visited several times a day by the Rev. H. Moule, Cathedral chaplain, and by one of the devoted Bible women who daily visit the prisoners. The night before the execution Rudd passed sleeplessly. Up to Friday morning he was only handcuffed at night, but when all hope of pardon was gone he was ironed to prevent a possible attempt at suicide. He spent the morning in prayer with the clergyman till a few minutes before 51, when Mr. Collis, the deputy-sheriti, demanded his body in the usual way. Rudd walked to the foot of the scaffold, but seemed to be overcome when being pinioned. The chaplain in surplice preceded him up the scaffold, reading the burial service. After looking for a moment at the crowd, the cap covered his face, and he died instantaneously. The body was suspended for an hour, and buried in the military cemetery.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE MUTLAH RAILWAY. The Englishman regrets to record an accident, attended with considerable loss of life, which happened on the 28th June, at half-past nine A.M., on the unopened portion of the Mutlah Railway at the Pyallee Bridge, about a mile and a half beyond the Chappahattee station, the present terminus of the railway. The accident occurred in the following manner:-Not far beyond the Chappahattee station there is a river about 300 feet wide and sixty feet deep, which runs with an extremely strong current. This river it was necessary to bridge over, but so many difficulties presented themselves, owing to the nature of the ground and the rapidity of the current, that Mr. Mackieson, the then chief engineer, determined to cut a new channel so as to divert the waters of the Pyallee river. This was done with some difficulty, and a bund of sandbags was erected on a shoal in the original river, so as to stop the current. Previously to this, however, the bridge over the new channel was commenced, and two solid brick abutments were sunk to a considerable depth below high water, the span of the bridge being one hundred and eighty feet. On the top of these abutments there were to be two iron main girders, and it was in the erection of these that the accident took place. In order to build them five pair of pillars composed of brickwork had been sunk between the abutments, on a foundation of solid concrete, and on the top of these had been laid a wooden scaffolding. At the time of the accident a considerable portion of the girders had been finished, and there were two large cranes at work on the scaffolding. This morning the man in charge of one of these cranes, who is the only one of the workmen employed who escaped uninjured, felt a sudden trembling of the scaffolding, and the next moment one of the pair of pillars gave way, and a portion of the scaffolding supported by it came down with a crash, killing two Europeans, named John Copperthwaite and James Grant, and six or seven natives. The pillar which sunk was totally destroyed, but the others stood firm and the main girder was uninjured. The engineers of the division account for the accident by the pressure of an unusually high tide, but it is also supposed that the pillar which gave way had sustained some previous injury from the shifting and chating against it of a chain attached to a dredge which had got out of its place.

Assistant-Surgeon Cheke .- His Excellency the Commander-in-chief has appointed Assistantsurgeon Cheke, of the Bengal army, at present in medical charge of the station of Jutoglie to be personal surgeon on his stati, during the absence in Europe of Dr. Longhurst, who leaves this June, and was expected to leave that city next day for Gowhatty in Assam, which he would reach about the 21st. The districts in which the General has been operating against the rebels for the last few months had been made over to Captain Morton, Deputy Commissioner, who was organising the police arrangements for restoring order and capturing offenders against the law. The letters from General Showers' head-quarters state that he and those officers who left Calcutta with him, calculate upon being back at the Presidency before the end of July; but as their return will of course depend upon the state of affairs in Assam, and the quantity of work to be done in that province, it is impossible to give even an approximate guess at the date of their resuming their appointments here until they shall have had time to look about them. The promised insurrection of the Cossiahs on the setting in of the rains had not taken place, and everything seemed to promise a return of peace and order in the recently disturbed districts, which are now, for the most part, covered by the inundation, and only traversable to any extent in boats .- English-

BENARES, June 30 .- The first meeting of the Benares Debating Club was held on Saturday, the 28th instant, at 5 P.M., at the hall of Baboo Fatta narain Singh, the honourable Rajah Deo Narain Singh being in the chair. The proceedings of the preliminary meeting were read by the secretary and confirmed. The subject for the discussion of the day was "The System of Education best suited to India." Four essays in Hindoostani were read on the subject, one of which contained some very sensible remarks. this the debates of the evening were opened by a speech in English delivered by Baboo Madhu Sudan Mookerjee, who first of all expressed his cordial and grateful thanks to the Government for doing everything in its power to confer the blessing of education upon the countless multitudes of his countrymen, and for its having most liberally and generously established colleges and schools in which a good and liberal education is imparted to the students almost for nothing. He then, adverting to the question at issue, passed a remark or two on the existing system of education pursued in India, by saying, "that the system is defective and incomplete on account of the absence of all moral tuition," having at first shown that the culture of our moral faculties forms an integral and essential part of all education. (When he said this, he, of course, did not mean to blame the Government for this defect, for he thinks, together with others, that the natives of this country cannot be too thankful to the Government for all that it has done, and is still doing to promote the education of this country which it is not bound to The first speaker also said that the vernacular should be the medium by which a knowledge of the sciences should be conveyed to the boys. After him Baboo Madhab Chunder Deva rose up to oppose the sentiments of the late speaker advanced in favour of moral culture at schools, which, he thought, should be done at home. defend himself, Baboo Madhu Sudan Mookerjee was obliged to rise again, when he said that "since the word 'education' means the bringing out of all our faculties, the physical, the mental, and the moral, and since we say that Government bestows education upon the people, therefore any system of education that neglects the cultivation of our moral faculties is defective and incomplete. Then rose up Baboo Siva Prasad, the joint inspector of schools, who, in a clear, placid, and mellifluous speech in Hindoostani at first pointed out the state of education in this country under its Hindoo sovereigns, when it sometimes met with liberal encouragement by the bestowal of a lac of rupees for a single word. nature of instruction imparted at that time was almost wholly religious; and all the books that are now found written in those days are in poetry, which shows that poetry used to be greatly cultivated. During the time of the Mohamedan kings, he said, there prevailed a great

GENERAL SHOWERS was at Dacca on the 14th he came to speak of the state of education under the British Government, he pronounced no remark upon the existing systems prevalent, but said that the English have introduced those systems of education in India which are in vogue in England. He said that it is not the duty of Government to educate the people of a country; the Government is merely to protect the lives and property of its subjects. It ought only to encourage those things which contribute to their welfare. Adverting to the speech of the first speaker, he said that it was not the business of Government to impart intellectual instruction even. The people, he said, should educate themselves; the burden should be borne by them, and the Government should only help them. The establishment of colleges and schools in India is with a view to set an example to the natives, and to train up youth for its service. The universities in India, he said, would prove a great stimulus for the promotion of education in this country. With regard to the appointment of University Professors, he said, the Government has been good enough to appoint one for experimental and natural philosophy, and now it is the part of the natives to appoint Professors for the other departments of science. He concluded his speech by an exhortation to the gentry, to whom he was addressing his speech, that if they wished the promotion of any particular branch of knowledge, or of the study of any particular language, for instance, Sanscrit, let them at once raise subscriptions to accomplish their wish. Then spoke Baboo Shamachurn Banerjee, the Judge of the Small Cause Court at Benares, who most vehemently and in a brilliant speech, recommended that in order to be perfected in the western sciences, the natives should, somehow or other, visit England, and see how education is pursued there, which would greatly forward the cause of education in this country. He did not lose sight of the great barrier which lies in the way, viz., He did not lose sight caste; but he admitted that in spite of the trammels of caste, it was not impossible. Babo Haro Gopal Sena then rose to support what had been advanced by the Judge. He was followed by the Assistant Secretary, Baboo Kalidas Mookerjee, who delivered an impressive, forcible, lively and eloquent speech in English. He also said that Government was not bound to give education to the people, and that for what it is giving, though defective, the natives ought to be most gratefully thankful. For the promotion of religious education, he said that such a book ought to be put into the hands of the youth which may contain all the main doctrines and moral precepts of the Hindoo religion for the Hindoos by the parents, and not by Govern-ment. After him Baboos Kedarnath Paludhi and Ramchundra Basu spoke; the former of whom maintained that it is impossible to impart religious education to the boys in Government colleges and schools. The President then rose up, and in a brilliant and eloquent speech in Hiudustani delivered his thoughts upon the subject. He first of all said that boundless thanks were due to the Government for the education which it is bestowing on the people; that in order to advance religious education, people should themselves educate their children in religion. The following are some of the gentlemen who were proposed for admission as members:—His High-ness the 3rd Prince of Nepal, Baboo Gooroodas Mittra and Baboo Nowlkishore Singh .- Delhi Gazette.

THE "SLEEPER" DIFFICULTY, caused by the great scarcity and dearness of wood, is to be overcome on the unfinished portion of the Punjab line from Lahore, two hundred and twenty miles to Mooltan, by the use of Greaves's patent iron sleepers. We have not heard how the experiment of iron sleepers on the East Indian Railway has succeeded. The whole of the line to Mooltan is likely to be open by the end of 1863.

THE CALCUTTA SAILORS' Home appears to be in a satisfactory condition. During the past year the committee have paid off part of the debt; 1,763 seamen and 85 officers took advantage of the Home during the year. Of these, the greater morning by the P.O. steamer for England, on scik. many poets, and that they used to be liberally number were shipped, and 43 obtained situations furlough for twelve months.

MAJOR-GENERAL A. A. T. CHNYNGHAM ASSUMED command of the Lahore Division of the army on the 31st May, on which occasion he issued the following division order:-" Mooltan, 31st May, 1862 .- By direction of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, I have the honour this day to take command of the Lahore Division of the Bengal army. I am proud to occupy the chief military position in a district so lately added by the victories of our armies to this empire, and whose inhabitants have proved in the late eventful scenes that they can as worthily become our comrades as formerly they were our stanchest foes. In our Commander in Chief we see one who, with determined energy either in peace or war, zealously labours for the good of the service. Profiting by such a bright example, let us each in our several positions steadily adhere to the same grand principles. Officers and soldiers, believe me it is my desire to become, not only your commander, but your comrade and your friend, persuaded that such a reciprocity of feelings is the best assurance of carrying out successfully our mutual duty to our Queen and country."

BANK OF BENGAL .- A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette declares that the profits of the Bank of Bengal for the half-year ending 30th June will be enormous. The gain on the purely banking operations for the past five months has been at the rate of eleven per cent. per annum free of income-tax. The total of the Bank's overplus might be reckoned as follows:-

Profits on the banking operations from Jan. to June Profits on sale to Government of 51 per cent, stock for sixty lakhs... ... 4,00,000

... 2,20,000 ... Total ...

Joint-stock banking is by far the most profitable enterprise of our times, both at home and abroad; the dividends, as a rule, are extreme.

UMRITSUR, June 25 .- Although there has been a good deal of rain to the north and east at Sealkote, Jullundur, Hooshearpoor, &c., and even some to the west, we have had none on this part of the Baree Doab. More's the pity, as the canal is not available about the town, and grain of all kinds is rising in price. It was mentioned some time ago that money was very scarce, and Bills on Bombay favourable accordingly for remitters. So high was the pressure that of the two lakhs of rupees' worth of Calcutta supply bills offered for sale on the 14th, only Rs. 68,000 was taken by the traders, and 101,000 in all. Matters are improving since then. The whole of the Peshawur supply bills, one lakh, have been sold here at a profit, and some realised no less than Rs. 99 10 as., and if the Government be, as I hear, in want of money, now is their opportunity. The prospects of trade are improving.

DESPERATE CRIMINALS .- Three men were in arrest for a daring highway robbery committed at Taj Gunge, Agra; two were splendid-looking men, a Havildar and private of the 38th N.I., who had got leave of absence, the third was a constable of the Central Jail, also an old soldier. These men, while in the magistrate's havalat, planned and nearly executed a scheme of escape. They took advantage of the time when prisoners, after being taken out in the evening for a particular purpose are brought back to the havalat, to make a rush and possess themselves of the muskets of the havalat guard. The exact particulars of the conflict which ensued are still being investigated; the police guard seem to have behaved well in it. The Assistant-magistrate was returning home from Cutcherry in the evening between 6 and 7, when a messenger ran after and informed him that there was fighting going on in the Cutcherry compound; he immediately went to the spot, found two constables lying wounded, and the police with tulwars drawn; one of the prisoners had a loaded musket with bayonet fixed, and was inside the chamber of arms, the entrance being such that only one

The Assistant-magistrate communicated WAVS. with Captain Fraser, the superintendent of police, and was proceeding to take off the roof of the arms shed, so as to take the prisoner in the rear, when the man rushed out, wounding the constable who opposed his passage, was met by Captain Fraser, who menaced him with a revolver, but the man persisted in his course, and while attempting to transfix with his bayonet the constable who pursued close upon him, was shot dead by Captain Fraser upon the Thandi Sarakh. Six wounded police officers are at this moment at the Thomason Hospital, of whom two are not expected to recover; but for the prompt and decisive action of Captain Fraser, a seventh constable must have fallen a victim, and a daring leader of ruffians let loose upon society.- Delhi

HORMUT KHAN, the murderer of Dr. and Mrs. Hunter, and the head and front of the mutiny in the Scalkote district, has been accounted for, but was killed in the attempt to capture him. The Cashmere Maharajah's Vakeel at Sealkote, Ku-bub-ol-deen, and Kadir Bux, a Lumberdar, had long been on the look out for the fellow, and succeeded at last in inducing him to come down from the interior to the jungle on this side of Jummoo, but further than to this spot no solicitations would persuade him to come; so on the 12th June the Vakil went up with a letter to Jowah Sahai from Mr. McNabb, the Deputy Commissioner, who gave him forty men, and instructions to take the murderer dead or alive. The plan Mr. McNabb had arranged was that the go between who had decoyed Hormut down, was to secure his arms before the rest showed themselves, but either the man's heart failed him, or for some other reason he failed to make his appearance. Hence, after waiting a day, the business had to be done without him. An attempt was them made to surprise Hormut Khan in a little hut in a thick jungle, but the instant he saw his enemies approaching he seized his sword and defended the door. They made three attempts to take him alive, but he drove them out each time. They then pulled down the side of the hut and went in at him in a body, which ended in his getting a cut over the loins which killed him; none of the attacking party were wounded.

THE "MUTLAH BANK,"-We live certainly in the days of "development of the resources," when it is proposed to establish a Bank in the Mutlah; but in the present instance, it is not a monetary bank, but an oyster-bank that is contemplated. In April last our enterprising fellow citizens, Messrs. Stalkart and Robinson, made application to the Sudder Board of Revenue for a grant of ten thousand acres of shoal water river-bed in the Mutlah, on which to create oysterbeds, for the purpose of supplying Calcutta with that delicious and wholesome fish fresh from its native element; and anticipating compliance with their application as a matter of course, they have taken measures for procuring and importing a stock of the best oysters for the purpose of forming the bed and commencing breeding ope-In the meantime the Board of Revenue replied that compliance with the application was out of its power and beyond its province; and forwarded Messrs. Stalkart and Robinson's letter to the Bengal Government, by which it has been sent on to the marine authorities for final decision. We are glad to hear that no doubt whatever need be entertained of the application being acceded to, and the desired river bed being granted; and we sincerely hope that as little doubt may exist of the ultimate success and profitable working of the very interesting enterprise in question. We understand that the investigations which have been made on the Mutlah riverbed at the spot indicated in Messrs. Stalkart and Robinson's application offered every prospect of the oysters living a jolly life-for oysters-and multiplying very rapidly; and if this should be the case, the success of the enterprise will place a constant and fresh supply of a living luxury at the command of the inhabitants of Calcutta. whither the fish can be brought, just out of bed, person could approach at a time, and that side- in less than an hour, by the Mutlah Railway.

PERMANENT HEAD QUARTERS -Amongst the economical recommendations of the Military Fi. nance Commission, is one to the effect that the head-quarters, establishments, and officers of the army should, for the future, be permanently stationed at the Presidency, never on any account to be moved up country; and that in the cold weather tours of the Commander in Chief, his Excellency should only be accompanied by a skeleton representative of the great multitude of officials and departmental subordinates who have hitherto gone to form the head quarters camp. The expense of these cold weather tours of inspection, with the enormous following which accompanies the Commander in-Chief, has been very heavy indeed; and the Military Finance Commission, not recognising either the necessity for the expenditure or any equivalent beneficial result accruing from it, has wisely recommended its curtailment. Except to a lazy Commander-in-Chief we (Englishman) really cannot see the use or the gratification of these unwieldy head-quarters' camps, and, in the case of an active and energetic head of the army, their uselessness was demonstrated last cold season, when Sir Hugh Rose thoroughly inspected all North-western India and the Punjab down to the Scinde frontier almost at a gallop, leaving his great camp crawling by regular marches over the country, catching it up whenever he pleased, and again quitting it at his pleasure, to carry on his inspection of distant military stations. This kind of commander-in-chief does not require a great costly, slow-moving camp; and we would not give it to the other kind should he succeed the present one, which, calculating from the past in these matters, is very likely to be the case. Fortunately, there is, we hope, a long day till that succession takes place; and we hope also that by that time huge head-quarters' camps will be out of date.

VACCINATION IN BENGAL.—In the Presidency there were 14,874 persons vaccinated, out of which there were 13,231 successful cases; in the Barrackpore division there were 41,259 persons vaccinated, 38,676 being successful. Dacca division there were 5,715, and in the Dinapore circle, 4,662; 3,918 in the former, and 3,471 in the latter, being successful. Altogether we have a grand total,—vaccinated 66,510, successful 59,296. These operations were effected by 71 vaccinators. In Midnapore alone there were 24,127 persons vaccinated, and the very large proportion, 23,898, were successful, leaving only 239 cases which did not succeed.

Insubordination .- On 1st of February last Captain W. F. Stewart, Commanding at Dehree, ordered out pickets in search of a stolen horse. When Kote Duffadar Sultan Khan, of the late Benares Horse, was running to execute the order, Jewun Khan, Ressaedar, said, with reference to Captain Stewart—"What is your hurry? What are you killing yourself for? Is he a tiger that you run away from him through fear? Is he the Commander-in-Chief?" The Ressaidar has been sentenced by a native court martial to be suspended from rank and pay and allowances for a period of six months, a sentence much too light.

A NATIVE JUDGE. - The Government of Bengal has for the first time appointed a native to the office of Judge. Baboo Taruck Nath Sen, lately principal Sudder Ameen in the 21 Pergunnaha, is appointed additional Judge of that district under Regulation 8 of 1833.

THE CHUTTEESGURH DIVISION .- The Government of India has created a fourth commissionership in the central provinces called the Chutteesgurh division, the head quarters of which will be at Raeporer. Captain C. Elliot, c.B., now in England, is appointed commissioner, and Colonel Balmain to officiate. The natural outlet of this rich but wild country is by the Mahanuddy and the new roads through Sumbulpore.

LIEUTENANT G. O. GREGORY, of the late 58th N. I., has been appointed by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to the adjutancy of the 3rd Ghoorka regiment, on account of his good services and military proficiency, and the high character he has borne with all the officers under whom he has served.

AHEM!-The list of names published in the Government Gazette, of persons entitled to the "Indian Medal" is headed by that of Ahem, but whether squire, ghost, soldier, or simply a touch of satire, we are not informed. Medals issued in 1862 for deeds done, ahem, in 1857. Well may the spirit of the past say Ahem. What, by the way, is the meaning of the expression "India medal?" Do we talk of France medals, or Russia medals ?-Hurkaru.

THE BENGAL PRINTING COMPANY has declared a dividend on the operations of the past half-year at the rate of 14 per cent. per annum. At the meeting of shareholders, a complaint was made that the Annual Directory does not pay sufficiently well, but it is to be continued. The introduction of machinery has been a success. The value of work done during the half-year was Rs. 75,016.

GRANT'S COOKING-STOVE.—Stoves constructed upon the plan of Grant's cooking-stove, so much talked of at home, are not found to answer in India; whether this be owing to difference of fuel-wood instead of coal-or ignorance of the real principles upon which Grant's stove is framed, it is impossible to say. All that the military authorities know beyond all doubt is, that the loss gained by the use of Grant's stove amounts to five or six maunds of extra wood per diem, and this in the cooking for 400 men only.

PAY-MASTERS OF REGIMENTS who, in addition to the usual bond for £2,000, may be unable to give two sureties for the fulfilment of the conditions contained in the said bond, are permitted to offer that surety in one of two Assurance Offices recognized by the Horse Guards. The Assurance Office accepts the risk, and gives Government the necessary security; in other words, the officer insures his honesty for a small premium, just as he might his life.

Baboo Ramconnov Sein, interpreter of the Small Cause Court, has been appointed to succeed Mr. W. Lawler as interpreter to the Supreme Court on a monthly salary of Rs. 400.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—It is with extreme regret we (Outh Gazette) have to announce that Brevet-major Henry Hugh Gough, v.c., of H.M.'s 19th Hussars, lies now in a most precarious state from the effects of a wound in the left breast and shoulder, caused by a bullet fired from a holster pistol by him, at himself, in a fit of temporary insanity on Monday evening last, a little after nine o'clock. It would be premature to say more on the sad occurrence at present.

CENTRAL INDIA.-The King of Bokhara has sent an envoy to the Ameer of Cabool, with the hint that if the Dost will not conclude an alliance with his master, his master will conclude one with another power. A battle has been fought between the Heratees and the troops of Dost Mahomud, of Cabool, in which the latter, it is believed, have been worsted and several chiefs of note killed.

THE COMMISSARIAT COMMISSION .- His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has recommended that the commissariat commission now, and for some time past, pursuing its investigations at the Presidency shall receive a "roving commission," and traverse the Bengal territories throughout, making its inquiries, and sifting thoroughly the working of the department all over the country. Colonel Huish, the president of the commissariat commission, has forwarded his excellency's recommendation to the Government without remark or comment. The inquiries of this commission, we (Englishman) may observe, have certainly elicited the fact that great savings could, under certain circumstances, be effected on the present large outlay of the department; but, in many cases, serious difficulties arise in the way of accomplishing the arrangements which would make these savings-we mean in the way of climate, and other impediments-impracticable.

LIEUTENANT F. W. GRAHAM .- His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has appointed Lieutenant F. W. Graham, of the late 11th Regiment, N. I., to officiate as second in command of the 8th Bengal Cavalry. This officer has served in Burmah, and, we believe, in the defence of Lucknow, and passed an excellent cavalry drill examination with the 8th Hussars at Meerut.

THE NIZAM AND THE QUEEN'S REPRESENTATIVE AT HYDERABAD.—SIR,—In your article of the 5th June you state: "This fact, doubtless, has induced the present ruler, even as it did his father, to heap upon the English name and English officers a series of petty insults which cannot longer be tolerated." They will be tolerated and put up with while Colonel Davidson remains a resident at the Court of Hyderabad. None but those who were present at the durbar on the occasion of presenting the Nizam with the Star of India know how low, how mean, and how disgusting it was to the heart of every true Englishman to see our beloved Queen's representative so thoroughly lost to all respect for the country which gave him birth. The Resident's retinue on that occasion consisted of some forty British officers, the brigadiers of Hyderabad and Bolarum, with their staff, heads of departments, commandants of regiments, &c., &c., in full uniform, a sight worth seeing, for amongst them were men whose breasts were glistening with tokens of honour, glory, and their country's reward. All met at the Residency previous to going to the durbar, their faces beaming with joy; but when they learned they would have to take off their boots in the presence of the Nizam there was a low murmur, but the wish was acceded to, for all were anxious to see the stall-fed ox, as they termed the Nizam of the Deccan. There were many jokes cracked en route to the durbar about the taking off of their boots, but the most humiliating scene of all is now to be enacted. Arrived at the entrance, Colonel Davidson takes off his boots, bends his shoulders, and when within a few paces of the Nizam goes down all fours and crawls up to him to his left side in the most cringing abject manner conceivable, and there squats awaiting the Nizam's pleasure to speak. There was but one feeling throughout that assembly of British officers, one I am unable to describe but easily imagined by you. Were this even all, we might think no more of this disgusting and degrading subject, but as a public benefactor I hope you will impress upon Government the necessity of calling upon those officers who attended that durbar to state how and in what manner Colonel Davidson allowed the Nizam to receive the Exalted Star of India. Did he not snatch it from a tray with his left hand, and quick as thought shove it under his seat, and this in presence of some forty English gentlemen? The whole residency wants a new broom, for it does not answer, nor can it work well for Colonel Davidson to have his son-in-law (Major Thornhill) as assistant resident, and Capt. Frazer, his nephew, as extra assistant. All should be removed, or something done to break this clique.—Correspondent of the Friend of India.

COCHIN.—The Cochin Courier publishes the following interesting State document recently transmitted to the Rajah of Cochin through the Madras Government: -L. S .- To Rajah Ravi Vurmah, Cochin .- "Her Majesty being desirous that the governments of the several princes and chiefs of India who now govern their own territories should be perpetuated, and that the representation and dignity of their houses should be continued, I hereby, in fulfilment of this desire, convey to you the assurance that on failure of natural heirs, the adoption by yourself and future rulers of your State of a successor, according to Hindoo law and to the custom of your race, will be recognised and confirmed. Be assured that nothing shall disturb the engagement thus made to you, so long as your house is loyal to the Crown and faithful to the conditions of the treaties, grants, or engagements which record its obligations to the British Government.-Can-NING." At two o'clock on the afternoon of the 21st June the ceremony of presentation, we learn, was inaugurated by the firing of artillery, and bands of music playing the national anthem. After his Highness had taken his seat, the Assistant Resident, Captain White, presented in a gold salver the great charter of adoption, transmitted by the Viceroy and Governor-general through the Madras Government; and his Highness the Rajah having handed it to the Dewan, it was read by the latter to the assembly.

MAULMAIN .- The Rangoon Times notices the growing prosperity of Maulmain. During the past official year the imports were valued at Rs. 82,36,000, and the exports at Rs. 78,12,000, or a total trade of £1,604,900. The exports consisted of 98,000 tons of timber, valued at Rs. 60,62,000, grain to the amount of Rs. 7,80,000, tobacco, lead, and cutch. The arrivals of vessels numbered 460, and the departures 455. The customs duty was Rs. 1,22,400 or Rs. 22,000 more than last year. Since 1848 Moulmein has ceased to be a free port. In 1827 it was a fishing hamlet.

RANGOON, June 14.—The Rangoon papers are congratulating their readers and the inhabitants of Pegu generally on the satisfactory state of trade. Paddy is selling at a place called Puzoondoong, at the rate of sixty-three runees the hundred baskets, and cargo rice at ninety-eight to one hundred rupees. The Rangoon Times even suggests that at that price the grain could be profit ably sent to the European markets. The civil war in America is supposed to favour this view, and the trade with China in this staple is said to be already very large. The general trade of Pegu for the year just closed is said in the official report to have amounted to three hundred and seventy-one lacs and fifty-four thousand rupees, that is over three millions seven hundred thousand pounds sterling. There is nothing of further interest to record of Rangoon except the usual complaint against the municipality, and a rumour that a large ship bound from Calcutta with beer on board for the soldiers has been burned at sea. which is not, however, by any means the first instance of the elements having, "robbed a poor man of his beer."

Coonoon, June 30 .- The Governor arrived here on Friday (27th) and stays for some time. The Ootacamund monsoon has set in with gales, but no damage. An individual calling himself Captain Russell, of the Bombay army, has been taken before the magistrate for giving orders on the Agra Bank to shopkeepers and hotelkeepers, which were returned dishonoured. He was en gaged to a young lady with money, but fortunately was taken up the day before the marriage was to have taken place. The soi-disant captain has been sent to Madras for trial in the Supreme Court

KATTYWAR - Major Bary has been dismissed by the Government from the office of Political Agent in Kattywar. Major Anderson, of the to officiate as Political Agent for the present. It is stated that a Commission of Inquiry into the state of the province of Kattywar will be sent up by Government after the raius. A man who was knows to be able to give some evidence of most unbecoming conduct on the part of the Political Agent in Kattywar, has been beaten to death at Joonaghur.

P. AND O. COMPANY'S NEW WORKS .- The Times of India describes the works of the P. and O. Company at Mazagon, Bombay, which are being extended to meet the increasing traffic. They consist of graving docks, a steam factory, engineer's workshops, steam saw-mills, store-houses and offices, in all of which sixty European mechanics, and upwards of 11,000 natives, are em-Chinese joiners are employed for the inner fittings-up of the steamers. Attached to the dockyard is a sheep farm, on which a stock of some 300 or 400 English, Abyssinian, and Australian sheep is always kept up and fattened for the consumption of passengers. For the new docks, the Company have purchased from Government twelve acres of ground, the greater part of which was covered with sea-water at high water spring tides. Eight acres have, at great expense, been reclaimed from the sea, and surrounded by a wall of solid masonry 3,000 feet in length. The works consist of a magnificent graving dock, 378 feet in length, sixty-five feet wide at the gates, and seventy-five feet inside; with a depth of water at spring tides of twenty feet at the gate cill. This dock will be capable of taking in vessels of the size of the Himalaya, Persia, and Scotia; and when completed will be the largest graving dock in the eastern seas. An ice house, capable of storing sixty tons of ice, is nearly finished, and the machinery for the manufacture of the ice is now on its way out from England. All the ships' boats used in the equipment of the Company's steam fleet in the Indian seas are built in their dockvard at Mazagon.

THE COTTON TRAFFIC.--Mr. Dalzell furnishes to the commissioner the following statement of cotton conveyed from Kotree to Kurrachee by the Sind Railway, during the months of January, February, March, April and May, 1862 :-

Of these quantities the steamer Stanley brought down 601 bales or 2,527 maunds 35 seers in March, and 1,780 bales or 6,626 maunds 11 seers in May; the O. I. Co.'s steamer Indus, 555 bales or 2,060 maunds 38 seers in May; leaving 15,494 bales weighing 46,169 maunds 5 seers, to have been brought by native craft during the five months above-mentioned.

THE NEW HIGH COURT at Bombay, is to con sist of a Chief Justice and five Puisne Judges. and the following gentlemen have been appointed first Judges of the Court :- Sir Matthew Sausse, Chief Justice; Sir Joseph Arnould, G. H. Couch, Barrister-at-law; Hon. W. E. Frere, H. Hebbert, Esq., C.S., A. K. Forbes, Esq., C.S., Puisne Judges. It is supposed that the Hon.W. E. Frere will resign his seat, and it will then devolve on the Government of Bombay to nominate a civil servant to officiate as the junior puisne judge. The nomination to the permanent appointment rests with the Secretary of State for India. It is presumed that the new High Court will be inaugurated immediately, and from the date of its first sitting the present Supreme and Sudder Courts will cease to exist.

others. The price charged is two-fifths lower than that paid for the American commodity.

BOMBAY GAS WORKS .- A local paper states that the plans of the Bombay Gas Works are now with the Collector of Bombay. The company Gaekwar Contingent of Horse, has been directed has been fairly started in England, the capital subscribed, and the deposit required by Government has been paid up and sent to the Bombay Government. The Gas Company are prepared to enter into terms to supply the Municipality and the public at large with gas, and so soon as the local office is announced, we expect that the wealthy classes will avail themselves of the new light.

THE GREAT EASTERN .- The Bombay Saturday Review states "that the consignment of the Great Eastern (S.S.) was offered some time since to a European house here; they, however, declined it on the ground of the large amount required to disburse the ship. We have since learned that Parsee firm have undertaken to do this upon certain conditions, which, if agreed to by the Directors of the Great Ship Company, render it very probable she will load cotton hence for Liverpool, in January or February next. In any case, Bombay is no longer to remain without steam communication via the Cape of Good Hope, a company having been formed at Hull; and several steamers are in course of construction to carry out that object."

MERCANTILE FIRMS. - The Bombay Gazette. noticing the local changes from 1829 to 1862, says that the number of European mercantile firms has increased from 4 to 45, and that since 1841 the number of native firms has increased as follows:-From 2 to 18 Jewish firms, 3 to 95 Mahomedan firms, 55 to 206 Hindoo firms, 26 to 00 Parsee firms. The number of insurance societies and agencies for insurance societies was about 27 in 1841, and about 42 in 1861; showing an increase of 15 within twenty years. The numbers of European, East Indian, and Portuguese inhabitants shown in the almanack as resident in Bombay and Salsettee, were 459 in 1841, and 2,343 in 1861-an increase of 1,884 in twenty years. These numbers are exclusive of residents at out-stations, employed on railways, in the electric telegraph department, in public offices, as engineers, tradesmen, &c.; nor do the numbers include members of the covenanted services of Government. But the almanacks do not show the full number of Christian residents.

THE WEATHER .- During the last eight days (July 12) little or no rain has fallen in Bombay and the neighbourhood, and the weather has in consequence been sultry and disagreeable. From Salsette and the mainland below the Ghauts, we hear complaints of the want of rain, which interferes with the transplantation of the rice crops; but as yet there has been no injury done to this staple produce of the Konkun. The failure of the early rains, which appeared to set in so favourably, is now complained of almost everywhere except in Khandesh; and the cultivators in the Poona and Sholapore collectorates are beginning to entertain fears of a bad season, the want of rain having impeded sowing operations all over the country. Preparations have, we hear, been made in the latter, and in the Eastern talookas of the former district, to plant a greater breadth of land with cotton than has been usual in former years. The prospects of the season will now depend upon a steady and continuous fall of rain in the next fortnight; and it is hoped that this will take place at the change of the moon after the full, or between this time and the 20th July. The state of the public health is good in the Presidency; the mortuary returns are improving weekly.

DEATH OF BOMANJEE HORMUSJEE WADIA, Esq. - We regret to announce the death of Bomanjee Hormusjee Wadia, Esq., which occurred recently at his residence at Parell. The deceased gentleman was universally respected in the Parsee Bombay Ice Factory.—Through the enterprise of E. Heycock, Esq., Bombay will soon render and ever one of the foremost promoters amount the natives of every project for the good of the supply of ice. A factory has been established of his countrymen. He was for several and a machine is now in full work, years a Commissioner in the late Court of Research of the late Board of Education, and Vice-president of the Bombay Association; and he was two years ago Sheriff of Bombay. In respect for his memory, the Parsees employed in her Majesty's Dockyard were granted leave for the day, and all the schools, shops, and places of business belonging to Parsees were closed.

THE SHOE QUESTION .- The Bombay Gazette is informed that the friends of Mr. Manockjee Cowasjee Entee, at Surat, are about to secure the services of some able man in England with a view to represent the nature of the shoe question to the British Parliament, if Sir B. Frere's Government do not settle the matter to their satis-

Income and Stamp Taxes .- The Income-tax revenue of the Presidency of Bombay during the year 1861-62, including Sind, Nagpore, Nimar, Indore, and Baroda, was £423,512 16s.; whilst that realised from the Stamp-tax for the same period was £294,568 12s.

PHILIP RIVINGTON, a young man of the best connections in London, has been sentenced by the Supreme Court to two years' imprisonment with hard labour in the House of Correction.

THE Monsoon.-The total fall of rain up to the 11th July, amounted as follows:-Byculla, 30 inches: Fort, 32 inches; and Colaba, 29

Mr. J. S. White, barrister-at-law, has been confirmed in the appointment of Clerk of the Crown, in the room of Mr. Pollock resigned. He took the necessary oaths of office on the 4th July, before the Chief Justice in court.

NATIVE SUPERSTITION.—The Dnyan Prakash contains a strong illustration of native superstition not unlike Edgar Poe's famous tale of the Egyptian mummy which the Yankee doctors restored to temporary life by electricity. Last October a Gujeerati Banian died. While the preparations were being made for his cremation, up he rose, and in the midst of confusion asked "what are you doing to me here?" The assembled people said, "these preparations we are making consequent upon your death." Upon this the revived person said-"Oh, brothers, I was taken by four men to a place at a distance, where there was a king surrounded by his court. He said to them, 'this creature still wants twenty-nine minutes to complete his existence. Take him back to his house, and bring me instead an old person of the Kunbi caste, living a few miles off from Oorun.' Upon this I was set at liberty. All this took place before my very The assembled relatives were greatly eyes." astonished to hear this, and, to disabuse themselves of any doubts about it, they sent two messengers to the village referred to. It was found that an old woman of Kunbi caste had actually died there a few minutes before, and the Banian died twenty-nine minutes after. The fulfilment of the two statements of the Banian naturally caused no slight sensation in the village.

Imports (Bombay, July 12).—The monsoon, which set in so favourably, has not made any good progress during the past fortnight; we hear complaints of the want of rain in several districts. The import market has been very brisk during the fortnight. Speculators evince considerable excitement in purchasing Piece Goods; and a further important advance has been established in the prices of the principal kinds of fabrics; since the receipt of improved accounts from the home markets the market closes firm, with an upward tendency. The demand for Twist has revived, and prices show an advance. Metals show symptoms of recovery from the late depression, but with the exception of Iron and Steel, which continue in active request at higher rates, there is little or nothing doing in other kinds.

In other kinds.

EXPORTS (Bombay, July 13).—The export market shows an active business, especially for Cotton, which has obtained a considerable advance in price, owing to encouraging advices from the Liverpool market.

Seeds are quiet, and held for higher rates.

Grants of Gratuities.

Financial Dept., June 6.—No. 8,999.—Resolution.— In the resolution, No. 6,983, passed in this department on the 31st July, 1860, the local governments were empowered to grant gratuities to public servants in proportion to the length of their service, on the scale specified in the margin; but it was not distinctly stated, what gratuity should be awarded distinctly stated what gratuity should be awarded in cases where the party concerned had served for exactly ten, fifteen, or twenty years.

As more than once doubts have occurred on this point, H.E. the Governor-gen, in Council is pleased to direct the substitution of the following scale for the scale of gratuities prescribed in the orders of the 31st July, 1860:—

Three months' pay for an officer who has served five years, or any longer period less than ten years.

Four months' pay for an officer who has served ten years, or any longer period less than fifteen

Five months' pay for an officer who has served fifteen years, or any longer period less than twenty years.

Six months' pay for an officer who has served twenty years or more.

Ordered, that copies of the foregoing resolution be forwarded, for information and guidance, to the departments, governments, and officers noted below:—

Foreign, Home, Military, Public Works, and Marine Departments, with copies of the resolution of 31st
July, 1860.
Governments of Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, and the Straits' Settlements.

Civil paymaster in Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab.

Case of Major T. C. Blagrave.

No. 2,518a.—Notification.—The following extract from the proceedings of the Government of India. in the financial department, No. 3,308, dated May 9 1862, is published :-

No. 3,368.

Extracts from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the financial department, dated May 9, 1862.

Read office memorandum from the public works department, No. 443, of the 4th February last, en-quiring whether the extra annuity, as well as the ordinary pension of Major T. C. Blagrave, a retired military officer, who has been appointed to the survey of the projected Sutlej Canal, will merge in his civil

Resolution.—It was decided by the late Court of Directors on the 6th May, 1857, that when a retired military officer is employed in the Civil Department, he should draw the salary of his appointment minus the amount of his pension.

When the recent arrangements for the re-organisation of the Native army were in progress, it was considered expedient to accelerate the retirement of a portion of the field officers by offering them annuities in addition to the pensions to which they are entitled under the rules. Major T. C. Blagrave, one of the officers who retired on these terms, has been appointed to the survey of the projected Sutlej Canal, and the Public Works Department inquires whether his extra annuity, as well as his ordinary pension, will merge in the salary he will draw.

H.E. the Governor gen. in Council observes, that the extra annuity referred to was a bonus to induce officers to retire, given in the shape of annuity, in order to avoid the inconvenience of a heavy immediate charge on this account, and that as it was granted for a specific object, when once that object is attained an exhibitory test on the part of the granted for a specific object, when once that object is attained, no subsequent act on the part of the receiver can entitle the Govt. to revoke it.

Considering, therefore, that this extra annuity cannot be regarded in the light either of "pension" or "half pay," which are to a great extent compensation for loss of employment, and cease when employment is found, H.E. the Gov-gen, in Council is planted to authorise Moi. Blackers to draw it in pleased to authorise Maj. Blagrave to draw it in addition to his salary.

THE NEW HIGH COURT.

With reference to the Act 24 and 25 Vic., Cap. 104, Section 1, the following Letters Patent, under the Royal Sign Manual, establishing a High Court of Judicature for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, are hereby published :

LETTERS PATENT constituting the High Court of Judicature for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, bearing date the fourteenth day of May, in the Twenty-fifth Year of the reign of Victoria, in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and sixty-two.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these Presents shall come, greeting: Whereas by an Act of Parliament passed in the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Years of our Reign, intituled "An Act for establishing High Courts of Judicature in India," it was, amongst other things, enacted that it should be lawful for Her Majesty, by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to erect and establish a High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, and that such High Court should consist of a Chief Justice and as many Judges, not exceeding fifteen, as Her Majesty might, from time to time, think fit to appoint, who should be selected from among persons qualified as in the said Act is declared: Provided always, that the persons who, at the time of the establishment of such High Court, were Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and permanent Judges of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut or Sudder Adawlut of the same Presidency, should be and become Judges of such High Court without further appointment for that purpose, and the Chief Justice of such Supreme Court should become the Chief Justice of such High Court, and that upon the establishment of such High Court as aforesaid, the Supreme Court and the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adamlut and Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, in the said Presidency, should be abolished:

And that the High Court of Judicature so to be established should have and exercise all such civil, criminal, admiralty and vice-admiralty, testamentary, intestate, and matrimonial jurisdiction, original and appellate, and all such powers and authority for, and relation to, the administration of justice in the said Presidency, as Her Majesty might, by such Letters Patent as aforesaid, grant and direct, subject, however, to such directions and limitations, as to the exercise of original Civil and Criminal jurisdiction beyond the limits of the Presidency town, as might be prescribed thereby; and save as by such Letters Patent might be otherwise directed, and subject and without prejudice to the legislative powers in relation to the matters aforesaid of the Governor-general of India in Council, in High Court so to be established should have and exercise all jurisdiction, and every power and authority whatsoever, in any manner vested in any of the Courts in the same Presidency, abolished under the said Act at the time of the abo lition of such last-mentioned Courts.

1. Know ye that We, upon full consideration of the premises, and of Our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, have thought fit to erect and establish, and by these presents We do, accordingly, for Us, Our heirs and successors, erect and establish, at Fort William in Bengal, for the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William aforesaid, a High Court of Judicature, which shall be called the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and we do hereby constitute the said Court to be a Court of Record.

- 2. And we do hereby appoint and ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall, until further or other provision shall be made by Us or Our heirs and successors in that behalf, in accordance with the recited Act. consist of a Chief Justice and thirteen Judges, the first Chief Justice being Sir Barnes Peacock, Knight, and Sire Justice being Sir Barnes Peacock, Knight, and seven of the Judges being Sir Charles Robert Mitchel Jackson, Knight, Sir Mordaunt Lawson Wells, Knight, Henry Thomas Raikes, Esq., Charles Binny Trevor, Esq., George Loch, Esq., Henry Vincent Bayley, Esq., and Charles Steer, Esq., according to the appointments made by the said Act; and We do hereby constitute and appoint John Paxton Norman, Esq., Walter Morgan, Esq., Francis Baring Kemp, Esq., Walter Scott Seton-Karr, Esq., and Louis Stuart Jackson, Esq., being respectively qualified, as in the said Act is declared, to be Judges of the said High Court.
- 3. And We do hereby ordain that the Chief Justice and every Judge of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal previously to entering upon the execution of the duties of his office, shall make and subscribe the following declaration before such authority or person as the Governor-general in Council may commission to

"I, A B, appointed Chief Justice [or a Judge] of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, do solemnly declare that I will faithfully perform the duties of my office to the best of my

- ability, knowledge, and judgment."

 4. And We do hereby grant, ordain, and appoint that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and use, as occasion may require, a seal bearing a device and impression of Our Royal arms, within an exergue or label surrounding the same, with this inscription, "The Seal of the High Court at Fort William in Bengal." And We do further grant, ordain, and appoint that the said seal shall be delivered to and kept in the custody of the Chief Justice, and in case of vacancy of the office of Chief Justice, or during any absence of the Chief Justice, the same shall be delivered over and kept in the custody of the person appointed to act as Chief Justice under the provisions of Section 7 of the recited Act; and We do further grant, ordain, and appoint that, whensoever it shall happen that the office of Chief Justice or of the Judge to whom the custody of the said seal be committed shall be vacant, the said High Court shall be and is hereby authorised and empowered to demand, seize, and take the said seal from any person or persons whomsoever, by what ways and means soever the same may have come to his, her, or their possession.
- 5. And We do hereby further grant, ordain, and appoint that all writs, summons, precepts, rules, orders, and other mandatory process to be used, issued, or awarded by the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, shall run and be in the name and style of Us, or of Our heirs and successors, and shall be sealed with the seal of the said High Court.
- 6. And We do hereby authorise and empower the Chief Justice of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from time to time, as occasion may require, and subject to any rules and restrictions which may be prescribed by the Governor-general, to appoint so many and such clerks and other ministerial officers as shall be found necessary for the administration of justice, and the due execution of all the powers and authorities granted and committed to the said High Court by these our Letters Patent. And We do hereby ordain that every such appointment shall be forthwith submitted to the approval of the Governor-general in Council, and shall be either confirmed or disallowed by the Governor-general in Council. And it is Our further will and pleasure, and We do hereby, for Us, Our heirs and successors, give, grant, direct, and appoint that all and every the officers and clerks to be appointed as aforesaid shall have and receive respectively such reasonable salaries as the Chief Justice shall, from time to time, appoint for each office and place respectively, and as the Governorgeneral in Council shall approve of: Provided always, and it is Our will and pleasure, that all and the officers and clerks to be appointed as afore-diction of the said Court so long as they shall hold their respective offices; but this proviso shall not interfere with or prejudice the right of any officer or clerk to avail himself of leave of absence under any rules prescribed by the Governor-general in Council, and to absent himself from the said limits during the term of such leave, in accordance with the said Rules.

Admission of Advocates, Vakeels, and ATTORNEYS

- 7. And We do hereby authorise and empower the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, to approve, admit, and enrol such and so many Advocates as to the said High Court shall seem meet, who shall be and are hereby autho-rised to appear and plead for the suitors of the said High Court, subject to the rules and directions of such Court.
- 8. And we do further authorise and empower the said High Court of Judicature at Fort liam, in Bengal, to approve, admit, and enrol such and so many Vakeels as to the High Court shall seem meet, who shall be and are hereby authorised to appear, plead, and act for the suitors of the said High Court, subject to the rules and directions of such Court.
- 9. And We do further authorise and empower the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal to approve, admit, and enrol such and so many Attornies-at-law as to the said High Court shall seem meet, who shall be and are hereby authorized to appear and act for the suitors of the said High Court, subject to the rules and directions of such Court.
- 10. And We do hereby ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have power to make rules for the qualification and admission of proper persons to be Advocates. Vakeels, and Attornies-at-law of the said High Court, and shall be empowered to remove, on reasonable cause, the said Advocates, Vakeels, or Attornies-at-law, and no person whatsoever but such Advocates or Vakeels shall be allowed to plead for, or on behalf of, any suitor in the said High Court and no person or persons whatever but such Vakeels or Attornies-at-law shall be allowed to act for any suitor in the said High Court, except that any suitor shall be allowed to appear, plead, or act on his own behalf, or on behalf of a co-suitor.

CIVIL JURISDICTION OF THE HIGH COURT

- 11. And We do hereby ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise ordinary original Civil jurisdiction within such local limits as may, from time to time, be declared and prescribed by any law or regulation made by the Governor-general in Council, and until some local limits shall be declared and prescribed, within the limits declared and prescribed by the proclamation fixing the limits of Calcutta issued by the Governor-general in Council on the Tenth day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four; and the ordinary original Civil jurisdiction of the said High Court shall not extend beyond the limits for the time being declared and prescribed as the local limits of such jurisdiction.
- 12. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in the exercise of its ordinary original Civil jurisdiction, shall be empowered to receive, try, and determine suits of every description, if, in the case of suits for land or other himovable property, such land or property shall be situated, or in all other cases if the cause of action shall have arisen, or the defendant at the time of the commencement of the suit shall dwell, or carry on business, or personally work for gain within the local limits of the ordinary original jurisdiction of the said High Court, except that it shall not have such original jurisdiction in cases falling within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court at Calcutta, in which the debt or damage, or value of the property sued for, does not exceed one hundred rupees.
- 13. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have power to remove, and to try and determine, as a Court of extrordinary original jurisdiction, any suit being or falling within the jurisdiction of any Court, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, subject to its superintendence, when the said High Court shall think proper to do so, either on the agree ment of the parties to that effect, or for purposes of justice, the reasons for so doing being recorded on the proceedings of the said High Court.

14. And We do further ordain that an appeal shall lie to the said High Court of Judicature at cases of original Civil jurisdiction, of one or more Judges of the said High Court, or of any Division Court, pursuant to Section 13 of the said recited Act: Provided always that no such appeal shall lie to the High Court as aforesaid from any such decision made by a majority of the full number of Judges of the said High Court, but that the right of appeal in such case shall be to us, Our heirs or successors, in Our or their Privy Council, in manner hereinafter provided.

15. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall be a Court of appeal from the Civil Courts of the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, and from all other Courts, whether within or without the said Bengal Division, from which there is now an appeal to the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, and shall exercise appellate jurisdiction in such cases as are subject to appeal to the said Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, by virtue of any laws or regulations now in force, or shall become subject to appeal to the said High Court by virtue of such laws or regulations relating to Civil procedure as shall be hereafter made by the Governor-general in Council.

16. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have the like power and authority with respect to the persons and estates of infants, idiots, and lunatics, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, as that which is now vested in the said Supreme Court at Calcutta.

17. And We do further ordain that the Court for relief of Insolvent debtors at Calcutta shall be held before one of the Judges of the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, and the said High Court, and any such Judge thereof, shall have and exercise, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, such powers and authorities with respect to original and appellate jurisdiction and otherwise as are constituted by the laws relating to Insolvent debtors in

LAW TO BE ADMINISTERED BY THE HIGH COURT OF THE BENGAL DIVISION OF THE PRESI-DENCY OF FORT WILLIAM IN CIVIL CASES. 18. We do further ordain that, with respect to the law or equity to be applied to each case coming before the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in the exercise of its ordinary original Civil jurisdiction, such law or equity shall (until otherwise provided) be the law or equity and rule of good conscience which would have been applied by the said Supreme Court at Calcutta to such case if these Letters Patent had not been issued. 19. And We do further ordain that, with respect to the law of equity and rule of good conscience to be applied to each case coming before the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, in the exercise of its extraordinary original Civil jurisdiction, such law or equity and rule of good conscience shall (until otherwise provided) be the law or equity and rule of good conscience which would have been applied to such case by any local Court having jurisdiction therein.

20. And We do further ordain that, with respect to the law or equity and rule of good conscience to be applied by the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, to each case coming before it in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction, such law or equity and rule of good conscience shall be the law or equity and rule of good conscience which the Court in which the proceedings in such case were originally instituted, ought to have applied to such case.

CRIMINAL JURISDICTION.

21. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, shall have ordinary original criminal jurisdiction within the local limits of its ordinary original civil jurisdiction, and in respect of all persons beyond such limits, over whom the said Supreme Court at Calcutta now has criminal jurisdiction.

22. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, in the exercise of its ordinary original criminal jurisdiction, shall be empowered to try all persons brought before it in due course of law.

23. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, shall have extraordinary original criminal jurisdiction over all persons residing in places within the jurisdiction of any Court now subject to the superintendence of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, and shall have ausaid shall be resident within the limits of the juris- Fort William in Bengal from the judgment, in all thority to try at its discretion any such persons brought before it on charges preferred by the way of circuit, and the Gov.-gen in Council shall, Advocate-General, or by any Magistrate or other by his commission for that purpose, authorise and Officer specially empowered by the Government in that behalf.

24. And We do further ordain that there shall be no appeal to the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal from any sentence or order passed in any Criminal trial before the Courts of original Criminal jurisdiction which may be constituted by one or more Judges of the High Court. But it shall be at the discretion of any such Court to reserve any point or points of law for the opinion of the said High Court.

25. And We do further ordain that, on such point or points of law being so reserved as aforesaid, or on its being certified by the said Advocate-general, that in his judgment there is an error in the decision of a point or points of law decided by the Court of original Criminal jurisdiction, or that a point or points of law which has or have been decided by the said Court should be further considered, the said High Court shall have full power and authority to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such point or points of law, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment and sentence as to the said High Court shall seem right.

26. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall be a Court of appeal from the Criminal Courts of the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, and from all other Courts, whether within or without the said Bengal Division, from which there is now an appeal to the Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, and shall exercise appellate jurisdiction in such cases as are subject to appeal to the said Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, by virtue of any laws or regulations now in force, or become subject to appeal to the said High Court by virtue of such laws or regulations relating to Criminal pro-cedure as shall be hereafter made by the Governorgeneral in Council.

27. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall a Court of reference and revision from the Criminal Court, subject to its appellate jurisdiction, and shall have power to hear and determine all such cases referred to it by the Session Judges, or by any other Officers authorized to refer cases to the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut, and to revise all such cases tried by any Officer or Court possessing Criminal jurisdiction, as are now subject to reference to or revision by the said Court of Sudder Nizamut Adawlut. whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, or shall become subject to such reference to, or revision by, the said High Court by virtue of such laws or regulations relating to Criminal procedure as shall be hereafter made by the Governor-general in Council.

28. And We do further ordain that the said High Court shall have power to direct the transfer of any Criminal case or appeal from any Court to any other Court of equal or superior jurisdiction, and also to direct the preliminary investigation or trial of any Criminal case by any Officer or Court otherwise competent to investigate or try it, though such case belongs, in ordinary course, to the jurisdiction of some other Officer or Court.

CRIMINAL LAW.

29. And We do further ordain that all persons brought for trial before the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal, either in the exercise of its original jurisdiction, or in the exercise of its jurisdiction as a Court of appeal, reference, or revision, charged with any offence for which provision is made by Act No. XLV. of 1860, called the "Indian Penal Code," shall be liable to punishment ander the said Act, and not otherwise, subject nevertheless to such alterations, modifications, and addi-'tions in and to such Code as may have been or may he prescribed by any acts or regulations made by the Governor-general in Council.

EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION ELSEWHERE THAN AT THE ORDINARY PLACE OF SITTING OF THE HIGH COURT.

30. And We do further ordain that whenever it shall appear to the Gov.-gen. in Council convenient that the jurisdiction and power by these Our Letters Patent, or by the recited Act, vested in the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal should be exercised in any place within the jurisdiction of any Court now subject to the superintend-ence of the Sudder Dowamy Adawlut or Sudder Nizamut Adawlut at Calcutta, whether within or without the Bengal Division of the Presidency of Fort William, other than the usual place of sitting of the said High Court, or at several such places by direct any of the Judges of such Court to hold sittings in such place or places accordingly, at or within such times as by such commission may be authorised or directed, the Judge or Judges acting under such commission in the places and manner therein directed, shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, power, and authority as would be had and exercised by a Judge or Judges, of the said High Court, as the case may be in its ordinary place of sitting.

Admiralty and Vice-Admiralty Jurisdiction 31. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise all such civil and maritime jurisdiction as may now be exercised by the said Supreme Court as a Court of Admiralty, or by any Judges of the said Court as Commissary to the Vice-Admiralty Court, and also such jurisdiction for the trial and adjudication of prize causes and other maritime questions arising in India as is now vested in any Commissioner or Commissioners appointed by Us or Our predecessors, under the powers given by an Act passed in the Session of Parliament held in the Thirty-ninth and Fortieth Years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, "for stablishing further regulations for the government of the British territories in India, and the better administration of justice within the same.

32. And We do further ordain that the said High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal shall have and exercise all such Criminal jurisdiction as may now be exercised by the said Supreme Court as a Court of Admiralty, or by such Commissary to the Vice-Admiralty Court, or by any such Commissioner or Commissioners as aforesaid.

By Order of the Governor-general in Council, E. C. Bayley, Secy. to the Govt. of India,

LETTER OF SIR J. P. GRANT TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

Dated April 23, 1862.

I have purposely deferred recording any paper on the letter from the Secretary to the Government of India, cated the 11th of March, No. 1,475 until the time of my resigning my office. The matter being one which is of importance only to myself, and one the further discussion of which during my tenure of office, would not have advanced the business of the Government, I very much regret that the defence which I thought it necessary to make in the matter of the published orders of the Government of India, dated the 8th of January last, has been pronounced disrespectful in tone. fully submit to this judgment, and I have only to apologise without reserve for anything in the wording of the defence which has appeared to the Government of India to be wanting in respect. I had no intention to be disrespectful towards an authority for whom I always have entertained feelings of the greatest deference and submission, and I can sincerely assure his Excellency in Council that whatever has been objected to in the tone of my defence would have had no place in it, but for feelings which are quite the contrary of disrespectful. It has ever been my anxious care to carry out in a true and honest spirit all the orders of the Go-vernment of India; and if in any case those orders, being final, have happened in any point not absolutely to be in accord with my own views, that has always been with me a reason for more than usual care in carrying them out in their full spirit. I had never on any occasion taken more pains to execute precisely the orders of my superiors than on the occasion in question; and I had never on any occa-sion believed orders which it was my duty to carry out less open to possible misconstruction or doubt than the orders for the appointment of a special commission, dated the 11th of March.

I had believed myself to have been in confidential communication with the head of the Government of India before the reception of the deputation which resulted in those orders, and both before and after their issue, whilst the Special Commissioners were had reported. The party interested in the inquiry them as I myself understood them as a severe cenhad taken precisely the same view of the orders in sure. It is not necessary for me, in proof of this question as I and the Special Commissioners, and fact, to do more than to request a reference to the the public in general, had taken. This will be proved by a reference to the letter of Mr. Fergusson, the secretary of the association, dated the 6th of September, 1861. That letter was written to the Government of India in the form of a review of the results of the special commission, after the Commissioners had made their final reports. It does not contain any suggestion or the slightest kind of a suggestion that the orders in question had not been practically carried out in precise accordance with the expressed intention of the Government of India. Accepting fully the result of the commission as complete and sufficient, Mr. Fergusson thereupon asks for ulterior measures of a novel character.

The Special Commissioners having made their final reports on the general rent question, and on the several points to which their attention was more particularly directed in the letter from Government of the 11th March, His Excellency in Council is now in a position to arrive at a decision as to future ther the time has not arrived for recourse to the proceedings of a sharper and more summary character than the ordinary law will admit, and which Government has already declared must be the inevitable consequence of any combination among the ryots to withhold payment of rents.

In a subsequent letter of the 6th of December, 1861, to the Government of India, Mr. Fergusson, referring to the above-mentioned letter on which no orders had been issued, again submits the expediency of the appointment of Special Commissioners on a new footing. The same request was also made, in the usual and regular course, to the Government of Bengal; but in neither application was the slightest suggestion raised that the first special commission had in any way miscarried or that the Commissioners had in any way misunderstood or insufficiently executed the orders of the Government of India.

Under these circumstances, about five months after the close of the commission, and the submission to the Government of India of the publication of the last of the Commissioners' reports, I found that the commission was pronounced to have been miscarried and to have been closed, when, as it was alleged, the orders for the appointment of the com-mission clearly showed that which ought to have been the primary and immediate care of the Commissioners and of myself, and our principal duty had been neglected. I could not but understand these orders as being equivalent to a severe censure, for had I believed that I had failed to act up to what had been plainly shown to be the primary object of the orders of the Government of India in the important business in hand, I could never have forgiven myself. And when I saw the unusual course taken of publishing the censure by sending a copy of it to the Association simultaneously with the sending of the original to myself, I cannot properly express the disappointment and distress which I felt.

I submit deferentially that being placed in this position no course was open to me but to take an issue upon the question in such a decisive manner as to stand or fall by the verdict. But I repeat a sincere expression of regret that I did not successfully avoid in doing so, a tone which has been prononneed to be so disrespectful.

The Government of India, in answer to the representation made by me, accordingly have recorded that no serious miscarriage in the sense of neglect or blameable omission was imputed either to the Lieut.-governor or the Special Commissioners in their letter of the 8th July last. I have to express the great satisfaction and relief which this statement has afforded to me. Again, they have recorded that if their order of 8th of January "can be understood as attributing any blame either to his Honour or to the Special Commissioners for having acted on such construction" (meaning the construction put upon their orders by me) "the Governorgeneral in Council would greatly regret that such an inference should be drawn, and begs that such an impression may be entirely dismissed." that I am not wrong in understanding these state ments as exonerating myself and the Special Commissioners from blame in the matter which forms the subject of the orders in question. And I cannot suffi-ciently thank the Government of India for this exculpation. But I have respectfully to represent to His Excellency the Governor-general in Council that the orders in question were not merely communicated to me in the usual official course. They were published, and in fact they were before the public as soon as they were received by me. The public understood newspapers of the day. This understanding of the intention of the Government of India in publishing newspapers of the day. the orders in question was not confined to Indian Newspapers. The English Newspapers have understood those orders in the same sense. I have seen the following description of those orders in an English Newspaper of the largest circulation, and one which, not being in its character political, may be safely taken as the exponent of the ordinary understanding of the intention of the Government of India by the publication I referred to, viz.—"The Governor-general has published a Minute severely censuring the policy of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal in the Indigo districts."

This being the sense in which the orders published by the Government of India have been understood by the public, whilst from their Secretary's present letter it is apparent that not only had the Government of India no intention by that publication of censuring my policy in the Indigo districts, but had even no intention of imputing to me serious miscarriage in the sense of neglect or blameable impression, I have to bring to the notice of his Excellency in Council that the publication of the orders which have been misunderstood in a sense so fatal to myself, and to a policy which has hitherto been approved by the Government of India and the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, is the last proceeding of the Government of India in the matter which has been published. With this remark I leave my case in the hands of his Excellency in Council.

The New War in China.

WAR OFFICE, AUG. 4.

The following despatches have been received by the Secretary of State for War from Brigadier-General Staveley, c.B., commanding her Majesty's troops in China :-

No. 32. Head-Quarters, Shangnai, may on. Sir,—On the 18th inst. I did myself the honour to report to you briefly the capture of Na-jow, a rebel stronghold on the south side of the Woosung River, and twenty miles distant from Shanghai. I have now to detail the particulars of the operation.

On the day after the capture of Tsing-poo, the force proceeded in small country boats to Na jow, where it arrived on the 16th inst. This town was found to be strongly entrenched and stockaded, about two miles in circumference, with an outwork commanding it, and a creek which ran into the town. I decided upon shelling the defenders out of the outwork and establishing a breaching battery on its reverse. Two French naval 30-pounders, six Armstrong guns, and four mortars, were accordingly got into position, and opened fire at five o'clock on the evening of the 17th inst., and in an hour, the outwork having been rendered untenable, a storming party, composed of 250 men of the 31st regiment, and the same number of French chasseurs and marines, advancing to take possession, dashed through it under a brisk fire of matchlocks and jingalls, and, finding a pathway through the stakes and planks over the ditches right up to the wall, took advantage thereof, and got into the place by climbing through the embrasures or over the stockades. It was during this advance that the French naval commander-in-chief, Admiral Protet, whose death I have already reported, was killed. As it was of importance that this place should be held until the Chinese authorities should place a garrison in it, 200 British and 120 French troops were left there.

On the 18th inst. the force marched for Cho-lin, six miles from Na-jow, the guns, provisions, and baggage being conveyed in country boats, it being found impracticable to make arrangements for their transport by land, owing to the numerous canals and very narrow bridges which intersected the line of march. Cho-lin is a walled town, three miles in circumference, surrounded by a wet ditch, and situated about one mile from the sea.

On the morning of the 19th inst. the garrison was observed to be engaged in destroying some houses, distant about eighty yards from the walls, and close to a small entrenchment which was placed between these houses and the walls. As these buildings were of value to me for cover, I directed that they should be at once taken possession of, which was done by a company of the 67th Regiment, under cover of the fire of two British naval 32-pounders from the front, and an enfilading fire of two Armstrong guns from the right. A creek running directly into the ditch under the walls afforded means of passing boats along, and so establishing a bridge for the passage of the assaulting parties.

During the night of the 19th two British naval 32-pounders, two French naval 30-pounders, six Armstrong guns, and five field pieces, were placed in position; the Armstrongs on the right to entilade the wall, and the other guns in front of our position for breaching purposes.

At daylight, on the 20th, the guns opened fire, and at six A.M., two breaches having been made, a bridge was established, and the troops entered the place without opposition. On the evening of this day, and as we were preparing to advance on the next rebel town, news reached me from Shanghai that the Imperialist troops in the neighbourhood of Kading had advanced beyond that place, and been completely cut up or taken prisoners by the rebels; that Kading itself, garrisoned temporarily by the Allies, was invested; that the town of Woo-sung was threatened, and that the Chinese authorities had declared themselves unable to meet their engagements to place garrisons in the towns we might cap-Under these circumstances I decided upon returning to Shanghai, to reopen communication with Kading, where provisions and ammunition were running short. On the 24th instant I left Shanghai and arrived at Nai-zain, six miles from Kading, the same day. All the guns, ammunition, and provisions, owing to the impossibility of carrying them across narrow bridges over innumerable canals, being conveyed in boats in charge of the Royal Navy. The day succeeding our arrival at Nai-zain, and while the boats were, in consequence of the lowness of the tide, unable to reach us, the rebels, who appeared in very great force, attacked us in the town in front and flanks continually during the day, and eventually in the evening made a movement round to our rear towards the boats. In all these attacks they were driven back with loss, the casualties on our side being but fewone sepoy, 22nd Punjab native infantry, killed; and four sepoys of the same corps wounded. The night following these attacks, one side of a street in Nai-zain, in which were housed a few gunners, R.A., and the Chinese Gun Lascar Company, fell down, killing nineteen, and injuring seventy-five of the Chinese, and three men, Royal Artillery; this accident is attributed to the coolies having made use of some of the timber of the houses for firewood. It now appearing that the difficulties of transport were very great, that the boats (our sole means for conveyance) were constantly grounding in the shallow creeks, while the enemy continued to hover round us, rendering a lengthened line of boats most dangerous and difficult to protect, and taking into con-sideration the harassing nature of the service for the troops at the present season, together with the fact that the Chinese authorities had declared themselves unable to garrison the captured town as they had engaged to do, and seeing that the occupation of Kading alone did not prevent the rebels from rava-ging the country between it and Shanghai, I resolved upon withdrawing the garrison from that place, and accordingly sent a column of 500 men and four mountain guns, under Lieut.-Colonel Stanley, 5th Bombay Native Infantry, to Kading, with instructions to bring the garrison out and re-turn to Nai-zain; this operation was performed without a casualty, the rebels retreating before the column as it advanced.

On the 28th inst. the force returned to Shanghai. The accompanying copy of a letter I have addressed to her Majesty's Minister at Pekin will show you that the Chinese authorities are scarcely able to make any effort whatever for their own defence, and that with the force at my command I feel, under present circumstances, unable to do more than protect the city of Shanghai itself.

The rebels are now in force, investing Tsing-poo and Soong-Kong, and have marauding parties ten miles from Shanghai, driving in the country people and burning their houses in every direction. I apprehend, therefore, that the crops will remain ungathered, and that famine must be the conse-

As Shanghai, if attacked, will, I consider, require all the available troops in this part of the country for its defence, I shall retain the whole of the troops leaving Tien-Tsin, until I receive your instructions.—I have, &c.,

C. STEVELEY, Brig.-General.
Commanding H.B.M. Troops in China.
The Right Hon. the Sec. of State for War, War Office, Pall-mall, S.W.

A despatch, of which the following is a copy, was received at the Admiralty, on the 28th ult., from Vice-Admiral Sir James Hope, K.C.B., the Commander-in-Chief of her Majesty's ships and vessels lordships' notice the names of those officers whose on the East Indian and China station:— position has rendered them most prominent during OPERATIONS AGAINST THE REBELS IN THE VICINITY OF SHANGHAI.

Impérieuse, Shanghai, June 3.
My Lord,—You will be pleased to acquaint the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that on the 18th ult. the force under General Staveley and Commodore Kersanson moved up the creek from Najaor to Tsiolin, which town was taken on the morning of the 20th.

Information being received on that day of the irruption of a large number of rebels in the vicinity of Woosung, the force returned to Shanghai on the 22nd, leaving a garrison in Najaor, with the view of eventually securing the Pootung peninsula when the rebels shall have been entirely cleared out.

On the 24th, the force moved out to Nanseang; the 25th was occupied in closing up the boats, which had been considerably retarded by want of water in the creek, during which day some desultory skirmishing took place with the rebels, who in considerable number surrounded the village on all sides except the south.

On the following morning the great mass of rebels had moved off to the westward, and the detachment noted in the margin (two mountain guns, 500 troops, Colonel Stanley; two 12-pounder field pieces, 40 marines, Captain Willes) moved on to Kadang, for the purpose of withdrawing the garrison, and returned the same evening, having effected their object without difficulty or loss.

On the 27th the force returned to Shanghai, the last boat arriving on the following morning.

Between the 9th and the 18th a force of Imperialist troops, consisting of from 7,000 to 10,000 men (got together by breaking up their camps at Tsipoo and Yakitun, and withdrawing 2,000 men from the garrison of Paoshan) was moved out to the vicinity of Taitseam, a town in the occupation of the rebels, where they suffered a severe defeat, and were entirely dispersed, with the exception of a few hundred who got back to Paoshan. This movement, ordered by the late Viceroy Sich in opposition to the remonstrances of the present Governor, by whom he has since been replaced, and without communication with the allied commanders, with the design of effecting the capture of Taitnam, has resulted in completely uncovering the country to the westward of Shanghai, to which the camps at Tsipoo and Yakitun had afforded a certain amount of protection.

On the 18th the rebels first appeared in the vicinity of Woosung and Paoshan, from whence they retired on the 21st, having failed in making any impression on the former town, the capture of which may have been in their contemplation.

On the same day the defeat of the Imperialists was heard of at Kading, and on the 21st the rebels were first seen in the neighbourhood of that town, occupying the village of Nauseang, by which its communication with Shanghai was cut off.

Between that day and the 25th, when the greater part of their force moved off to the westward, the town was more or less surrounded by large numbers of rebels, estimated at not less than 25,000, and was attacked on several occasions, but without effect. From Kading the rebels moved by Wangdon to Sekim, where they have established a camp of 20,000 men, with two smaller posts of 5,000 and 3,000 men, in advance towards Sung Keeong, at Tsakapan and Tomkio respectively. They have also surrounded Tsing-pu in large numbers, which town is held by a garrison of 1,000 of Colonel Ward's troops, and they have established camps at Quangfu-lung, and higher up on the water communication to Tsing-pu, containing about 2,000 men each. I have stationed the Pearl at Minhong, to maintain the communication with Najaor, and the Centaur at Sung-Keong for the like purpose.

On the morning of the 30th, probably on information that Colonel Ward with a portion of the garison was absent for the purpose of throwing supplies into Tsing-pu, an attack was made on Sung-Keong by a body of 1,500 rebels, who were driven off with a loss of 100 by a party of the Centaur's people, under the orders of Lieutenant P. W. Stephens, one man being slightly wounded. This party from the Centaur will rejoin their ship on the arrival of 300 of Colonel Ward's troops, which will return from Ningpo.

Having been present with the force, except at the capture of Kading, I avail myself of this occasion to express the sense I entertain of the general good conduct of the officers and men composing the naval brigade which has been employed with the troops, a return of which is annexed, and to bring under their tered at Poons.

lordships' notice the names of those officers whose position has rendered them most prominent during a service which, if unattended by any severe fighting, has involved a good deal of hard work, the material and supplies of the army being conveyed entirely by water, the chief labour of which naturally devolved on the brigade.

The organisation and management of the flotilla was conducted by Captain Borlase, of the Pearl, in command of the brigade, assisted by Captain Willes, of my flag-ship, and Commanders Gibson, of the Impérieuse, and Strode, of the Vulcan, under whose immediate superintendence the guns were got into position, the bridges moved up for crossing the ditches (operations generally performed at night, and in close proximity to the enemy), and the other duties devolving on the brigade were performed with a zeal and ability to which, in conjunction with that of the other officers, I ascribe their uniform success.

Such preliminary investigations of the creeks as became requisite in consequence of their complexity were undertaken by Captain Willes, assisted by Mr. Dathan, master of the Impérieuse, during the course of which he had an affair with the rebels in the vicinity of Tsiolin, described in the letter I annex.

—I have, &c., (Signed) J. Hope,
Vice-Admiral and Commander-in-Chief.
The Right Hon. Lord Clarence Paget, C.B., M.P., Secretary to the Admiralty.

ORIENTAL CANAL AND IRRIGATION COMPANY (LIMITED).—This new company proposes to commence its operations by constructing a navigable canal to connect Kurrachee with the river Indus at Jerruck. The rapid growth of the great emporium of Scinde is the best proof of the fore-sight exhibited by Sir Charles Napier in selecting it as the Alexandria of "Young Egypt." The only drawback to its many natural advantages is its separation from the Indus by a strip of land about four miles in width; and the river itself, after leaving Jerruck, spreads out into a network of tidal creeks, to the manifest obstruction of the navigation. A canal, therefore, right across from Jerruck to Kurrachee will save a long and circuitous course, attended with some risk and much delay, and will prove of immense benefit not only to that seaport but also to the trade and commerce of the Punjab. Minor canals for irriga-tion will be derived from the main channel for the fertilisation of the Delta, while a supply of fresh water will be brought into the town Itself for the use of the inhabitants and the garrison.

THE REJECTED DOCTORS.—The Madras Government have done their best to remedy the injustice of the home authorities in the case of Dr. Thompson, an East Indian, and Dr. P. Andey, a native, who were not allowed to enter H.M. medical service after having been induced to go to England to compete for the Indian service. Both have been appointed sub-assistant surgeons without examination, and will do duty in the vaccination department.

ADEN.—During the ensuing cold season H.M.'s 4th Regiment of Foot, now stationed at Aden, will be relieved by H.M.'s 95th, at present quartered at Poons.

GOVERNMENT TEA PLANTATIONS.

Dr. Jameson's annual report on the Government Tea Plantations in the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, for 1861, is, on the whole, satisfactory, though the outturn of tea was somewhat less than in the preceding year. This decrease, however, was entirely due to temporary and accidental causes, and had nothing in it of a disheartening character. It was, in fact, owing to the long-continued drought which exercised such a disastrous influence on all kinds of agricultural produce. That such a comparatively delicate plant as tea should participate in the general doom is by no means surprising, and the wonder would be if it had escaped uninjured. The total quantity of tea prepared in Deyrah Dhoon, Guhrwal, and Kumaon was 41,519 pounds 15 ounces, of which only 3,156 pounds were green teas. But any falling off in the leaf was fully compensated, from a commercial point of view, by the immense yield of seedthere being quite 130 tons, including 1,416 maunds from the Kangra Plantation. financial value of the seed crop is estimated at Rs. 44,000, though, actually, the largest portion of it is distributed gratuitously to private planters, European and native, throughout the Kohistan of Kumaon, Guhrwal, Deyrah Dhoon, and the Punjab. The vast number of 2,400,000 seedlings have also been freely given away, and yet this bounteous liberality failed to meet all the applications that were made. The market value of the tea crop, at Rs. 1-8 per pound, would be about Rs. 62,280, and if to this were added a fair price for seed and seedlings, a very large profit would have resulted from the year's operations. As it was, the working expenses were far more than covered, a balance of Rs. 14,000 remaining on the credit side of the account. It is not, of course, with any view to immediate pecuniary advantage that the Government maintains these plantations, but simply as nurseries to encourage and supplement private enterprise. After a while, no doubt, these different factories will be offered for sale, and the field abandoned to companies and individuals. In the meantime, even skilled workmen are supplied to planters, while the Chinese tea-makers and experienced European overseers are enticed away at the end of their respective agreements by the promise of higher pay. The Deyrah Dhoon appears to offer especial advantages to settlers, accompanied, however, by two disagreeable drawbacks: in the eastern portion the drainage is very defective, and in the western there is a scarcity of water both for drinking purposes and irrigation. Fortunately, neither of these objections is insuperable, and in the latter case all that is vented so long as the character of orientals savages upon any seaport town in which Eng-necessary is to form anicuts at the base of the Himalayas, so as to dam up the drainage waters that at present run to waste. Engineering difficulties there are none of a serious nature, while excellent materials for the construction of reservoirs and water-walls are abundant and on the spot. Let the water supply be properly regulated, and in a few years "the Deyrah Dhoon, the most attractive spot in the North-West Provinces to the European settler, will become a great tea garden."

THE OPIUM CULTIVATION.

THE growing influence of public opinion on the Government of India has been strikingly exemplified in the recent investigation into the oppression said to prevail in the cultivation of the poppy. A Mr. Kerr, acting as special correspondent of the Hurkaru, drew attention to this subject in a series of letters full of interesting details obtained from the ryots in the district of Shahabad. The charges brought against the opium department by this itinerant gentleman were threefold. The ryots, he said, were forced to grow the poppy, although an unremunerative crop, and were subjected to much extortion from the subordinate officials, besides being treated with unnecessary severity in the refund of excess advances. The third allegation was of a personal character, being directed, in the first place, against a native named Kalee Sahee; and secondly, against Mr. Field, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent at Shahabad. The former was represented as an intriguing, unscrupulous knave dismissed from various employments by reason of his evil propensities, while the latter was described as being improperly influenced by this cunning allowance for "Oriental tinting." scoundrel, whom he was accustomed to consult on all matters relating to the department. These statements were made in so circumstantial a manner, and with such an air of conviction, that the Government immediately instructed Mr. G. F. Cockburn, Officiating Commissioner of Patna, an officer of considerable ability and experience, to inquire into their general truthfulness previous to appointing a special Commission. No time was lost by Mr. Cockburn in acting upon his instructions, and it soon became apparent that the Hurkaru's correspondent had weakly accepted as facts the idle chattering of the villagers, without taking the most ordinary steps to test its credibility. It is abundantly shown that the ryots are not only willing but eager to grow the poppy, now that the price has been raised, and a larger breadth of land has been voluntarily appropriated to that cultivation without the slightest pressure from the Government officials. With regard to refunding excess advances, it is sufficient to answer that out of 25,622 cultivators only 36 had been called upon for any refund whatever, and the aggregate demand in their case amounted to barely 198 rupees. It is admitted that one man was obliged to sell a bullock to make up his quota, but the charge of stealthily selling children to obtain means of satisfying the Government claims was clearly an invention of the enemy. Unhappily, however, it cannot be denied that extortion is practised by the native Amlah, and even by the middleman chosen by the ryots themselves to guard their interests and act as their representative; but this cannot be pre-continues unchanged. Some little amendment in this respect might possibly result from giving a higher salary to native subordinates, who can scarcely subsist on their legitimate earnings. But under no circumstances would the ryots fail to tender a good-will offering to those in authority over them, nor will these be easily prevented from accepting what they have been taught from their infancy to regard as their due. The third charge had only this much of truth in it—Mr. Field appears on one or two occasions to have asked Kalee Sahee to recommend a good man for a vacant post, and for this he has been gently rebuked. But nothing could be more groundless than the imputations so recklessly hurled against Kalee Sahee himself. An old and faithful servant of the Government, he has enjoyed the respect and confidence of every European magistrate under whom he has served, and is rather worthy of promotion than of dismissal from public employ. Mr. Kerr's own feelings we are little disposed to envy, though he may very likely be a weak and credulous rather than a wilfully mischievous individual. His rash assertions, however, have brought discredit upon the press, and will almost justify the Government in paying little heed to future strictures that may be really well founded. The watchman has given a false alarm, and is alone to be blamed if next time a deaf ear is turned to his cries for help. There must surely be something in the climate that is favourable to monstrous growths of every kind, and which tends to magnify molehills into The Government may well be mountains. pardoned if henceforth it makes tolerable

INTERVENTION IN CHINA.

Much trouble, expense, and loss of life would be avoided if the Taepings could be persuaded to adopt the Prime Minister's humorous suggestion, and confine themselves separately to the area of territory each is stated to represent. There are 400,000 Taepings, he said, and they occupy 400,000 square miles, but if each would keep to his own square mile they would do no great harm. Unfortunately they are not very likely to act upon this hint, and, therefore, are we drifting into hostilities without being at war. The rebels are to be taught by terrible examples to respect the modern version of the Civis Romanus sum! and to refrain from disturbing the slumbers of the "outside barbarians." Relying on the reasonable protection of their own Government, British merchants have embarked their capital in the products of China, and left their own country for a distant and inhospitable land. Were the Taepings a belligerent Power, the case would be very different. Trade would then cease in obedience to international law, but the life and property of foreign subjects would remain sacred and inviolate. It is true, this odious rebellion has now lingered for at least ten years, and that the leaders of the movement have assumed the titles and insignia of royalty. Still, it is impossible to regard the Taepings otherwise than as a horde of fierce marauders, enemies of the human race, and only to be treated as robbers and pirates. There can be no doubt that the English forces on the China station may be properly employed in repelling an attack of these lish warehouses and traders are established. And it may be necessary on strategic grounds to prohibit their access within a certain distance of the walls. Beyond this, however, there can be no justification for British intervention, and such expeditions as those recently conducted against Woo-sung and Kah-ding are scarcely of a less buccaneering character than the proceedings of the Taepings themselves. The unfortunate inhabitants of these cities must have been sorely puzzled to choose between friend and foe, when they found that the former fired their houses with shells, and appropriated their property as lawful prize. Between the two their lot is certainly not to be envied, for if they escape the gingalls of the one it is only to fall by the Armstrongs of the other. Nor has the British tax-payer much reason to congratulate himself on the prospect now opening before him. It is obvious that the Chinese Government is, and will be for some time to come, quite incompetent to crush the rebellion, or even to provide for the security of the great marts of the foreign trade. A considerable squadron and a small army must, therefore, be maintained at a heavy outlay to do the work of the Chinese rulers. No indemnity can be claimed for such services, and if the demand were made there are no means of complying with it, except in the form of a cession of territory. The fleet of gunboats that Captain Sherard Osborn has undertaken to organise may, perhaps, relieve the British forces of some portion of an ungrateful duty, and if the Chinese Government has decided upon having recourse to European aid, it is, of course, expedient that no other Power should be furnished with an opportunity and a pretext for permanent intervention. It is of almost equal importance that the new fleet should be placed under the command of a man of high honour and unimpeachable reputation. The experiment has already been tried, and the result was full of warning for the future. Not many years ago a number of Portuguese lorchas were employed by the Ningpo authorities to convoy the fishing boats and wood junks on the river Yung, and for a short time they appear to have faithfully discharged that duty. But no sooner did they become masters of the coast than they began to abuse their power and committed the most frightful atrocities. "It is alleged," says Mr. Wingrove Cooke, "that they made descents upon villages, carried off the women, murdered the men, and burnt the habitations. They became infinitely greater scourges than the pirates they were paid to repel." Their tyranny at length grew so insupportable that the people of Ningpo were reduced to accept the minor of two evils, and actually made terms with the notorious Cantonese pirate A'Pak, who was made a mandarin of the third class, and taken into Government employ. The Portuguese lorchas were soon afterwards attacked and destroyed, and their crews killed or made prisoners. This thoroughly Chinese episode shows the necessity of exercising the utmost judgment in the selection of a commander, and it is, therefore, a matter of no slight moment that the choice of the Government should have alighted upon such a distinguished officer as Captain Osborn. The gunboats themselves of money subscribed for that purpose by the duce the papers moved for.

citizens of Canton, but it may be presumed that they will be formally delivered over to the Imperial Government before Captain Osborn enters upon his highly responsible duties. A question, too, arises worthy of some consideration, as to what will become of this fleet on the withdrawal of the British officers. There is evidently some danger of its falling into bad hands, and following the example of the Portuguese lorchas. It would probably have been a wiser proceeding to have given to the Chinese Government the services of half-a-dozen gunboats in return for the abolition of internal transit duties on teas, silks, and European goods, or for some equally useful concession. It may not yet be too late to make some such arrangement, and so do away with whatever is objectionable and anomalous in British officers training their future enemics, and undertaking duties more befitting mediæval adventurers than Christian gentlemen in the service of the most highly civilised and professedly conscientious nation in the world.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS .- July 28. DELHI AND LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.

Lord Berners asked what was the cause of the delay in the payment of the Delhi and Lucknow prize monev ?

The Duke of ARGYLL said a statement on the subject had been made a few days ago in another place, showing that measures were being taken for the payment of the money from the 1st of September next, and he believed that it was further stated that so long ago as the 1st of January of the present year the distribution had been commenced in India. However, he would make further inquiries; but he confessed he did not understand why so great a delay had taken place.

CHINA.

Lord GREY, in moving for copies of any correspondence explaining the arrangements that have been made for permitting officers in the naval or military service of her Majesty to accept employment under the Government of China, expressed his opinion that the policy adopted on this subject was so novel, and so hezardous in its possible results, that it was desirable Parliament, before its separation, should know what engagements her Majesty's Government had thereby incurred. The step taken was a departure from that neutrality we had hitherto observed between the Chinese Government and the rebels, which had been violated by our defence of the recently opened ports. At some length he reviewed the correspondence which had taken place on the subject, and dwelt on the desire manifested by the Taepings to maintain friendly relations with Europeans, until suddenly the Allies took on themselves the defence of Ningpo, and drove the rebels from that place. Why had this policy, fraught with great danger, been adopted ?-a policy which had bound us in offensive and defensive relations with a Government incapable of protecting either its subjects or itself.

The Duke of Somerset explained that a compact having been made between the Admiral and the Taepings, by which it was agreed that the rebels were not to come within thirty four miles of Shanghai, the Taepings had broken the agreement. To protect the large amount of British property in that town the Chinese Government had asked British officers to organise a fleet of gunboats to suppress the pirates, and these officers had received the sanction of the Admiralty to comply with the request. Up to the present time we had kept a police of small vessels there and the time had now come when we must either leave China and the recently opened ports, or afford the assistance which the Chinese Governare being purchased at New York with a sum ment required. There was no objection to pro-

Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE supported the course adopted by the Government.

Lord Russell said that, although the policy of the Government seemed to violate the neutrality we had so far maintained, the circumstances were exceptional. The rapid increase of our trade in China rendered it necessary to defend the vast interests we had there at stake. Ningpo had in consequence been retaken, as it was found that the Taepings would not refrain from injuring property and molesting trade. When the rebels approached Shanghai the French and English Ambassadors were convinced that steps must be taken to defend the port, or all trade would be destroyed. Every account of the Taepings yet received agreed in this, that they were powerful to destroy but unable to create a Government. Under these circumstances, and by the advice of Mr. Bruce, it had been determined not to aid the Chinese Government in suppressing the Taepings, but to defend the treaty ports, and thereby to allow the Chinese Government to concentrate its efforts against the rebels. Our object in so acting was not to provoke war, but to insure peace, for the development of trade depended on the suppression of the rebellion.

Lord GREY condemned the policy of the Government as impolitic, unjust, and certain to embroil us with a large portion of the Chinese nation.

The motion was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—July 28. THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel GILPIN asked the Secretary of State for India whether he still adhered to his determination of not enlarging his retirement list of officers of long service, but still of less than twenty years' service, who are now receiving Indian pay, but for whom no employment can be found; whether it was intended to post any officers to newly-raised. regiments; and, whether there was any chance of the Dhar prize money being shortly distributed?

Mr. T. G. BARING, in the absence of the Secretary of State, stated that his right hon friend had at present no intention of increasing the number of retirements. The officers of the newly-raised; regiments would be posted shortly. A list of the officers was expected by every mail from Calcutta, the matter resting at present with the Commander in Chief in India. In the case of the Dhar prize money the principle of distribution had been decided upon, and no further delay would take place in the preparation of the Queen's. warrant.

Sir H. WILLOUGHBY made some observations upon the position of the votes of credit for the China war, suggesting that a statement of the actual cost of the war and of what are its outstanding debts should be laid before the House.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE urged a vigorous prosecution of hostilities against the Taeping rebels.

Lord R. CECIL protested against such policy, and hoped the Government would pause before they adopted it.

Mr. S. FITZGERALD asked what information the Government had received respecting late events in China, remarking that, in his opinion, their policy was an extremely dangerous one, and that we were on the eve of a third China war. He wished to know what were the views of the Government upon the subject?.

Colonel Sykes gave a very unfavourable picture of the position of affairs in China in relation to British interests, estimating the Taeping forces at 400,000 armed men.

Lord PALMERSTON, in reply to Mr. Fitzgerald, said the Government had not, to his knowledge, received any information upon the points he had referred to. We were not making war in China, but merely defending British commercial interests at the treaty ports. The real truth was that the Taepings were nothing but destroyers, and there might be as many as 400,000 spread over the country.

HOUSE OF LORDS .- July 29. PIRACY IN THE INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO. Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE drew the attention of the House to recent acts of piracy in the Indian Archipelago, and asked her Majesty's Government what steps had been taken for their suppression?

The Duke of Somerser said it was very difficult to put down piracy in those seas, as the pirates, by using craft of very light draught, prevented ships of war from following them into shallow water. Her Majesty's Government were making arrangements with Holland and Spain to organise a naval force sufficient to put an end to piracy in the Indian Archipelago.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—July 29. THE ALLIES AT SHANGHAL.

Colonel Sykes asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs what foundation there was for the statements in the China journals, received yesterday, that the Allies at Shanghai had been obliged to relinquish all the cities and positions they had captured from the Taepings and retire upon Shanghai; that 400,000 rebels had suddenly appeared, and, in exasperation for the allied attacks upon them, were desolating the neighbourhood of Shanghai; and whether a requisition had been made to the Indian Government for a reinforcement of troops?

Mr. Layard begged to state in answer to the question of his hon, friend that no intelligence had been received by the Government which at all corroborated the statements in his question. The Allies had not been obliged to relinquish all the cities and positions they had held and retire upon Shanghai. The general in command had thought it right for other purposes to withdraw his troops; as to the appearance of 400,000 rebels, he believed they existed only in the imagination of the officer who had communicated with his gallant friend, and, as to any requisition to the Indian Government for a reinforcement of troops, he believed it had no foundation whatever.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—August 1. irrigation works in india.

Lord Shaffesbury presented a petition from the Cotton Supply Association, and moved for returns respecting the Godavery. The petition was in favour of opening up the cotton districts of India, and the Madras Irrigation Company was ready to invest capital to effect this purpose. They proposed, after obtaining a return of 12 per cent. on their outlay, to secure the surplus profits to the Government without any Government guarantee. The association prayed that private enterprise in India might be allowed free scope.

The Duke of ARGYLL said the Government had rejected all schemes for purchasing or guaranteeing capital invested, on the ground that they would interfere with private enterprise. The Madras Irrigation Company had been first encouraged by Lord Stanley, and Sir C. Wood was anxious to follow the course thus begun, but refused to hold out a guarantee for a capital of more than a million. He assented to the motion.

Lord LYVEDEN denounced the want of enterprise of the cotton manufacturers in more prosperous times, and wished to know whether the principle of private enterprise in India was yet acknowledged.

Lord FORTESCUE and Lord CLANRICARDE having made a few remarks, Lord SHAPTESBURY briefly replied.

The motion was then agreed to.

Drafts on India.—The monthly supply of £300,000 bills on India, drawn by the India Council, was offered on the 6th for public tender in the usual manner at the Bank of England. The minimum prices declared were similar to those of last month—namely, 1s. 114d, per rupee for bills on Calcutta, and 1s. 114d, per rupee on Bombay and Madras. The applications within the limits amounted to £950,000. All tenders above the minimum will be accepted in full, those on Calcutta at the minimum will receive about 1s per cent., those on Bombay about 5 per cent., and those on Madras 50 per cent.

APPOINTMENTS—CEYLON.—I. K. Jolley and G. Wall, Esqs., are appointed Members of the Legislative Council of the Island of Ceylon.

COURT OF CHANCERY, August 5. [Before the Lords Justices.] OOD-DEEN V. OAKLEY.

The object of this suit, which was instituted by the agent sent to this country by the King of Oude to procure from her Majesty's Government the restoration of his kingdom, was to cancel, on the ground of fraud, five bills of exchange, one for £6,500, and the other four for £1,000 each, which the plaintiff had signed in blank as a security for the repayment of a loan of £500, and which, as he alleged, one of the defendants, named Henry Chard, whom he had employed as a sub agent in the matter of the restoration of Oude, had improperly filled up with the abovementioned sums, and had refused to return on the repayment of the loan. The case principally turned on the circumstances attending the signing of the bill for £6,500, for which the present holder, Oakley, had indisputably paid £5,000 to Chard. But it was urged against Oakley that his solicitor, who had acted as his agent in the purchase of the bill, had sufficient notice that it was tainted with fraud on Chard's part. The evidence offered on behalf of Chard was to the effect that upon the death of the Oucen of Oude and a quarrel arising between the Moulvie (the plaintiff Ood-deen) and the Prince of Oude, the Moulvie required a large sum of money to carry on the business of the embassy, and had given the bills in question for the purpose of raising the money required. On the part of Oakley, the evidence was, that before he purchased the bill of £6,500, his solicitor, Mr. Roy, went to the Moulvie's residence in Sunbury; that an interview there took place between Mr. Roy and the Moulvie, at which the latter acknowledged his signature to the bill. But this was denied by the Moulvie. The £5,000 paid by Oakley for the bill were paid into a bank in the name of Chard, as agent to the King of Oude, but it did not appear that more than a small portion, if any, of the £5,000 reached the hands of the Moulvie personally.

Their Lordships were of opinion that, as between the Moulvie and Chard, the Moulvie was entitled to be relieved against the whole of the bills of exchange. But they were of opinion that, at the interview which took place at Sunbury between Oakley's solicitor and the Moulvie, as to the bill of £6,500, the Moulvie did not repudiate that bill; and, as Oakley had fairly purchased it from Chard, the Moulvie had rendered himself liable to pay the amount of that bill to Oakley. It appeared that to one of the four bills of £1,000 each, no one, not even Chard, laid claim, and that bill, therefore, would be delivered up to the Moulvie; but as to the remaining three bills for £1,000 each, inquiries would take place as to the circumstances under which the other defendants had obtained them from Chard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE LORD CANNING .- The will of the late Earl Canning, K.G., has been proved by the surviving executors, and the personal property sworn under £250,000. By the will, which bears date the 19th of March, 1844, the whole of the personalty is directed to be invested in the purchase of an estate to be held in trust for the late Countess for her life, with remainder to his own issue; and, in default of such issue, to his nephew, the second son of the Marquis and Marchioness of Clanricarde. The Countess died in India before his lordship, and, there not having been any issue of their marriage, the estate to be purchased therefore devolves upon Lord Hubert de Burgh-Canning (who has assumed the name of Canning in compliance with a direction in the will to that effect) for his life, with remainder to his issue in strict settlement.

GOLD SENT TO INDIA.—A Parliamentary return states that in the four years, 1857-1860, gold treasure to the amount of £13,731,462 was imported into British India from various countries, chiefly from China.

Specie to the East .- The Ceylon steamer has taken out £123,804, of which £13,300 consists of gold for Alexandria, and the remainder is silver against £499,829 in 1860, and £561,947 last year; for China and the Straits.

states that the portion of the company's line from Alexandria to Jubal Island had been opened on the 7th of March, and from that date to the 2nd of July the number of messages was 2,457, and the proportion of the company's receipts £1,547, while the steady increase in the weekly receipts showed that a revenue of about £7,000 per annum might be expected upon this small section. The examination of the cable between Aden and Kurrachee showed that the outer wires were in many places completely corroded, and wherever the cable depended on their support it had broken under its own weight, and the engineers decided on bringing home the 200 miles of new cable they had taken out for the purpose of repairs, and also any portion of the old cable which might have been picked up. The cost of a new line would be £390,250, by the Red Sea route. The Indian Government had determined to continue the line from Bagdad by the Persian Gulf to Kurrachee, and had appropriated £230,000 for that purpose: thus making a competing line to that proposed by the company.

COCHIN-CHINA.—The Monitcur enumerates the advantages obtained by the French army in Cochin-China within less than two years as follows:-The capture of the town of Saigon and of the forts of Ki-Hoa. Mytho has likewise fallen into the power of the French. vince of Bien-Hoa has been conquered, pacified, and organised. The northern and southern Annamite armies have been vanquished and dispersed; three citadels and thirty forts have been carried, and all has been accomplished with a mere handful of men. Telegraphs have been established in various provinces. A printing establishment is at work in Saigon. A tower and a lighthouse are being erected at St. Jaques, and another at the Island Pulo Condore. New roads have been opened, and above eighty lots of the Crown lands have already been sold, at the rate of five-and-a-half piasters the square yard. The Presse adds that it is not three provinces only which the Emperor Tu-Duc cedes to the French, but six, which constitute Lower Cochin-China. The sum to be paid by the Cochin-Chinese towards the expenses of the war is 25,000,000 francs, of which the Spaniards are to receive a It is, moreover, stipulated in the treaty that the exercise of the Catholic religion is to be free, not only in the provinces ceded to France, but likewise in the northern provinces of the empire of Annam.

REDUCTION OF CAVALRY IN INDIA .- A further reduction in the strength of the cavalry regiments serving in India is about to be made. Each of these regiments will in future consist of eight troops, instead of nine as at present, seven of which will be with the head quarters in India, and one forming the depot at home. The object of this reduction is to enable the authorities to form the 21st hussars without increasing the establishment of European cavalry, which, according to the latest estimate of the Indian Government, was to consist of ten regiments instead of eleven, the number that they proposed to maintain some few months back, when the formation of the 21st was begun. There will now be eleven regiments of eight troops each kept up, and not ten of nine each, thus bringing the total establishment of European cavalry for India two troops under the latest and most economical estimate. As regards the officers, the reduction will take place by the same process of absorption by which the last reduction is being effected. Vacancies caused by death or half-pay retirement, or appointment to the staff corps, will not be filled until the number of each rank is brought down to the new establishment. Retirements by sale will not be affected by the arrangement.—Army and Navy Gazette.

COTTON.—Notwithstanding the falling-off in the supply of cotton last year, the amount devoted to its purchase exhibited a large advance. Thus the computed real value of the American cotton imported last year into the United Kingdom was £26,549,717, against £26,597,208 in 1860, and TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY.—The report [1860, and £1,104,766 in 1859; of East Indian, £7,278,537, against £2,997,000 in 1860, and £3,204,748 in 1850; and of miscellaneous supplies, £275,309, against £226,747 in 1860, and £263,327 in 1859. The aggregate total value of last year's import was consequently computed at £35,940,055, against £31,567,130 in 1860, and £28,762,560 in 1859. It will not escape attention how largely India has profited by the present crisis.

PRIZE ESSAYS ON THE "VEDAS."-The discrepancies between the Vedus, the sacred writings of the Brahmins, and the present religious doctrines of the Hindoos have for some time occupied the attention of the more enlightened natives. The Vedas, though acknowledged as the highest authority in all matters of religion and law, had never been published in India, and were hardly understood by even the most learned among the Brahmins. The late East India Company intrusted Professor Max Müller with the publication of the most important of the four Vedas, the Rig-Veda, three large volumes of which have been printed at Oxford. A Hindoo merchant of Bombay has lately deposited the sum of 2.000 runees with Messrs. William Nicol and Co., for the three best essays on the following subject:- "Review of the Vedas, with special reference to the light which they cast on the social and religious state of the ancient Indians, and on their beliefs and practices as better than those of the Hindoos of later times." The conditions are as follows:-1. The essays are to be in the English language, and it is recommended that they shall not exceed 300 or 400 pages 8vo., pica type. 2. The author of the best essay will receive a prize of 1,200 rupees. It is expected that he will either arrange for its publication on his own account within six months of his gaining the prize, or give up his manuscript, with its copyright, to the donor of the prize for his disposal, 3. The author of the second best essay to receive a prize of 500 rupees, and the author of the third best essay a prize of 300 rupees. 4. All passages from the Vedas and other works to be referred to in notes, mentioning the places in which they occur. A list of original treatises and papers by European and Indian authors, bearing on the subject of the essays and the works on which they are founded, to be given in an appendix. 5. The adjudication of the prizes to be left to the following gentlemen:-The Rev. John Wilson, D.D.; Martin Haug, Ph.D., Professor of Sanskrit in the Puna College; Dr. Bhow Daji, Fellow of the University of Bombay; the Rev. Dhanjibhai Nouroji; and Raho Saheb Wishwanath Narayan Mandalik, Bombay. Each competitive essay, with a motto and sealed note containing the name of the author, to be placed in the hands of Dr. Wilson on or before the 1st of August, 1863. The competition is open to all classes of people without any distinction. 7. If the writer of the first best essay will give a Sanskrit version of it, he will receive 300 rupees additional.

APPOINTMENT-CHINA-(DOWNING-STREET, Aug. -The Queen has been pleased to appoint H. J. Ball, Esq., to be Judge of the Court of Summary Jurisdiction, and Charles May, Esq., to be Police Magistrate for the Colony of Hong Kong.

THE VICTORIA CROSS .- A few days ago the troops in garrison at Dover were assembled upon the drill-ground, and in their presence with due solemnity the Victoria Cross was presented to Licutenant Edward Talbot Thackeray, of the Royal Bengal Engineers. Lieutenant Thackeray was summoned to the front, and a letter from the War-office, expressive of her Majesty's regret that she was unable to decorate the recipient herself, was read. General Garvock, in presenting the medal, remarked that, although there were older officers in this garrison, Lieutenant Thackeray was the only one who possessed the honour of this decoration. The decoration was then affixed.

COST OF CEYLON.—In the five years, 1856-60. the sum of £487,642 was defrayed out of the Imperial Exchequer for military and naval charges £23,627,772 in 1859; of Brazilian, £556,652, on account of the colony of Ceylon, above against £499,829 in 1860, and £561,947 last year; £97,000 a year. The civil charges were only of Egyptian, £1,279,840, against £1,246,346 in £800 during the whole period.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territorics subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Sixe, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. 23; or, on cloth, in a case. 22. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, 23. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towas and places of note likely to be looked for. Te make ofear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their sames, are distinctly indicated. The railways and kelegusphs are laid down, and the trusk roads compensates and collectorate with their sames, are distinctly indicated. The railways and kelegusphs are laid down, and the trusk roads compensates of a wold, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for coference, the names of many small villages, and phones of no greecal importance, have been omitted, each thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The general scheme and objects to be embraced by this Company may be thus described, viz, the construction, maintenance, and carrying on of such works of water transit as it may be found from time to time describle to construct, in order to improve the navigation of the rivers of India, and to adapt them to irrigation and other profitable purposes.

The particular work which this Company purposes immediately to undertake is the construction of a ravigable canal connecting the river India at Jerruck with Kurrachee.

The India, it is well known, is the main artery of Scinde, and the chief channel of communication between a large, part of Central Asia and the sea. Near the embouchure of this river stands Kurrachee, which is the only port in its neighbourhood accessible for large ships.

The town and harbour of Kurrachee, however, are separated from the river by a neck or strip of land about four miles in breasith. Moreover, the river itself, after teuching Jerruck, a distance of about eighty miles from Kurrachee, takes a long and circuitous course through the tidal creeks, involving both scrious expense and loss of time in the conveyance of goods, and the necessity of their transhipment before they can reach that port.

The formation of this canal will have, as its immediate effect, the removal of both these impediments to the cheap navigation of the India; but its utility will not stop here. It will be the means of irrigating and bringing into fertility a large portion of the Delta of that river—a district peculiarly suited to the production of the best cotton, and well adapted for the growth of the sugar cane, indigo, and other valuable products.

The canal will also provide the town, shipping, and troops stationed in Kurrachee with an abundant and unfailing sup-

The canal will also provide the town, shipping, and troops stationed in Kurrachee with an abundant and unfailing supply of excellent water, of which there is great want. The water at present used is obtained from wells, and is very brackish, while the sopply is both limited in quantity and precarious. A considerable return, therefore, may be looked for from the supply of water alone to this rapidly rising port and town.

and town. Prospectuses, with pamphlet containing details of the proposed canal and irrigaten works, and forms of application for shares, may be obtained at the brokers', the solicitors', and at the offices, 15. Cannon-street West, E.C. A deposit of 10s, 'per share must be paid on application, and £1. 10s, on allotment. No application will be considered unless the deposit is paid at the Company's bankers', Messrs. Williams, Deacon, and Co., Birchin-lane. If no allotment is made the d-posit will be returned without deduction.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 19th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which ease they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE entire absence of news by the Calcutt Mail of the 8th of June implies undisturbed tranquillity throughout British India-with one exception; the Rent Question is still in abeyance. The ryots in Lower Bengal in abeyance. refuse to pay the enhanced rents, and their European landlords apply in vain for redress to the courts of law. Twelve years' occupancy of land gives a perpetual title to the holding, and a large majority of the ryots have been in possession of their small farms and garden-plots for a considerably longer period. They cannot, therefore, be of the ship, and who, of course, was in colluforcibly ejected, and thus the only remedy lies sion with the Parsees. The result is that sevethrough the slow inaction of the courts, a ral banks have been victimised to the extent of Li

It is very clear that India is not yet in a condition to tempt Europeans to settle in the country and invest their capital in reproductive works.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal is on a tour of inspection, and it is hoped that much good will result from his visit to Assam. His Honour proposes also to be present at the opening of the Soane Bridge, on which occasion, if native rumours are to be credited, a child will be sacrificed to propitiate the demon of the river. This ridiculous fable is so far accepted at Patna that the Missionschool has been almost entirely abandoned. A pendant to this superstitious folly is the case of the miscreants who have been wandering through the rural districts of Oude. levying black mail from the villagers in the name of the Government, and threatening as an alternative the destruction of their villages by fire. The people submitted to the extortion in credulous terror, but fortunately the circumstances soon came to the knowledge of the authorities, and one of the gang was speedily apprehended, and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude beyond the seas. Where, it will be asked, were the police, of whose boasted efficiency we have heard so much? Where were the native magistrates, from whose local knowledge such great things have been looked for? These inquiries are obvious and easily asked, nor is the answer hard to find. Neither native police nor native magistrates are worthy of the name.

The European residents in Calcutta, with very slight assistance from the natives, have already sent home £5,000 for the relief of the distress in Lancashire. Collections for this excellent purpose are being made in every British station in India.

From China the tidings of the Taeping movements are tolerably satisfactory. Shanghai remains unmolested, nor has any attempt been made to recover Ningpo. The chief topic of conversation in the European community appears to be the discovery of a gigantic fraud committed by the Parsee firm of Hor. musjee and Rustomjee. This house enjoyed a high commercial character, and was regarded as inferior to none in honour and solvency. It was their custom, it seems, to borrow money from the banks on the security of receipts for opium deposited in a receiving-ship, policies of insurance being given as collateral security. These receipts were signed by an Englishman named Stanford, commander and part owner greater evil than the original loss of the rent. | a million and a-half of dollars, while the Parsees have fled to Macao; Stanford alone having as yet been apprehended.

THE AMALGAMATED COLONELS.

Most of our military readers will have noticed the Royal Warrant which was published a few months ago, containing the new rules for the promotion of officers to the rank of general. The warrant appears not to have excited much attention. Probably to the younger men in the army the prospect of promotion to be general is too remote to be interesting, while others may have been misled by the obscurity of its expression from noticing the provisions of the warrant. But as some of these are not a little worth consideration we shall make no apology for reviewing the scheme at length.

The main object the warrant has in view is to fuse the General officers of the Royal and Indian armies into one list. To effect this a considerable modification is necessary in the way in which promotion to the rank of general officer has heretofore been made in the Indian army. In the British service the colonels of the guards, cavalry and line, are in one list for promotion to general, while the Artillery and Engineers have each a separate list of their own. Thus, should the senior colonel in the army belong to the Artillery, he remains at the top of the list until a vacancy occurs among the generals who have been promoted from his own branch of the service. On the other hand, an artillery colonel is promoted to fill such a vacancy, although he may be a long way down the list of army colonels. And so with regard to the Engineers, although, by the way, the reason why this separate system should be maintained for these two services which is not also applied to the cavalry and guards is not very obvious. In the Indian army this distinction has not been hitherto observed, but promotion to the rank of general has gone in one list for all branches of the service throughout the three presidencies. The general result has of course been a certain inequality of luck in the smaller services. Thus the Bengal Cavalry and the Madras Infantry have lately had several generals more than their share. The artillery, taking the three presidencies, has had exactly its proper average, of which, however, the Bengal regiment has by far the largest share. This is accounted for by the prominent place which Bengal Artillery captains in command of batteries occupied during the campaigns of the last twenty years, and the large number of brevet promotions made in that regiment.

The existing arrangement is to hold good for all colonels of both armies holding that rank before the 17th February, 1861; that is, before the date of amalgamation; but all the colonels of the cavalry and infantry promoted after that date will be formed into one list, from which promotions to generals will be made so soon as the colonels senior to them shall be promoted. It is provided that "if all the colonels on the separate list of one army shall have become major generals, while some of the colonels on the other separate list are still unpromoted, those colonels shall have the benefit of vacancies occurring in the lists of generals of either army." Now there can be little doubt but that the separate list of colonels of the Indian army, that is, of the colonels promoted to that rank before the 17th February, 1861, will be exhausted before the corresponding list of colonels of the Royal army, because the proportion of colonels which obtained in February, 1861, was smaller in the Indian than in the Royal service. So far, therefore, the first effect of the amalgamation will be to benefit the latter at the expense of the former. And after the amalgamation is thoroughly effected, the general result will be of the same kind. Officers of the Indian army are certainly, as a rule, older men than those of corresponding grades in the royal service. Indian generals are, as a body, older than royal generals, and the rate of mortality among them is greater. Therefore the result of fusing the two lists of generals into one must obviously be to diminish somewhat the promotion of Indian officers, and accelerate correspondingly that of royal officers, engineers. This state of things will last for about wards Bombay and the last south to the Goda-tained had the two lists remained separate. On the other hand, it is provided by the warrant that, as the strength of officers of the Indian army diminishes, the establishment of general officers is to be decreased in proportion, and the consequent retardation in promotion will now be diffused among both armies instead of being confined to the Indian army. And this part of the arrangement should more than compensate the latter for any disadvantage it may sustain from the working of other parts of the scheme.

But when we turn to the Ordnance corps, the effect of the warrant promises to be somewhat remarkable. In the first place it is provided, as in the case of the other branches of the service, that the artillery and engineer colonels of the two armies who rank from and after the 17th February, 1861, shall be formed into two lists, one of artillery and one of engineers, from which promotions shall be made to the rank of general, the arrangement taking effect as soon as all the colonels senior to them (who are to be promoted under existing rules) shall be absorbed. It is also provided that if the colonels of artillery or engineers of one army who attained that rank before February 17, 1861, shall be all promoted to general, while any colonels of similar rank in the other army remain unpromoted, then these latter are to get the benefit of any vacancies occurring among the list of generals of artillery or engineers respectively of either army, so that they may be all promoted before any of the colonels who rank from and after the 17th February, 1861. It is also provided that as soon as all the colonels on the old system are promoted, a fixed scale of general officers is to be established for the Indian artillery and engineers, to accord with the scales of the royal service. These scales are fixed at twenty-six and twelve respectively, making with the present scales of the latter service a strength of fifty-four and twenty-five generals respectively for the amalgamated artillery and engineers.

These details are somewhat dry, but it has been necessary to state them in order that what follows may be comprehended. To complete these scales it is provided that, on the amalgamation of the colonels, promotions shall be made to complete the required strength of Indian generals from the amalgamated list of colonels. At the present time there happens to be exactly the required number of twenty-five generals of Indian artillery, but this number will, probably, have diminished when the amalgamation takes place, while in the engineers there are now four generals less than the required number, and the number is not likely to increase. The probable effect of the measure will, therefore, be to give promotion to several of the senior colonels of the amalgamated list in both the artillery and engineers. Now the grade of regimental colonel which has been long established in the royal ordnance corps was only created in the Indian service on the 18th Feb., 1861; consequently, with the exception of a few officers who held brevet rank, the whole of the colonels of Indian Artillery and Engineers take rank from and after that date, and are, therefore, all junior to their brethren of the Royal service; so that all the promotion required to complete the scales of generals of Artillery and Engineers for the Indian service-which, as above explained, is to be effected from the amalgamated list-will go entirely in the Royal regiments; the lower grades in them will also receive a corresponding amount of promotion to fill up the vacancies thus created, and the Indian regiments will receive no benefit whatever!

This will be the first result of amalgamation, but the unfairness of the arrangement will by no means stop here. Since all the colonels of the royal regiments are senior to all those of the Indian ones, with the trifling exceptions already noticed, it follows that until the list of royal colonels whose rank dates before February 1861 (and the list is a very long one) is cleared off, all promotions to the grade of general officer upon the amalgamated list will go in these regiments, and there will be an almost absolute stagnation in the higher grades of the Indian Artillery and compared with the rates that would have ob- | eight or ten years! This admirable contrivance for throwing all the promotion into one branch of the service at the expense of the other may, of course, have been unforeseen by the framers of the warrant; but it is almost too ingenious to be unintentional, in fact it has every appearance of being a Horse Guards' job. But the measure is too glaringly unfair to be persisted in when once exposed, and we trust that the Indian Government will lose no time in getting the matter put right. It is plain that the sting of the measure lies in fixing the 17th of February, 1861, as the date upon which the amalgamated list is to be formed, since upon that date there were no colonels of Indian artillery and engineers. By fixing it instead on the 19th of February, 1861, and allowing all colonels promoted before that time to rise as at present, the remarkable result which we have drawn attention to would be avoided, and the amalgamation would be effected without very great unfairness.

We qualify our statement in this way because it is clear that, however managed, an amalgamated list of colonels must always be very disadvantageous to the Indian Ordnance Corps. In the Royal services a regimental colonel is hardly ever employed out of the United Kingdom, and, if unemployed, he can draw full pay and hold on for promotion to general. But in the Indian service a colonel, as long as he remains in service, must serve in India, and therefore those who wish to spend their old age at home are obliged to retire: and henceforward retirements in the Indian Artillery and Engineers will usually take place among the colonels on their promotion to that rank. It follows that the senior colonels of the amalgamated list will almost always be officers of the old Royal regiments, and that the general officers' list will be chiefly recruited from them. This is a bad prospect for the men of the old Indian regiments .- Friend of India.

FROM CALCUTTA TO BOMBAY AS THE CROW FLIES.

If only all lines of road and railway could be made straight from terminus to terminus, as the crow flies, how happy would engineers be, how much less the amount of capital expended and of time lost! But roads, and in a greater degree railways, must slavishly follow the routes marked out by nature and by the flow of trade. Like beings who exercise free will, pathways must often wind by many a circuitous route to their end. When the course of trade marks out a certain line of country as the best for a road or railway, it is seldom that nature is there free from those obstacles of wide rivers, broad lakes or tall hills. which engineers avoid when they can. And when nature is thus free, presenting a broad and level path, generally the course of traffic will be found to be hundreds of miles away. Hence Lord Dalhousie, wisely we still think, preferred to make the East India railway follow the northerly course of the Ganges to catch the traffic, instead of the more southerly line of table land scraped by a poor population, which would have saved hundreds of miles and millions of capital. It seems as absurd that to reach Bombay the Calcutta traveller should go north to Mirzapore, as that the cockney who wishes to enjoy a holiday in Bath should have to go round by Derby. Yet trade as well as the wants of our North-Western Provinces necessitates this.

But, since we must make roads through the hitherto neglected but fertile provinces of Chota Nagpore and Sirgoojah, since Central India has now a great future before it, the question arises whether local works should not be carried out with a view to the imperial necessities of the future. Let us take up our position on the Ummerkuntuk ridge of the Kymore Hills 3,500 feet above the sea-a point in which the peninsula of Hindustan may be said to culminate, a place that may be called the "Omphalos," the navel of the country. Here the Mahanuddy, the Soane. the Nerbudda and Wyngunga take their rise, the first rolling away east to the Bay of Bengal, the second north to the Ganges, the third west to-

If we draw a line from Calcutta, from the Raneegunge terminus of its coal railway straight to Jubbulpore, which is the terminus of the rail to Bombay, this line would bisect the elevated plateau of Chota Nagpore, pass through the higher land of Sirgoojah, and run along the northern base of the hill on which we stand. The whole distance is only 440 miles, or 150 miles shorter than the present Grand Trunk Road by Mirzapore with its difficult crossings over the wide sandy mouths of such rivers as the Soane This new route is fully 300 miles shorter than the railway line by Allahabad. The twenty-nine miles extension of the East Indian Railway be yond Raneegunge, now being carried out, lies in this direction. Ultimately as traffic increases the railway itself might be continued to Jubbulpore, and thus twenty hours would be saved to passengers and mails between Calcutta and Bomhav.

But, it may be asked, is not this line of country jungly, hilly, and to engineers impassable? So the old maps have represented provinces which were unexplored ten years ago, but which for beauty, fertility, and healthiness will soon be recognised as in many respects superior to the Himalayas, which afford few level spaces. simple statement of facts, vouched for by the engineers of the Public Works Department on the spot, will show the character of the country. The truth is this line falls on broad plateaux richly cultivated, meets much fewer obstacles to intercommunication than the present East Indian Railway, and occupies the highest and healthiest watershed line in Bengal. From the right bank of the Damooda opposite the Raneegunge terminus a watershed line extends through Manbhoom and Soobunrika for one hundred and twenty miles to Chota Nagpore. A local road is necessary here to open out Pachete, Manbhoom, and Chota Nagpore, and a mere fairweather road is being made. From Chota Nagpore for forty miles to Lohardugga the watershed line is still unbroken, and forms a plateau of some 2,000 feet above the sea covered with cultivation. So inviting is the line for a road that the bridging and earthwork would not cost Rs. 1.500 a mile. Between the tributaries of the Soane and the Mahanuddy our road would follow the watershed line for 100 miles to Sirgoojah, a place which produces chiefly cotton, but whose sticklac and oil-seeds are taken all the way to Mirzapore to find a market, though the place is only 300 miles from Calcutta. This fine country, hitherto hermetically sealed for want of roads must yet tempt the tea and coffee planters. Around it lie Odeypore, Jushpore, and Raeghur, which export cotton, lac, sesame and mustard We pass on for 100 miles to Sohajpore in the Jubbulpore district, so accessible by country roads as to export largely to Jubbulpore and Nagpore. Hence to Jubbulpore the district is well known for its richness in iron ore.

It is considered by the best local engineer officers thus possible to unite the two railways in a line as nearly as possible as the crow flies by a road 440 miles in length which crosses no river of any magnitude except the Damooda at a point where a bridge will be easy, and which presents so few engineering difficulties that an outlay of Rs. 3,000 per mile would suffice for an imperial metalled road. But what of trade? shown that the country along the line is a virgin land and may be a paradise for planters who will unite with tea and coffee the growth or purchase of cotton, grain and lac. These prorinces, too, have now got good government, some being under under the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, and others under the zealous local commissioners who are responsible to the Bengal authorities. Roads of a kind are being made by the different local officers, and all that we plead for at present is that they be taken under imperial supervision with a view not only to the great future that is, undoubtedly, before Central India, but to a future road-railway and the most speedy communication that is possible between Calcutta and Bombay. Even the dreaming Asiatic has now learned that time is money in India.-Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT IN UMRITSUR.-The Lahore Chronicle describes the first efforts made to establish a Town Council in Umritsur. deputy-commissioner divided the townsfolk into ten tribes. First came the Brahmins, who were to have but one committeeman or councillor, then the Khuttrees two, the Nowreas two, Bunneeas two, and the Oodasus. Kashmeree shawl merchants (Koteedars), Kashmeree Shawl weavers (Shal Bof), Kashmeree Darners (Rufoogers), groups containing the remaining Hindoo castes and Mussulmans, each one representative, or thirteen in all. These tribes selected, as in Prussia and America, electors to the number of seven hundred, who met at the police-office on the 13th June, and recorded their votes, by ballot, before the deputy-commissioner. The election fell on nine Hindoos and four Mussulmans, who, in the presence of the English residents, were told by the deputy-commissioner, Captain Pollock, that however ready he himself and his assistants might be to give them advice, it would only be done when asked for, and would never go beyond that limit. The first meeting of the native Town Council was to be held on the 23rd.

THE "PRACTICE OF THE SUDDER."ers will remember the tax riot near Nowgong, Assam, on 18th October last, in which Lieut. Singer was killed by a mob. The Sudder Court has sentenced six prisoners to transportation for life as guilty of being "accomplices in a riot attended with murder," two to fourteen years' imprisonment with labour, and one to seven years' imprisonment with labour in irons. Yet three of the first set of prisoners confessed they struck the deceased with a stick on the head; the medical testimony is to the effect that death had been caused by a blow on the head, which was fractured in two places: that the blow was "as from a club," and that there was a spear wound under the right eye, and one on the right breast, inflicted, probably, after death. The Judicial Commissioner of Assam sentenced them to death, but Messrs. Trevor and Bayley say it is inconsistent with the practice of the Sudder to sentence capitally on such evidence! Society should be grateful for the High Court, in which the Chief Justice will supervise them. It appears from the evidence that the cause of the riot was. that the villagers wanted justice in regard to the Income and Pan-taxes, and stoppage of the opium cultivation.

INDIAN ALLOWANCES .- The Gazette notifies that under instructions from the Secretary of State for India the grant of Indian allowances to officers who may hereafter attain to the colonel's allowance, and who may not be required to reside in India by any of the Indian Governments, will be discontinued. Such officers will receive in addition to that allowance the full rate of regimental pay only as long as they may be unemployed, wherever they may be permitted to reside. Indian allowances will, however, be passed to such officers for six months from the date of the general order promoting them to the colonel's allowance, or for any shorter period during which they may be resident in India. Also that, with reference to the case of Major C. Hutchinson, of the Bengal Engineers, the fact of an engineer officer being employed in the Public Works Department is not to be considered as giving him a title to admission to the Staff Corps, and that no period passed in employment in the Public Works Department, prior to his admission to the Staff Corps, will, in the case of such officer, be reckoned in itself service for promotion.

WIDOWS' PARADISE.—We are glad to see in general orders that the Commander-in-chief has called for returns showing the proportion of maried to unmarried men in each European regiment and battery in the Bengal Presidency, on the 1st of May of each year, commencing from the 1st May, 1862. It will be found that the 12 per cent. limit is not reached, because the men, up to that limit, are not allowed to marry in England, and cannot find wives here. No barrack woman, as a rule, is a widow for more than three months. She is married at once,

THE HIGH COURT OF BENGAL-The Supreme Court of Calcutta, as well as the Court of Sudder Abawlut, ceased to exist on Monday, June 30, and on Tuesday, the 1st of July, the amalgamated courts were formed into the High Court of Indicature by her Majesty's letters patent, which will be found elsewhere. On Monday the chief justice declared to the bar the great regret with which the judges left the bench, and expressed a hope that the same good feeling which had hitherto prevailed between the bench and the legal profession generally would continue in the new Court. Such was the closing scene in the existence of a tribunal which with so much independence, dignity, learning, and general acceptance, has administered the laws of England in Calcutta for nearly a century. On Tuesday the chief justice and thirteen judges were sworn in as judges of the High Court, in the Council Chamber of Government House, by the Secretary for the Home Department. A Royal salute ought to have marked the event. There are not yet sufficient materials for comment on the details of the new legal arrangements. Practically no change will be made for a time in the existing Supreme and Sudder Courts, except that the civil procedure of the former will be that of Act VIII. of 1859, the same as in all Mofussil Courts. Patent distinguish three classes of legal practitioners-Advocates or barristers who may "appear and plead " for suitors; Vakeels such as have hitherto pleaded before the Sudder Judges who may "appear, plead and act;" and attorneys-at-law who may "appear and act." Rules and directions are now being drawn up by the new Court for these classes. We understand that, to begin with, the Judges will select from the Sudder Vakeels such persons as they consider qualified to plead before the High Court. A native Judge will be nominated from among these Vakeels, and the full strength of the Bench, or fifteen Judges, will thus be complete. Meanwhile the former Sudder Judges will confine themselves to appellate cases and clear off the arrears of years. Thus the work of uniformity in legislation and the administration of justice proceeds apace. Englishman and native, conqueror and conquered, Christian and heathen-all have the same criminal law and the same civil procedure. In time, doubtless, they will be subject to the same civil law. Whether while thus philanthropically elevating the Asiatic we are not somewhat degrading the Englishman, remains to be seen. Much will depend on the detailed rules which now, and from time to time, are issued by the Chief Justice subject to the approval of the Govenor-general in Council. So far as the matrimonial jurisdiction of the Court over Christians is concerned, the rules of the English Divorce Court are to be closely followed. Our readers will not fail to observe that henceforth her Majesty's Writ, under the seals of the High Courts, will run throughout India, and thus another step is taken to complete the imperialising process which began on 1st November, 1858.—Friend of India.

Nagpore.—A durbar was held at Nagpore on the 23rd June, by Mr. Temple, Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, on the occasion of presenting Janojee Bhonsla with the sunnud from the Viceroy, conferring upon him the title of "Rajah Bahadoor of Deor." The whole of the civil and military officers were present. The sunnud was read by Mr. Temple, who then addressed the assembly in Persian, telling them that the Governor general was very glad to grant the sunnud, and desired him to convey his wish for the perpetuation of Janojee's family. A "nuzzer," of 1,800 rupees, was then presented to Mr. Temple, on which he delivered the sunnud to Janojee Bhonsla with a "Khilut." On the evening of the next day Mr. Temple entertained the Naupore volunteers at dinner. Brigadier Maclead and his staff, with all the military officers in the station, were present.

COLONEL BRUCE, C.B., has completed the organisation of the new police in the Central Provinces, and will return to Calcutta vid the Godavery. The whole country round Nagpore is under water, and there is not a "made" road within eighteen miles of the city.

THE JYNTEAH HIGHLANDERS AGAIN. - The tribes of the Jynteah country in Assam promise to be as troublesome, and operations among them to be as unsatisfactory, as either the Indigo disturbances or the Rent struggle. General Showers has returned to civilisation, and the Jynteahs are once more " up." The sowing season has come, but the hill country is still disorganised. A few days ago a band of rebels attacked a party of sepoys as they were bringing in provisions, killed eight men, and put the rest to flight, plundering their arms and ammunition. A correspondent represents the whole country as infested with robbers, who harry the villages and carry off their peaceful inhabitants into the jungle. To expect the sepoys to follow them up to their own fastnesses, and to hunt them out of their almost impregnable caves is out of the question. The police are worse than useless. General Showers, ere he left, shut up all the bazaars, with the view of starving the rebels out of their holes. But money is all-powerful, and food is always forthcoming to the most determined rebel if he has rupees. All our information and the evidence elicited on the trial of Lieut. Singer's murderers bear out the opinion to which we have given expression from the first-that our own native officials are the cause of the repeated risings of these hill men, and of their now chronic state of revolt. It was so in Sonthalistan till Mr. Yule turned the police out of the country, and both crime and drunkenness disappeared, only to raise their heads again on his departure for Oudh. Is there no way of levying tribute on these people through their headmen without putting it in the power of every policeman with a chuprass on his breast, or clerk with a pen behind his ear, to exact money under the threat of heavy taxation? A missionary who lives among the people, and knows them thoroughly, declares that to his certain knowledge our own native underlings have been the chief instruments of the present dangerous outbreak. Only the worst natives will go, as officials, to such an isolated and wild country, while our English officers have been too few to supervise them. Had all been removed before the rebels, now in open revolt, had reached their present pitch of fury, we might have prevented the unsatisfactory campaign which has just terminated only We asto begin again in the cold weather. sert that so long as our present native officials remain in the Jynteah country, they will be regarded as a standing menace by those who have suffered from them so severely. Let them be removed and the rebels will begin to have confidence that the English really mean to redress their grievances. What may native subordinates not do even under the eyes of their European superiors, when the latter do not know a word of the language? Oh for a man in that glorious highland country who will do for the hill tribes of Assam what Mr. Yule has done for the Sonthals, and Nicholson for the Punjab frontier tribes! In a month or two the Lieutenant-governor will be near the spot. We trust he will eradicate this root of bitterness, which alone troubles the Jynteah highlanders.-Friend of India.

JUBBULPORE, July 3.-In a little more than twelve months the public may look forward to the completion of the East Indian Railway to Allahabad. The want of the length thence to Jubbulpore will be felt as a national inconvenience. Anything that can be done to expedite its formation will serve the interests of the Government, the public, and the shareholders. From information received from England it would appear that contractors are not likely to be found there to undertake the work. Their want of a knowledge of the country, the uncertainty of the labour market for supply and rates, together with the great distance of this portion of the road from any port, are reasons which make prudent men think twice before engaging in so heavy an undertaking. If such be the case, and contractors in England do not take this line, I think the public here may congratulate themselves that it is so. The works are said to be heavy, to get them completed with rapidity the best men in come out to execute them. The company could construct it; invite tenders for a portion or the whole; or select from among their staff of engineers suitable men to whom to give it out on contract. Should any one of these modes be adopted, I have no doubt the length would be made in less time than contractors from England CHURCH PUNKAHS .- It appears that at Meerut, and at some other up-country stations, there is considerable excitement on the subject of punkahs in churches during divine service. We believe that the Government was willing to provide punkah-pullers to cool the non-commissioned officers and soldiers during divine service, but would not furnish the same indulgence for the officers and gentry and the general community, who, consequently, what with the religious zeal inside, and the external heat of the atmosphere outside, were nearly driven mad, and could not attend to their devotions. It appears, also, that at Meerut the clergyman could not realise, by the subscriptions of his flock, sufficient funds to pay the punkah-coolies; and as neither the Government would, nor the parson could, cool the church, the people stayed away on Sundays in their own houses, and, it is presumed, said prayers in which, however, it is possible that they might not, in all cases, invoke blessings upon the Government. In this warm state of affairs, the interference of his Excellency the Commander-in Chief having been called for, a circular was received at Meerut from the Quarter-Master General of the army; and a committee of field officers have been assembled to inquire into the facts of these matters. and guide the Government with its opinions and decision.

CACHAR.—So great has been the destruction among the cattle, especially the buffaloes, in this district, that not much more than half of the land can be brought under paddy cultivation for the first crop. All the cows that could be got have been yoked to the plough, but they are a very inefficient substitute for that mire-loving animal, the buffalo, which is to the poorer ryot his whole and sole dependence, without which he is powerless, hand husbandry being considered by him, as it probably is, impracticable in rice cultivation. The oldest inhabitants say they have never known such a frightful devastation among the cattle as this year's murrain has caused. Its coincidence in point of time with cholera among men, both reaching their acme of severity at the same time in the same year, deserves to be remarked. Disastrous as the effect of the murrain has been to the native cultivator, it has not only not touched the tea planter, but has proved of positive benefit to him, as the large amount of unemployed labour has naturally turned itself on to the plantations, and within one short month so greatly has the competition for work increased, that advances have gone down to almost nil, and rates have diminished considerably. How long this state of things may last it is impossible to say; it depends on the quantity of cattle procurable in the neighbouring districts, whence the cultivators are procuring them as fast as they can earn the purchase money; each man, as he replaces his lost buffalo, becomes again an independent gentleman, self-reliant as ever. To one not accustomed to take note of nature's vagaries, the year might fairly labour under the imputation of being out of joint; the weather has been as if March and June had been transposed. In March we had the continuous gentle set-in that generally takes place in June, and we are now in June having the squally, thundery weather which characterises March, with frequent intervals of bright sunny days. It is in this sort of weather that our local nocturnal pest, the great tea-destroying cricket, is preternaturally active, getting ready his pent-houses against the approach of rain, and laying in a store of food. The materials he unfortunately selects in preference to any other are the plants which are the objects of our care and solicitude. A good-sized cricket will singly, in the course of a night, shear away twenty strong the right places are wanted. Two or three plants out of a nursery, and when it is considered cases.

methods offer should English contractors not | that he will repeat this operation at every change from fair to foul, and that he is a rapid breeder. it will be understood how he becomes in time, especially on old lands, the greatest pest the planter has to contend with, cutting off every green shoot, and throwing back or destroying whole acres; in fact, if his inroads are unresisted, and no attempts made to exterminate him, he, in time, almost rivals in destructiveness his congener the locust. The Kookees and Nagas are the most expert at catching them, and in many plantations find full work. With the skill which practice alone gives, they follow unerringly all the windings of the hole, and seldom fail to come upon the marauder in his innermost retreats: he is then caught and skewered to form the basis of a highly approved curry, these gentry not being very particular as to what they eat.—Englishman.

KATMANDOO, June 25 .- I hear a quarrel has arisen between Nepaul and Thibet; a Nepaulese trader has been wantonly murdered at L'hassa by a Lama, and the Nepaul Durbar has threatened war if the murderer be not immediately given up to be dealt with according to its pleasure. I should say the demand will be complied with, for the last time the two countries went to war Thibet was quickly overpowered, and had to appeal to China for assistance. That was given, and the Nepaulese driven back to their hills, where they were followed by the Chinese, who only retired after having stipulated for payment of a regular tribute. There is not much chance, however, of any such appeal being responded to at present. The Chinese have their hands full with their own affairs. Tartars, Taepings, and Allies all seem to be at loggerheads together, and are not likely to have time or inclination to interfere between Thibetans and Nepaulese. Jung Bahadoor has expressed a wish to have his children educated as artillery and engineer officers, but the Governor-general appears disinclined to give him an opportunity of doing so, saying that military schools are only open to persons wishing to qualify themselves for her Majesty's service. This reply will be taken by the Maharajah as a gratuitous refusal to comply with his request, as he will never believe that Government could not, if it chose, order the admission of his sons into its own schools. Besides, the young men might, by a pleasant fiction, be supposed to be qualifying themselves for her Majesty's service, and be allowed to resign as soon as they had completed their education. The bed of the Bubbye near Hurdoos, Mutthoors, and Numboos has been fixed on as the Nepaulese frontier. The Nepaulese have lately been levying tolls on grass and timber cut at Sherepore in the district of Shahjehanpore, several miles within the British border. Mr. Edmondstone, however, soon put a stop to that. He wrote to the Resident about it directly it came to his ears, and Jung Bahadoor at once desired his people to restrain their eagerness for these exactions.—Englishman.

LAHORE, June 20 .- Captain Mercer, who was recently deputed by Government to Cashmere to be present at a marriage of a son of the Cashmere Rajah, has just returned, loaded with valuable presents. The rule which requires all such presents to be given up to Government is really too hard, and I am glad Sir Robert Montgomery has allowed a slight departure from it in the present instance. Captain Mercer was anxious to retain a peculiarly handsome Cashmere shawl, and Sir Robert has allowed him to do so. All the other things, of course, go to the Toshie-khanah, sharp. You remember a report of an attempt at insurrection which was recently made at Mundlaweir: the man who instigated it is now, I am happy to inform you, in close confinement here, awaiting trial. The rains have set in and the weather is delightful.

VACCINATION IN CALCUTTA .- During 1861 the number of people vaccinated by 20 operators was 14,874. Of these, 13,231 cases were successful. In the Barrackpore division from Akyab to Darjeeling there were 24 vaccinators, and 38,676 successful cases; in the Dacca division 15 vaccinators and 3,018 successful cases; and in the Dinapore division 12 vaccinators and 3,471 successful JYNTEAHPORE, June 23 .- In 1835 the government of the Jynteah territories was transferred by the then Rajah to the British Government in consideration of the payment, to him and his heirs in perpetuity, of a monthly stipend of Rs. 500. In making this transfer, as has not unfrequently been the case in India, the Rajah parted with more than he had to give, and in consequence the Government of India assumed a position towards the people, which, though warranted possibly by their purchase, was certainly foreign to the relations towards them held by the transferring Rajah. In the present instance, the Jynteah Rajah's authority over the people was merely nominal; he could levy no taxes, nor had he any claims for revenue from the land, and the only solid benefit he derived from the Rajship was the receipt of a few dues of office of little more than nominal value. There was an There was element of government in the country of far greater power and influence than the Rajah's. The Duloyes [were, in fact, the true rulers; they exercised supreme authority over their own immediate villages, and over those subordinate to them, in every way irrespective of the Rajah, to whom they owed allegiance simply as, in ancient time, the Highland chief acknowledged the authority of the head of the clan, without in any way admitting his interference in the management of his estate. The Duloyes, therefore, repudiated at once the right of the Rajah to transfer any power over them which he could not exercise in his own person to the British Government. They objected to the transfer of their country to a foreign power without their consent being asked or accorded; nor have they ever been reconciled to it; under these circumstances, the assumption of authority over them by the British Government was sufficient in itself to breed a spirit of hostility towards the new government which could hardly fail to be fanned into a flame on the first occasion of any attempt being made to exercise it. For some time the Government officers in these parts refrained from interfering with the ancient customs and mode of administration of the country, and though they disliked the new order of things,-in fact the substitution of a new and strong Government for an old and effete one—they took no active steps to show their dissatisfaction with the new order of things. The failure of the Duloyes at this time to organise any armed opposition is more than probably due to the energy, personal influence and activity of Colonel Lyster, the Political Agent in these This was necessarily a state of things that could not last. It was impossible for the British Government to recognise the right of the people to govern themselves, or to repudiate a control which had been, to appearance, legally transferred to them by the reigning Rajah. It became necessary that the Jynteah people, as well as all others, should contribute their quota towards the maintenance of the governmental institutions in the country; when, therefore, to this end, direct taxation was enforced in the Jynteah hills, the relative rights of the Government and of the people were brought into direct opposition, and the independent spirit of the Sindengs led them to resist an assumption of authority on the part of Government which they altogether disallowed its right to exercise. The first rising which occurred was on the introduction of a house-tax in 1850, but at that time there was a large military force in the country, and the insurrection was speedily subdued; but the spirit of opposition was only scotched, not killed; it lay dormant, but not the less ready again to burn into a flame on the first favourable opportunity, or on the first indication of any further attempt at taxation by the Government. Subsequently, when the introduction of the Income-tax was ordered, and an attempt was made to levy it, the people became so exasperated that they rose almost as one man, and very unfortunately the strength of the garrison was so limited that no opposition could be offered, far less any steps taken to enforce submission. That taxation to which the Jynteans had never previously been subjected is the pri- of Mr. Grant.

mary cause of the present insurrection there can be no doubt; but apart from this, occurrences have taken place which have greatly aggravated the hostile feelings of the people towards the Government, and have roused them to the systematic and determined resistance they now manifest. Of these secondary causes none has more embittered the minds of the people towards the Government than the forcible deprivation of their shields and other implements of war. Among the Jynteans their shields were held in especial esteem, it may almost be said veneration. They were, therefore, not unnaturally, greatly incensed at being deprived of them, and when, in addition to the offence thus given, their highlyprized shields were wantonly cast into a fire made for the purpose of their destruction before their eyes, they became exasperated beyond measure. Another secondary cause for the manifest disaffection of these people towards the Government was given but a few days before the outbreak, and has, in consequence, been supposed to have been the immediate cause of it. In their hills, and at certain seasons of the year, festivals are held at which a war dance is performed. To this per-formance swords and shields are necessary adjuncts. One of the festivals was proceeding at Jalong when the Jowai darogah proceeded there, as he asserts, simply to witness the performance, and to be able to report to his superior what actually took place. Whether he was imprudent enough to interfere is not clearly set forth; but the presence even of a servant of the hated Government at a festival which could not fail forcibly to remind them of the degradation to which they had been subjected in the taking away of the weapons was, it was argued, offence sufficient in itself. Whatever took place, the darogah was considered to have interfered with the performance, and it is alleged that he met with severe personal chastisement at their hands. That he did so has not really been proved, for within a fortnight of the occurrence, while he was absent at Cherra laying his complaint before the authorities, the insurrection burst forth. The proceedings subsequent to this I have already detailed to you, and that, from the total inadequacy of the force at the disposal of Colonel Richardson, commanding the 44th Regiment N.I., amounting to barely a hundred rank and file, but little could be effected. All that an active energetic man could do was accomplished; he successfully attacked and took possession of the stockade forts of Jalong and Mansow, but for want of men was incapable of following up the advantages thus obtained; the consequence has been that the people in the district, beyond his power of coercing, have had ample time afforded them to complete all their arrangements for resisting the Government.—Englishman.

A FIREBRAND. — The Oudh authorities have sentenced to seven years' transportation a native of Durriabad who, dressed in Government livery, went about among the villagers levying money and acting as an incendiary, declaring that Government had ordered the villages to be burnt down. In his decision the Deputy Commissioner -"At the present time when calumnious reports have been spread abroad that Government have ordered villages to be burnt, a severe example is necessary." Government has issued circulars in the district disabusing the minds of the people of the false impressions created by this man and by others not yet apprehended.

A HINDOO MEMORIAL FUND .- The Hindoo Patriot makes an ad misericordiam appeal to its readers to subscribe to the memorial in honour of Hurrish Chunder, the former editor of the paper. The ryots of the indigo districts, who have certainly small reason for gratitude to a man who misled them so grievously, are asked to give one anna each. If the money is raised the object to which it is proposed to devote it is a good one—a hall in which native meetings may be held. The writer proposes to merge the Canning Fund, which is said to be Rs. 50,000, the Grant Fund, the amount of which is not given, and this Hurrish Fund in one, therewith erecting a hall with a statue of the late Governor-general and a picture

CANNING Town.—The Municipal Act XXVI. of 1850 has been put in force in the town of Canning on the Mutlah, in accordance with "the wishes of the inhabitants." The following are Commissioners:—The magistrate of the 24-pergunnahs, Mr. H. Leonard, Mr. C. P. Casperz, Mr. E. D. Kilburn, Mr. F. Schiller, Baboo Ramgopaul

THE LATE JOHN RUDD.—One of the jury who sat on Rudd's case writes to the Phænix that the jury did not recommend the criminal to mercy, as has been asserted. "The Jury did not omit to weigh well the awful consequences of their verdict, and would most gladly have availed themselves of any, the slightest, reason for a merciful recommendation: but it was their mournful conviction that there was an utter absence of everything that could warrant such a course, in all that had transpired at the trial."

Mr. George Smith, honorary magistrate in the district of Hooghly, was sworn in on the 25th June, in the Supreme Court of Calcutta, as Justice of the Peace for Bengal, Behar, and Orissa.

Useful ARTS School.-A contemporary announces that his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, following the example of his predecessor, has just made a donation of Rs. 1,000 in aid of the funds of the Useful Arts School.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HYDERABAD, DECCAN, June 20. -The daughter of a Brahmin having become adult and not married, the father erected a hut on the river running past the city, close by one of its principal gates, Chumpa Durwaza, the tomb of a Suttee, and opposite to a temple of Bhyragees. The Hindoo religion enjoins the immolation of daughters who reach, unmarried, an adult age. The daughter was placed in this hut to be washed away by a flood of the river. There was no concealment of his purpose. With one section of the Community, the Hindoos, it was considered a highly meritorious sacrifice and was encouraged; and I suppose it was believed by the father that the other section, the Mahomedans, had no right to interfere with his performance of a most sacred duty. When his intention became known to the Minister, the girl was already placed in the hut and married, the father erected a hut on the river orders and security was taken from him to provide against his carrying his intention of immolating he girl on any future day into effect. The intention of the Brahmin may be put by the side of your case of the sacrifice to Kali of a human being at Hooghly. When I mentioned the conduct of the jury of Hindoos empannelled to try that case to a Moulvie, a man of liberal opinions, his observation was that, similarly, there would be no conviction by a Mussulman jury if a Soonnee were brought before it for having taken the life of a Sheah for execrating (tuburra) the three first Caliphs. It was permitted by their law and recognised as meritorious. To this I would add that no respectable Mussulman jury could pronounce a Mussulman guilty for the murder of an infidel. Their law does not permit Mussulman murderers being sentenced capitally for the murder of an infidel; and a conviction in your courts would be to consign him to death. What is to be done with Brahmins, Mahomedans, and Vallahacharyas, not forgetting the indecent representations at Hindoo temples? These are stupid words to utter; your prevention will go but a small way; there must be a total moral regeneration. There is progression towards it, but when will it be consummated? Not in the lifetime of any of our legislators, nor that of any person at present existing, nor perhaps within the period of our rule. It is long to wait; can no fetters, no exorcism bind them? Cholera disappears as the monsoon approaches. The accounts from all parts of Hyderabad are more favourable, and it appears to have completely abated at Madaveraim, on the Madras and Hyderabad-road, where its ravages have been so fatal. The probabilities are, that in another ten days or a fortnight it will have entirely disappeared from the face of the country .- Englishman.

Mr. Breeks Robbed by Highlanders .- Mr. Breeks, C.S., the private secretary of his Excellency Sir William Denison, was stopped and robbed by a band of marauders, close to Coimbatore, when journeying recently to the Hills. Similar crimes in our provinces are of frequent occurrence, and the much-vaunted new police appear to be no check on the gangs that infest the country, of which, indeed, they are shrewdly suspected of being the accomplices.

MAJOR A. RITHERDON, of the Madras Staff Corps, was sworn in before the presiding judge, Sir C. Scotland, as one of the magistrates for the town of Madras.

BANGALORE .- According to the Mysore Recorder Mr. Bowring, the new Chief Commissioner, has made himself popular by removing all municipal taxes from the inhabitants of Bangalore since the people are poor and sufficiently burdened with taxes already. As this will come out of the Mysore and not the imperial revenues there can be no objection to such a mode of securing popularity. If he is really in earnest in attending to the sanitary condition of the towns in the province, we question if the natives will be equally pleased. No more than the English poor do Asiatics love cleanliness and ventilation. The present system of punchayets in judicial cases seems even more an evil than that of native juries in Bengal. Major Dobbs, one of the oldest officials, was compelled to sign a decree at variance with his own judgment in a case recording his own opinion, which is contrary to that of the Punchayet, but stating that he signed according to the rule laid down for his guidance. How crowds visited her; the father was brought up by his | but was immediately ordered by the officer commanding the regiment to dismount, and take up his position on foot; with which order he, of course, complied. After the parade the surgeon, through his commanding officer, of course, referred the matter to the brigadier commanding the station, directing his attention to the fact that in the army regulations and orders the saddlery and trappings for the horses of medical officers are specifically described, that consequently the surgeon is expected to keep a charger and appear as a mounted officer; and finally, that he is allowed by the Government, in this country, a monthly sum for forage, and in England, the forage is found for him by and in the state. The Brigadier, on the face of these plain facts, gave it against the officer commanding the regiment, and in favour of the surgeon, whom he ruled to be a mounted officer; and we cannot see how, under the circumstances, either he or any one else could have rationally come to any other conclusion. In this decision, however, the officer commanding H.M.'s 69th could not concur, although of course obliged for the time to yield; and accordingly he has sent home a statement of the facts and circumstances of the case, and the correspondence for the opinion and decision of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-chief in England. We have little doubt that the Duke of Cambridge's action in the matter, in these economic times, will be to dismount the doctors, and pass an order annulling their claims to appear on horseback at parades; and in that case, we cannot see how the money allowance or the forage accorded to medical officers for the maintenance of a charger can continue to be drawn: so the surgeons must probably in future ride about at their own expense. It is as well, however, that the matter should be definitely settled one way or another; and we opine that the doctors will be ordered to dismount.—Englishman.

ENCROACHMENTS OF THE OCEAN .said to be seriously encroaching on the Malabar Coast. Vypeen is likely to be altogether washed away if the engineers do not interfere, and even Cochin is threatened by the long swell of the heavy sea during the south-west monsoon.

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS commenced the visitation of his diocese at Vellore on the 22nd June. After a residence of six weeks from 1st September on the Hills he will visit Cochin, Travancore, and the missions of Tinnevelly, closing his tour at the end of January next.

MADRAS TRAMWAY COMPANY .- The Madras Government has agreed to give liberal terms to the Tramway Company, similar to those given to the Branch Railway Company in Bengal. The authorities will give the former land free, will import all materials free, will guarantee the company for a time against competition, will grant part of existing roads which are good enough to receive rails, and will not interfere with profits till they exceed 15 per cent.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BOMBAY GOVERNORS .- An antiquarian, writing in the Bombay Gazette, says he has, since 1829, lived under sixteen Governors and acting Governors of Bombay. Sir John Malcolm left in 1830. It has been said that he was passionately fond of a game at billiards; and that he has been known to clean out an officer and then provide him with a staff appointment. Sir Robert Grant, who became Governor in 1835, seems to have been most popular. He died of hard work at Poons in 1838, having established those public institutions with which his name is connected, and having cultivated sacred poetry successfully it is said. His temporary successor, Mr. J. Farish, was in the habit of holding a Bible class at his residence, on the Sabbath, for the benefit of the natives. Poor Sir W. Macnaghten, nominated Governor, did not live to wear the honour. Sir George Arthur, the father-in-law of Sir Bartle

Governor in 1842. He was so fond of early rising that at one of the earliest Governmenthouse parties given by him the National Anthem was played as the clock chimed the midnight hour: the hint was taken, and the company retired, some of them in high dudgeon. "He was the first Governor who put a stop to work being carried on under Government on the Sabbath." He was appointed Provisional Governor-general during the Sikh war under Lord Hardinge.

JUSTICES' JUSTICE IN BOMBAY.—The administration of justice in the Bombay Presidency seems to be in a sad state. In thirty five cases tried on appeal by the Sudder Court in April twenty-one decisions are reversed, and in almost all the rest the inferior judges and magistrates are blamed for irregularities. The Court complain of the "lax administration of the law," and draw the attention of the magisterial and judicial officers " to the serious inconvenience and obstruction to business, not to say injustice" that is the consequence of their "inattention to the provisions of the law." In a case from Kandeish "the Court regret to record that, owing to the want of care and attention on the part of the magistrate, there have been more errors and illegalities committed in Khandeish, in introducing the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure than anywhere else." The accused was tried three times by officials who, in doing so, exceeded their powers. It would be well if all judicial officers were made to pass an examination in the new codes.

Madagascan.-The Europeans appear to be steadily improving their ground in Madagascar. King Radama has appointed a consul at Mauritius, and the French and English Governments have each nominated similar agents at Madagascar. We regret, however, to notice that the European "firewater" is making its way into the island in constantly increasing quantities. The principal article of import is rum, which is so ridiculously cheap at the Mauritius-only about a franc and a half a gallon, that the people can afford to purchase quantities of it. As yet no duty is levied by the King's Government on any import; free trade exists in the fullest sense of the term ; the Commercial Gazette urges King Radama to impose a duty on this article which shall to a certain extent be prohibitory, and we sincerely hope he may be induced to do so. With the benefits and vices incident to civilisation King Radama is also anxious to adopt its absurdities. He has issued an order that all his subjects are to don the European costume under penalty of 100 dollars fine.

DRUNKENNESS .- The spread of drunkenness in Bombay seems to be as rapid as in Calcutta, and all the large towns of India. In 1861 there were 1865 cases, involving 2,293 prisoners before the police, or 614 prisoners more than last year. There was an increase also in the class of juvenile offenders under fourteen years of age. There were tried 526, of whom 341 were convicted, and of these twenty five were sent to the Sassoon Reformatory, established by the late Dr. Buist.

CHINA.

Hong Kong, June 27 .- The past fortnight has been marked by fewer incidents than usual in connection with the hostile proceedings against the rebels in the neighbourhood of Shanghai. The weather is no longer favourable for the excursions of troops, but though it were, there is reason to suppose that all operations at a distance of more than ten miles from Shanghai would be discontinued in the mean time. The large rebel force said to be advancing under Chung Wang has shown no signs of existence as yet; the only signs of Taeping life near Shanghai being the smoke of burning villages in the adjacent country. Of all the places captured during the campaign just closed, only Sunkeong now remains in the hands of the allies. Tsing-poo was abandoned on the 19th inst., the rebels entering it at one side as we left it at the Frere, who was his private secretary, became other. The mere numerical strength of these China Mail.

people, and the number they can therefore afford to lose while inflicting upon our troops the slightest injury, has rendered them formidable in a sense we cannot afford to overlook. It is also to be recollected that the Taepings possess considerable military practice, and being quite aware that they are no match for us when they are, even ten to one, on a fair field, they will avoid regular battles and content themselves with harassing us on all sides round about. Their immediate re-occupation of the places we have abandoned shows an elasticity that will want, on our part, a prolonged and vigorous campaign or two to destroy. Shanghai is well protected for the present, reinforcements having arrived from the garrison at Tien-tsin. If we are to take the field, and endeavour to break up the power and destroy the prestige of the Taepings, large reinforcements will probably be sent from India. Reports from Nanking say that Wuhu has been taken by the Imperialists, and that strong detachments continue to arrive, to assist in the siege, and, if possible, the cap-ture, of that city. A rumour that the Tien Wang is dead has been vended, but the report is most likely false. One encouraging feature in the present hostilities is the disaffection which is said to prevail among the Taepings themselves, whole bodies of them being described as ready to desert at the first good opportunity. It is strongly to be suspected that, in the rebel camp, much despotism and tyranny are practised, and that the few who adopted the cause at first as one of reformation have had their eyes opened to the grievous mistake they have made.

From Shanghai we regret to hear that the fine steamer Cortes, which lately came from California in thirty-five days, making the shortest passage across the Pacific that has ever been known, was burnt to the water's edge in the harbour there on the 17th instant; how the fire originated is not yet known, but there are not wanting those who affirm that this and other fires which have unaccountably broken out in the settlement are the work of rebel retaliation. The brigadier-general is putting everything in order against an attack on the settlement. A notification has been issued prohibiting the erection of buildings within a hundred and fifty yards of the western line in the front and twenty in the rear; and around each post on the line must be maintained a clear space of fifty yards. Keepers of public-houses are forbidden to sell liquors of any kind to her Majesty's non-commissioned officers or soldiers.

Ningpo is quiet, the ejected rebels having retired to a distance. The contractors for arms are understood to be very angry at the turn matters have taken, and all the more so that the Encounter and Ringdove are keeping vigilant watch for fresh arrivals.

From Pekin we hear that forces are being despatched to strike a blow at Nanking. The Governor of Macao is at a short distance from the capital, waiting to be invited thither to make terms of a treaty between Portugal and China. All is quiet in the city.

At Tien-Tsin trade has been impeded by reports of bandits (northern rebels) having captured two cities and interrupted communication along the main roads.

From the other northern ports we have no intelligence, from which it may be inferred that all is quiet.

In Japan some change is to take place in the regulations for the deportment of Englishmen, the last not having been made to work.

From Amoy and Fuhchau we hear no particular

The latest news from Saigon is to the effect that peace is likely to be made between the Emperors of France and Cochin China. The latter is expected to give up six provinces in lower Cochin China to France, and to pay four millions of dollars as indemnity money, three of which will be given to the Spaniards in consideration of their getting no territory. The French, on their part, agree to drill native troops for the reduction of the rebels in Tonquin; and, if necessary, to aid materially in their subjugation.—Overland

BANK OF BENGAL.

The directors of the Bank of Bengal have issued the following report for the half-year ending June 30th, 1862:-

REPORT.

Since the directors last addressed the proprietors, the contemplated changes in the constitution of the bank, to which reference has been made in previous reports, were carried into effect. On the 1st March last the general treasury was abolished, and the duties hitherto discharged by the sub-treasurer were undertaken by the bank. On the same date the Government paper currency was inaugurated, and the bank's right of issue ceased. Simultaneously with the introduction of these changes the bank's new charter was put in operation, and additional branches were opened at Mirzapore, Benares, Patna, and Dacca.

The scope and importance of these fundamental changes, the amount of compensation conceded to the bank for the suppression of its right of issue, and the remuneration allowed for the discharge of special duties on account of Government, will be gathered from the following summary.

TRANSFER OF GENERAL TREASURY.

Under the deed of agreement executed on the 8th of October last, between Government and the Bank, it is provided :-

1st. That along with the cash balance on hand the whole of the business conducted by the general treasury in respect to the collection, remittance, and payment of money and securities shall be transferred to the bank.

2nd. That the bank shall, under all circumstances during the subsistence of the agreement, a period of five years, be guaranteed in, and have the use of the treasury balance for ordinary banking purposes to the extent of a minimum sum of

3rd. That when the balance exceed the above fixed minimum amount, the bank shall have full power to use such excess for ordinary banking purposes up to a maximum point of seventy lacs.

4th. That the directors, at their own discretion, shall be at liberty either to set aside in cash any surplus beyond seventy lacs, on account of Govern-ment, or invest such surplus in Government Securities, railway debentures bearing the guarantee of Government, or in the discount of acceptances or other claims against Government. That the bank shall be entitled to draw and apply the profits arising on such investments for their own use and benefit; but shall, on the other hand, be at all times answerable for the whole amount of the surplus balance beyond seventy lacs, when required by Govern-

5th. That a yearly payment of Rs. 43,606 (equivalent to the cost of the subordinate establishment of the general treasury), in full of all costs and expenses for the maintenance, by the bank, of the esta-blishment of clerks and servants necessary for carrying on the duties appertaining to the treasury department, shall be allowed by Government.

6th. That the proceedings and business of the bank shall, at stated periods, be patent to, and subject to, the examination and audit of a Government inspector.

The magnitude and diversity of transactions connected with the management of the general treasurv will be apparent, when it is stated that a voluminous statement duly vouched, and containing details of individual payments and receipts of the public revenue classified under numerous heads of account is daily transmitted to the Accountantgeneral, and that the bank is in correspondence and direct business relations with nearly two hundred district treasuries spread over India. In addition to these duties, the bank further undertakes on account of Government, the safe custody and general management of investments belonging to the Administrator-general, the Commissariat, the Civil, Military, and Medical Funds.

MANAGEMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT CURRENCY. Relative to the duties failing to be discharged by the bank under this part of the agreement with Government, it is conditioned:-

1st. That an agency of issue shall be established at the principal office of the bank, and that the bank shall act as agents of the Government in all things to be done, under the Act XIX. of 1861, which establishes the Government currency. That the bank shall meet all demands for silver in exchange for notes, or notes in exchange for silver or in payment of mint certificates, and generally deal with the Government currency as regards registration, reissue, stoppage of lost or stolen notes, as hitherto the bank has done with its own issues. That the bank shall likewise undertake the responsibility that may arise in respect of wrongful payment, through mistake of forged, mutilated, or fraudulently altered notes.

2nd. That the bank shall provide a separate strong room for the reception and safe custody of all currency notes, coin, and bullion belonging to the issue department; and also provide within the bank sufficient and convenient office for the department of issue and the head commissioner of currency.

3rd. That for the duties so to be performed, the bank shall receive a commission of three-fourths per cent. per annum on the daily average of currency notes outstanding and in circulation through the said agency of the bank.

As the bank is the centre of all monetary transactions, not only for the community generally, but for every banking institution in Calcutta, the directors believe that the arrangements made for the management of the currency by the bank are not only acceptable to, but very convenient for the

THE NEW CHARTER

The directors, with the view of adapting the new charter to the altered circumstances in which the bank is now placed, devoted much attention to its various provisions. The more important modifications adopted are-

1st. An increase in the bank's capital to three crores, with power to the directors when and under such conditions as they may see fit, on due notice being given, to make the necessary calls on the pro-

The directors, however, while considering it prudent and expedient to possess the right of making an addition to the bank's existing capital, deem it proper to intimate that they do not anticipate being necessitated to make an early use of the powers conferred by the charter.

2nd. The conversion of shares and quarter shares at the option of the holders into stock, which may be transferred, divided, or held to any amount from Rs. 250 upwards.

3rd. The abrogation of the provisions which fettered the discretion of the directors regarding the amount of advances which might be made to individuals or firms-of the clause limiting the amount to be invested in Government Securities, and generally of all special provisions regarding the management of the bank's ordinary business. The sections which prohibit the making of advances on the bank's own shares, and on heritable or immovable property are, however, retained.

4th. For the use and convenience of the bank's constituents in the agency department, the new charter empowers the bank to draw bills of exchange and grant Letters of Credit payable out of India. Arrangements have accordingly been made with the Bank of England, Messrs. Coutts and Co., and the Bank of Scotland, who are now acting as the bank's correspondents in the United Kingdom. As, however, the requirements of the bank in regard to the purchase of bills of exchange are thus necessarily limited, it is found, practically, that the necessary amount of English bills of exchange is chiefly supplied by one of the bank's own branches. The business of the bank being thus defined, and almost entirely localised, the directors deemed it expedient to extend the sphere of the bank's operations in India.

BRANCHES

With the co-operation of Government, and under conditions nearly similar to those which regulate the business relations which subsist between the Supreme Government and the head office, the directors have already opened five branches, and, on the final deter mination of Government being known, are prepared to occupy the more important marts of trade in the Presidency which are still inadequately provided with banking facilities. On the intention of the directors to open a branch bank at Dacca being made public, negotiations were originated, which ended in the absorption of the Dacca bank, established in 1846. with a capital of four lacs of rupees. The directors, after a careful scrutiny of its affairs, which they found to be successfully conducted, deemed it equitable, and for the interest of the bank to effect a transfer of the business on terms considered mutually advantageous. Under a provisional deed of agreement, the assets of the Dacca bank were gradually liquidated, and the whole business has since been satisfactorily wound up. In exchange for their capital of four lacs, the shareholders of the extinct bank receive of the bank's stock rupees two lacs, 90,909.

Concurrently with the opening up of the country by railways, and by means of a well organised system of branches, the directors anticipated that the difficulties which hitherto have stood in the way of extending a note currency throughout India will be materially obviated. Meanwhile, the directors have to inform the shareholders that the progress of the branches already opened is, on the whole, encouraging and satisfactory. The treasuries at Patna and Dacca have already been delivered over to these branches; those at Mirzapore, Benares, and Rangoon are to follow on 1st August.

Turning to the operations of the bank during the past half-year, the directors have the satisfaction to announce that no bad debts have been sustained.

The net profits on the bank's ordinary business yield a dividend, free of income-tax, at the rate of Rs. 11-11- $5\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. per annum. Adding thereto Rs. 2-4-64, accruing from extraordinary profits, as hereafter detailed, the directors have resolved to declare a dividend at the rate of fourteen per cent. per annum, free of income-tax.

With a view to meet the probable fluctuations in the value of the large sum now held in Government Securities—to give stability to the market value of the bank's stock, and to enable the directors to equalise future dividends, it has been deemed expedient to extend the existing reserve fund.

From the amount of the bank's notes still outstanding, the directors have resolved to write off ten lacs and carry the amount to reserve fund. the sum so disposed of, nearly three lacs have been outstanding since 1837; upwards of three lacs since 1843; and more than two and a-half lacs since 1854. Of the latest issues, dated in 1858, there are The increased still forty-four lacs outstanding. value of the bank's investments during the past six months amounts to rupees four lacs, sixty-seven thousand, five hundred and ninety-six, fifteen annas and eleven pie.

This sum, along with the profits arising on the transfer of the Dacca Bank, have, in like manner, been transferred to reserve fund.

After supplementing the half-year's dividendwriting off the cost price of the bank's notes, and paying the law agents' charge for new charter, deeds of agreement, &c., there remains a balance at credit of reserve fund amounting to rupees sixteen lacs, forty-nine thousand, seven hundred and fifty-six, eleven annas, and one pie.

To adapt the bank's premises to the increased business and the requirements of Government, a considerable addition has been made to the building fund. To equip the bank thoroughly further out-lays must still be made.

By simplifying the system of book-keeping and reorganising the different departments, it will be observed that the directors have hitherto been able to conduct the increased business at a comparatively small addition to the amount of the former establishment, a result which is mainly due to the zeal and exertions of their able secretary and treasurer.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

AN IMPORTANT DESPATCH.

THE outward-bound mail of the 10th July conveyed to Calcutta a document which is likely to prove, so far as India is concerned, a "happy despatch" in a very different sense to what is attached to those words by the Japanese. On the previous day her Majesty's Secretary of State for India finally determined, in concert with the majority of his Council, upon the precise nature of the instructions to be forwarded to the Governor-general respecting the sale of waste lands, the redemption of land revenue, and the extension of the permanent settlement. The subject naturally divides itself into three heads, and first in order may be taken the sale of waste lands in fee simple. Here, on the very threshold, occurs a marked difference of opinion between the home and the local Government. While the latter anticipates only the happiest consequences from creating a "harmony of interests between permanent European settlers and the half-civilised tribes by whom most of the waste districts and the country adjoining them are thinly peopled. the former indulges in gloomy forebodings of the quarrels, affrays and bloodshed that will arise from the intrusion of European strangers on the ancestral lands of the frontier barbarians. The experience derived from the history of our colonial possessions, and notably "the recent unhappy occurrences in New Zealand," are quoted in justification of these misgivings and it is feared that the necessity of affording protection to the Europeans sparsely scattered over the outlying districts may prove a source of weakness rather than of strength to the Indian Government. These fears appear to us to have very little foundation in fact. Possibly the Huzara mountaineers may not be very eligible neighbours, but on the northeastern frontier we look for nothing but good from the introduction of European planters. Of course, every reasonable precaution must be taken there as elsewhere to avoid any violation of existing rights of property; but in the absence of such grounds of offence the European settler will come to be a blessing to the country and a tower of strength to the Government. The next point of difference affects the price to be set upon waste lands. Lord Canning proposed that uncleared land should be valued at five shillings per acre, and land unencumbered with jungle at ten shillings-the only reservation being on account of special tracts required as grazing or forest land, or for the growth of firewood near towns and stations, or as the sites of sanitaria, building lots, &c., &c. To this Sir Charles Wood objects that it is absurd to deal with "a tract enjoying every advantage of soil, climate, and tive but to decree possession." And it may very likely to exist, but if it did, what is more situation, placed, perhaps, close to a navigable river, or in the immediate vicinity of a projected railway station," as if it were "of no more money value than a tract of sandy desert far removed from all means of irrigation, and even from communication with other districts." No doubt it would be very absurd to do so, but it may be safely asserted that the "tract of sandy desert," far from water and roads, is not likely to allure a purchaser at any price, and that when Lord Canning spoke of "uncleared land," he alluded only to land that might be cleared with advantage. At the same time, it is quite possible that five shillings per acre may be extravagantly cheap for uncultivated land in certain districts, and no objection can fairly be urged against the present instructions that all lands shall be put up to auction at a minimum, or upset price, and sold to the highest bidder. But it is obviously unjust that the applicant for a tract of unsurveyed land should be required to deposit the estimated cost of surveying, and then be subjected to the risk of losing the land at the subsequent sale by auction. The injustice is in this: -A is known to be a good judge of tea or cotton land, or perhaps he is a practical geologist, and has a shrewd guess that there are mineral treasures beneath the surface, the working of which may prove highly profitable. Now, the mere fact of A's application will induce B and C, men of less acumen and experience, but sharpsighted speculators, to bid for the same lot, so that A will have actually to pay a fine for being wiser than his neighbours. Besides this, it is at his expense in the first instance that the land is surveyed, and though he will recover his advances, his time, trouble, and calculations will have been thrown away if B or C should happen to outbid him. As it is the Government that benefits by the competition, it is the Government that should incur the expense of the preliminary preparations-especially as it is in a position to protect itself by including the cost of survey in the upset price. Again, as it is to the evident advantage of the Government that all uncultivated land should be reclaimed with as little delay as possible, district after district should be systematically surveyed, and broken up into lots, which might then be offered for sale by public auction. Estates not thus disposed of might afterwards be sold by private negotiation, a register book and office being opened for that purpose. With regard to prior claims of property or occupancy the Home Government is clearly in the right in judging a period of thirty days as too brief to bar the preferring of such claims previous to allotment, and also in objecting to the power assumed by the Executive Government to override by a resolution the existing law. If, said the late Viceroy in Council, a prior claim be substantiated within the space of twelve months after the allotment has been made, "the possession of the party to whom the land has been granted bona fide shall not be disturbed," but the claimant, after justifying his inaction during the thirty days preceding the allotment, "shall be entitled to receive from the Government full compensation for the actual value of his interest in such land." But, suggests the Secretary of State, "the man may decline the compensation and demand the land," and in that case "the Courts would have no alterna-take him years to establish his claim, and if so "the Courts must uphold the existing law, and would refuse to recognise any arbitrary curtailment, by a resolution of the Government, of the time of limitation which that law lays down." In ryotwarry districts there will be greater difficulty in complying with Paragraph 35 of the Resolution of the 17th October, 1861, which declares that "lands for which an assessment has been fixed, but which have been uncultivated for five years or upwards, and which are at the absolute disposal of the Government, may be sold under the same conditions as unassessed waste land, excepting that the price shall be twenty years' purchase of the assessment." "If this provision be acted on," remarks Sir Charles, "there can be little question that claimants without number will spring up, possessing rights hitherto held to be indefeasible under meerassee and other similar tenures in Madras and Bombay, or the jenmi tenure in Malabar, causing a most serious amount of embarrassment to the local Government." It is abundantly evident that extraordinary caution will be requisite in keeping clear of all the pitfalls that beset the disposal of waste and seemingly unowned lands. On the other hand, public rights are superior to private, and the public has a right to insist that no culturable land shall unnecessarily be left uncultivated. No man can be permitted to interfere with the welfare of the community, or to leave waste and unprofitable that which might furnish food, and even affluence, to his fellow creatures. Five years appears an ample limit for leaving land uncultivated—with the exception of grazing and forest lands, which each contribute to the public weal-and we would strongly urge the expediency of making that the extreme period for proving proprietorship. The only other rule contained in the original resolution which is set aside, is that reserving adjoining lands for grantees under certain conditions, and which is abrogated "as inconsistent with the plan of auction sales now ordered."

We arrive, now, at the second head, that relating to the redemption of the land revenue. The Secretary of State admits the improbability of more than a very partial advantage being taken of the permission to redeem, and very truly remarks that "the rate of interest which can be obtained in ordinary transactions so far exceeds that which an investment in the purchase of the land assessment would afford, that few persons would be likely to adopt that course." He might also have added, in a whisper, that the natives have neither capital nor faith in the stability of the British raj sufficient to induce them to do anything of the kind. Whatever may be the real nature of the boon, it is chiefly and almost solely the European settlers who will avail themselves of it. But while acknowledging the very "narrow and partial character" of this measure, the Secretary of State appears to be strangely nervous as to the large amount that may in consequence be "placed at the disposal of the Government, which would find itself in the embarrassing position of having its treasury overflowing with money arising from the realisation of its annual income, which it would have no adequate means of employing or investing." This perplexing "embarras des richesses" is not easy than to employ it in paying off the loans at high interest which absorb so large a portion of the annual revenue? The capitalisation of the money thus received is open to the grave objection that if adverse times should again befal the British Empire, it would be extremely difficult to raise loans without depreciating all existing stock to some extent, while the liquidation of debt would render future monetary operations comparatively easy. But, in truth, so very small a proportion of the land-tax will ever be redeemed, even under a permanent settlement, that it is scarcely worth while to waste much time or thought upon the appropriation of the capital thus acquired by the Government.

This brings us to the consideration of by far the most important question, on the proper solution of which will depend the future prosperity of British India. Although woful and disastrous mistakes were committed in effecting the permanent settlement of Bengal, the opinion has very generally prevailed that immense good would arise from extending that measure, with certain modifications, throughout the greater part of our Eastern empire. There is, we believe, no difference of opinion in any quarter as to the political advantages that would ensue from "the absolute creation of property in the soil which will flow from limitation in perpetuity of the demands of the State on the owners of land," whose sentiments of attachment and loyalty to the Government, on the existence of which the permanency of this great concession will depend, cannot fail, it is said, to be stimulated and confirmed :-

"It is also most desirable," to use the words of the despatch, "that facilities should be given for the gradual growth of a middle class connected with the land, without dispossessing the peasant proprietors and occupiers. It is believed that among the latter may be found many men of great intelligence, public spirit, and social influence, although individually in comparative poverty. To give to the intelligent, the thrifty, and the enterprising the means of improving their condition, by opening to them the opportunity of exercising their qualities can be best accomplished by limiting the public demand on their lands. When such men acquire property, and find themselves in a thriving condition, they are certain to be well affected towards the Government under which they live. It is on the contentment of the agricultural classes, who form the great bulk of the population, that the security of the Government mainly depends. If they are prosperous, any casual outbreak on the part of other classes or bodies of men is much less likely to become an element of danger, and the military force, and its consequent expense, may be regulated accordingly."

This is well put, and disposes in the most satisfactory manner of the political and social advantages to be expected from a permanent personent of the tax upon land. It remains to be seen what effect such a measure may exercise upon the finances of the empire. It is manifest that when once the Government claim has been fixed in perpetuity, no increased revenue can be looked for to meet the ever-increasing expenses of the administration. In the first place it is, of course, indispensable that pains be taken to ascertain that "a full, fair, and equable rent" be imposed on all lands under temporary settlement, before it be accepted in perpetuity. The general diffusion of wealth among the agricultural, and therefore among all classes, that would gradually take place, would more than counterbalance any future loss to the public income through the augmented receipts from customs and taxation, the improved condition of the people will enable them to contribute without a serious murmur to the temporary exigencies of the Government. After a careful consideration of all the bearings of the question her Majesty's Government have wisely resolved to "sanction a permanent settlement of the land revenue throughout India," though the introduction of the measure must be regulated by the peculiar circumstances of each district. For instance, it is only in parts of the North-west Provinces and the Punjab that the land-tax is so fairly and adequately assessed that the present rates could be accepted in permanency. In Oude and Nagpore, and even in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, some time must elapse before a permanent settlement will be practicable. It is however, now only a question of time. The principle is proclaimed, and its realisation will be brought about with all reasonable despatch. Wherever it is practicable to impose the existing rates of assessment in perpetuity, a beginning is at once to be made, and an assurance given to the people of India that they may henceforth devote their entire energies to the improvement of their lands in the full confidence of enjoying the fruits of their perseverance, industry and intelligence, without hindrance or molestation. In conclusion, it is stated that "if any arrangements in regard either to the purchase of waste lands, or the redemption of land revenue, have been actually completed under the provisions of the resolution, they must, so far as is compatible with the law, be scrupulously carried into effect." It must not be supposed, however, that this great measure has been carried without a dissentient voice in the Council of India. Sir Henry Montgomery, Mr. Macnaghten, Mr. Mangles, and Colonel Baker have each penned a Minute in dissent; but on the other hand, Sir John Lawrence in able and eloquent terms supports the views of her Majesty's Secretary of State. In a future issue we may have a few words to say on the subject of each of these Minutes.

THE INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

The following letter appeared in the Times of Sir,—Will you allow me, through your columns, to make public inquiry whether the Fund for the Relief of Sufferers by the East India Mutiny be exhausted, or the committee dissolved?

On my arrival here, in March, 1861, I found a letter from the honorary secretary, asking me to be their agent for this district. In compliance with that request, I undertook to pay the pensions and to report cases for their information.

Last year the correspondence was not very prompt or regular; but this year it has ceased altogether, and the pensions have fallen seven months in arrear.

I have not been able to obtain any acknowledgment of my applications in behalf of the poor widows whose claims are allowed. Neither have I been more successful in securing attention to claims which, in my opiniou, are undeniably valid.—I remain, sir, your most obedient servant, any future loss to the public income through the augmented receipts from customs and excise. And should any evil mischauce for a time cloud the prosperity of the State, and compel recourse to indirect, or even direct,

E. W. MILNER, Chaplain to the Forces. Halifax, N.S., July 24.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE ADMIRAL PROTET .- The Moniteur de la Flotte publishes a biography of Admiral Auguste-Leopold Protet, just killed in action against the Taepings. He was born at St. Servan, and from his infancy he showed a decided taste for the naval profession. At sixteen he was admitted into the naval school of Angoulême. He very quickly passed through the inferior ranks, and at thirty-eight years of age he received the commission of captain in the Royal navy. At this period the English and French Governments had combined their efforts to put an end to the slave trade on the coast of Africa. Captain Protet obtained the command of a ship, and was employed in that service. After cruising three years on the coast of Africa Captain Protet was appointed Governor of Senegal. He remained there from 1850 to 1855, and introduced various improvements in the management of the colony. chastised the native tribes who had committed several acts of treachery. The victories he obtained over them at Bissaga, Podor, and Dialmath, gave him fresh claims to the gratitude of his country. At Dialmath he marched under a tropical sun against a body of natives ten times more numerous than the force under his command and strongly entrenched, and routed them after a battle which lasted some hours. When the war in China was decided on, Captain Protet asked leave to serve in it. His judgment in choosing Cheefoo for the place of landing the French troops contributed very much to their success. For his services on that occasion he was promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral. Ever desirous of contributing to the good understanding which prevailed between the British and French forces in China, he joined the expedition against the Taepings, who threatened to attack Shanghai. He was present at all the engagements from Wong-Kadza to Nan-Jao, always in the midst of his marines, who adored him. Admiral Protet, while directing the attack against the position of the rebels at Nan-Jao on the 17th of May last, was struck by a musket-ball in the breast, and died the same afternoon in the fifty-fourth year of his

ENGLISH OFFICERS IN THE CHINESE SERVICE. -The official correspondence has been published concerning permission to officers and men in her Majesty's service to take employment under the Chinese Government, for the purpose of re-establishing Imperial authority upon the Yang-tze and commercial security upon the inner waters, and for the suppression of piracy. The organisation of such a force having been intrusted to Mr. Lay, the Inspector-general of Chinese Customs, he applied for the sanction of her Majesty's Government. It appeared that there is no longer any ordinance in operation in enjoining neutrality upon the Queen's subjects, and the Admiralty consented to grant leave of absence to any officers whose services may not be required. mission was accordingly given to Captain Sherard Osborne and Mr. Lay to accept service under the Chinese Government; and the Queen's licence was obtained and is to be granted to such other officers as Captain Osborne may select. Mr. Lay's application was also for leave to enlist British subjects to serve in naval and military operations, but this would require an Order in Council. The service will not be considered as service in the Royal navy as regards pay, time, promotion, or pension for wounds.

Specie to the East.—The amount of specie to be sent by the mail steamer Mooltan on Tuesday, for Bombay, is £93,850, of which £5,500 is in gold and 88,355 in silver.

ULWAR.—The People's Friend, a native triglot published in Etawah, describes a durbar lately held by the Mararajah of Ulwar to receive, with due honour, a letter from the Viceroy acknowledging receipt of the valuable articles sent to the International Exhibition, and also to receive a sunnud guaranteeing the right of adoption. The Maharajah of Jhalra Pattum, father in-law to the Maharajah of Ulwar, intends to visit England in the coming cold weather.

ALLEN'S

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The ebject kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The rulways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 6 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £9. 12s. 6d.; or, with sollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, MIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 5s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

THE OPERA. HISTORY () H THE

SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home.

CRITICAL

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."

—Daily News, Jan. 24, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."-Critic, Jan. 25, 1863.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledoman Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

REMARKS.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."-Examiner, Jan. 25, 1863.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner.

Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1863.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatio performances.

A work of unquestionable merit a d of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1863.

HOLLOWAYS PILLS and OINTMENT. OLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—

UNPARALLELED POPULARITY.—The wonderful cures effected by these unequalled remedies in all parts of the world have won for them their present favour. Both Pills and Ointment are composed of ingredients which purify at the same time that they strengthen. No one can deny that health depends upon pure blood and the natural action of the animal organs. Both objects are effected without risk or danger by Holloway's medicaments, which are as innocent as they are potent. Internal disorders and external blemishes succumb to their power. These remedies, so applicable for the relies of the commonest complaints, are no less adequate to deal safely with the most formidable and dangerous diseases which can afflict mankind.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped The production of this book has incently stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Seniety for the Proportion of Cymelly to desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philorythesis heady and suits in kenning business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little underto serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration in the work each a faith. illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithfour hundred illustrations in the work, each a faith-ful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a gua-rantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life. July 17, 1861 Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a drauptisman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies.

That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader.

The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—See, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsefiesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE arrival of the Bombay Mail of the 26th of July adds but little to our previous information as to the state of affairs in Affghanistan. The rumour that Dost Mahomed had sustained a reverse is not, however, confirmed. So far from it, indeed, he is represented as being encamped under the walls of Furrah, and preparing to lay siege to that town.

The Calcutta High Court sat for the first time for "the despatch of business" on the 7th July, under the presidency of Sir Barnes Peacock. In the Madras Presidency ten civilians have been appointed as judges in the new Small Cause Courts upon an annual salary of £1,680. The Governor, Sir William Denison, was in the Neilgherry Hills, gratifying his partiality for being "in the clouds."

Colonel Phayre, Chief Commissioner of the Burmese Provinces, was making preparations for a journey to Ava, in order to exact redress for the murder of Lieut. Halked, one of his assistant magistrates. It is also reported that Lieut. Hughes, Assistant Superintendent of Police at Thyetmyo, though escorted by a small detachment of the 60th Rifles, under the command of a commissioned officer, had been waylaid near the Burmese frontier, and that the whole party had been treacherously cut to

The Legislative Council of Bombay resumed its labours at Poona on the 15th July, the Governor presiding. Several measures of local importance have been announced, first of which is the application of Lord Canning's Resolution of the 17th October, 1861. Another Bill has for its object to give legal effect to the settlement of Inam lands, and a third proposes to extend the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Courts in Bombay and Kurrachee, and to permit litigants by mutual consent to bring cases to any amount into those courts. Something, too, is to be done for the relief of insolvent debtors in the Mofussil, so that the unfortunate ryots shall no longer bear the burden of hereditary debts to the third and fourth generation. Several other measures of an equally practical character are to be brought forward and discussed, and eventually enacted.

The Indian navy has received its sentence of death. The official instructions for the four have been published. Such officers as are not required for immediate employment in India are offered leave of absence and a gratuitous passage to Europe. But what is to become of them after that?

The barbarous tribes on the north-eastern frontier have resumed their system of annoyance. Jynteeahs, Khasiahs, and Garrows, are all in a state of fermentation, and will probably continue to give much trouble until the same course of operations is adopted towards them that has been found so efficacious against the more warlike tribes on the borders of the Punjab. A couple of regiments of Sikhs, supported by a mountaintrain, would soon bring these wild marauders to their senses, and would deter them from again visiting the plains except in a peaceful capacity.

The want of the usual rains is complained of in the Combay Presidency. Much less than the average quantity had fallen, and the temperature is described as oppressively hot. Bombay itself, however, appears to be healthy, but in other parts of India, and especially in the North-West Provinces, cholera has again made its appearance.

ALEXANDRIA, August 19.

The Ceylon, with the heavy portion of the mails, sailed yesterday at 10 A.M. She may be expected at Southampton about the 31st instant.

The Simla brought the mails to Suez, arriving there on the 16th.

The Bengal and Ottawa, with the London mails of the 20th to 26th July, left Aden on the 10th instant (correct date) for Calcutta and the Mauritius respectively.

TRADE BETWEEN INDIA AND GREAT BRITAIN.

The year 1861 was so exceptional that the Board of Trade Returns deserve special study. On the one side there was the American civil war intensified in its evil effects on commerce by the suicidal Morill Tariff, and the almost total collapse of the piece goods trade in India. These reduced the exports of Great Britain to £125,115,000, or £10,776,000 less than in 1860. On the other the cry of Lancashire for Indian cotton, for which a very high price was paid, and a largely increased demand for food, raised the imports into Great Britain to £217,351,000, or £6,822,000 over those of the previous year. A noble trade is that of the British Isles:—

Imports	•••	213,531,000	217,351,000
Total		£346.422.000	342,466,000

Or a decline of only four millions sterling, in spite of the exceptional circumstances of the year. Since treasure is not included in these figures, the trade of Great Britain is six times that for our Eastern Empire, in which the United Kingdom would hardly figure as Chief Commissionership. What an enormous development must be yet reserved for the commerce of India!

Looking first at exports we find that Asia took only 25½ millions in value of the whole, while America took 29, Australia nearly 11, Africa only 64. and Europe 53, or nearly one-half of the Foreign countries took just twice the quantity supplied to British possessions. The figures for Asia are instructive. The names of British possessions are in Italies:-

The shipments of cotton manufactures and yarn to the East Indies and China were £837,000 less than last year, and of copper £320,000 less. To the whole world England exported 36 millions' worth of cotton goods and 94 of yarn, 141 millions of woollen goods and yarn, 14 of beer and ale, 3½ coal, 10 4½ of iron, and nearly half a million's worth of books.

Turning to imports we have some remarkable facts as to cotton. The enhanced prices raised the import from all countries to the extent of £2,896,000, though it was 1,196,000 cwt. less in weight than last year. We put India and America side by side.

Hence India exported to Great Britain goods to the value of £21,959,000, against only £15,107,000 last year. Thus we owe to the cotton crisis a clear gain in 1861 of nearly seven millions sterling in our exports to Great Britain alone. Who has got this profit? We shall not err if we say -certainly not the ryot. We believe the middlemen to have had by far the largest share. Yet till the English merchant and the Indian peasant Alding in the proportions, India will not rise equal & her opportunities. The whole imports

Total from Asia ... £29,186,000 £37,026,000 In 1861 Great Britain took from the rest of the world as the raw material of her manufactures, 39 millions' worth of cotton, 31 of flax, 11 of hemp, $\frac{2}{3}$ rds of jute, 8 of silk, 10 of wool, $4\frac{1}{2}$ of mineral ores and saltpetre, 3 of hides, 3 of indigo, 41 of oil, 31 of tallow, and 10 of timber. She bought 70 millions' worth of food, of which 24 represent wheat and flour, and nearly 11 represent other kinds of corn and grain. She took 24 millions' worth of coffee, 7 of tea, 134 sugar and molasses, and more than 2 of rice. She ate 5 millions' worth of imported butter. She smoked more than 2 millions' worth of tobacco, took more than 3 millions' worth of seeds, and manured her fields with 2 millions' worth of guano. She drank nearly from 4 millions' worth of wine, and 13 of imported spirits. A truly wonderful eater, drinker, and worker is this native country of ours, and it is to be hoped that India will every year have more reason to be satisfied with acting as one of her principal purveyors .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Agra. - The Delhi Gazette hears that "the camp of the Governor-General and Commanderin-Chief are to be formed at Agra early in November. Rumours of military changes are revived. The oft-repeated story of the location at Agra of the head quarters of the Division instead of at Meerut, the withdrawal of the garrison from Moorar, and its location partly at Agra and partly at Seepree. There can be no question that Agra, if not the seat of Civil Government, should be the military head quarters for this part of Upper India. Next to Peshawur and Mooltan it is perhaps the most important post, in a strategical point of view, in all Upper India; and as the railway gradually extends it becomes of more and more importance daily. We shall be glad to see any move made towards concentrating our troops, the importance of which we have often insisted on.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.-From private information which has reached us (Madras Times) by this mail we are enabled to assure the members of the medical service that the amalgamation scheme of the Financial Commission has been thrown overboard, and Colonel Norman's has been sent back to India for more information. Sir Charles Wood is of Colonel Norman's opinion that no inducement should be offered to Indian medical officers of standing to retire. The State would gain nothing by such an arrangement. Inexperienced men in place of experienced, however Royal they may be, and however desirous to pounce upon Oriental loaves and fishes, are not wanted by the home authorities. We fear, therefore, that the pleasant anticipations of speedy retirement on a competence, which not a few of our medical friends were beginning to indulge, will fall at once down to zero. The amalgamation barometer stands, we fear, rather low at present. Indeed, from the treatment which the Staff Corps has experienced, any but the most sanguine might have had great misgivings as to the nature of any further amalgamation. We, therefore, strongly advise those who feel that they have had their day -that India has lost its attractions for them, and they their power of doing full justice to the positions they hold-to turn their faces homeward.

proverbial " one year more," which they have often spoken of in the cases of other men, will come to have its application in their own.

Ishapore.—The Government gunpowder works at Ishapore are now at a stand still, pending the arrival from England of an entire set of new machinery, with all the most recent improvements connected with the manufacture. It was sug-It was suggested to the Government that Lieut.-col. Voyle, of the Bengal Artillery, at present in charge of the Ishapore gunpowder factory, should proceed to England for the purpose of inspecting and studying the new machinery and improvements, and making himself acquainted with their action and effects; but the Government would not act upon the suggestion, considering that there was nothing in the changes to render it necessary to incur the expense of an officer of high rank visiting Europe, on full pay, to qualify him for understanding and inaugurating the working of the coming machinery and appliances. When these shall have been brought into full operation, a great saving of time and expense will be attained in the manufacture of gunpowder; with an improvement in the quality, and increase in the power, of the product.

Sirsa, June 30.-Cholera has broken out at Sirsa and Goorgoan. Active exertions are, however, being made by assistant surgeons Minas and Green to check it. The former has circulated a pamphlet in the vernacular among the people in. structing them as to the measures they should take to avert the disease, but I doubt their following it. The Maharajah of Puttiala has given up the criminal jurisdiction of the Nornol districtunder a little gentle pressure, no doubt. The fact is, that his subjects there have been so unruly lately, plundering travellers and Government mails, that we were obliged to take them in hand ourselves, and endeavour to put a stop to their little games. The weather is very pleasant.

GENERAL SHOWERS .- A Government steamer, and troop boat in tow, started about the 10th July, with the 28th Regiment N.I. on board, for Berhampore, where this corps will remain until the cold season. Having disembarked the troops at Berhampore, the steamer will proceed by the eastern rivers to Assam, where she will be placed at the disposal of General Showers during his tour of inspection in that province. The General was at Gowalpara on the 1st of that month, at which date the I.G.S.N. Co.'s steamer Madras had reached the station, and in her he was to proceed on to Gowhatty and Debroghur, and from the latter station up the Burrampooter by boat. General Showers was expected to have completed his inspection and arrangements for the military occupation of the province so as to be back at Debroghur by the 25th, at which date it was calculated that the Lieut,-governor of Bengal would reach that station also; and after advising with the Lieut .- governor as to the affairs of Assam. and the measures and arrangements for the enforcement and maintenance of order in the province, the General would, if nothing unforeseen should occur to detain him, return at once to the presidency by steamer .- Englishman.

SIMLA.-Wild animals are said to be on the increase in these ranges, although a reward of five rupees is paid for each bear or leopard brought into Simla, and we are surrounded by petty native States, with whose armed retainers and shikaries we do not interfere, further than regards the sale of gunpowder, saltpetre and lead, under the Act of 1857. The bears do much mischief to almost all crops, and the leopards amongst cattle, goats and sheep-the Hymalayan leopard does not attack even a child. Twelve of these animals were taken last year in a rude trap constructed near Jutogh by some men of the late Nusseree Battalion; the creatures are very crafty, and seldom venture into the trap made after any European fashion. Last week a friend of mine living near Simla had a goat carried off by a leopard, which was frightened away by the servants before he had carried his prey to a distance; but the goat was dead, the owner put three grains of strychnine into the wound, and left the animal where it was dropped. Next morning three village curs were stretched dead near it; They will gain only a loss by remaining, and the the poison was again rubbed into the wound, the leopard returned the following night, and paid the 20th October, 1861, the havildar, with the forfeit. He was found dead in the morning, not more than thirty yards from the goat, and must have undergone much agony, the jaw and spine being greatly distorted.

TIPPERAH, June 28 .- The disaffection among the hillmen is having its effect here, more especially as it is kept up and fermented by discontented subjects of this little State. Small, however, as is this State, the Rajah's seat on the guddee is by no means a comfortable one; and, however few and far between his subjects may be, they manage to give him quite enough to do to look after them. Lately, too, he has increased his difficulties by quarrelling with one of his relations about some trifle or other, and that loyal and trusty individual has taken his revenge in a manner which has already caused the Rajah much loss, and is likely to cause him still more. As soon as the offending relation had got away from the angry Rajah he immediately sought refuge among the Garrows, knowing full well that he could easily induce them to make a descent into his relative's territory. With such men as these the fugitive found no difficulty in compassing his ends, and he soon had a large number of men at his command, ready to turn out and murder till further orders. These orders were not long in coming, and the result is, that two of the Rajah's villages have been burned and plundered, it is said by this man's followers. It seems, too, that his success in his intercourse with the Garrows has revived the fugitive's ambition, for I have been told that he is now resolved either to sell his life dearly or dethrone the Rajah and ascend the guddee in his stead. Pleasant neighbours these hillmen are, and what with Garrows, Cossyahs, and Nagas, the Government of India will soon have enough work, and very disagreeable work, on their hands. I only hope, however, that that work will no longer be delayed, and that such an example will be set to these predatory hill tribes, as will at once and for ever prevent the recurrence of such acts of lawlessness as are now almost daily recorded. Within the last few months, these men are getting bolder and bolder; and unless speedily checked will cause the loss of more life and money than the British Government can afford to spare. - Englishman.

MERIAH SACRIFICE .- Two of the petty chieftains in the hill districts of Orissa lately attempted to sacrifice a Meriah at the shrine of Kali, in the hope of averting the small-pox, which has re cently made its appearance in that part of the country. Fortunately, the British authorities got timely notice of their intention, and were able to interfere in time to prevent the sacrifice. The chiefs have been called on by those authorities for an explanation.

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE .- Somewhere about October last year, a havildar and four sepoys of the 6th Bengal military police battalion left the subdivision of Jenidah in charge of four prisoners, who had been sentenced by the joint magistrate of Jenidah to various terms of imprisonment, with and without hard labour; the labour portion of the punishment being commutable by The sepoys and their charge were ordered to proceed to the Sudder station at Jessore. En route, one of the prisoners managed to raise the fine; and accordingly one of the sepoys was detached to accompany the man back to Jenidah, there to undergo his imprisonment without labour. Subsequently, a second prisoner borrowed the amount of his fine from one of the sepoys, as probably his predecessor had done before him, though the evidence does not say so. This little pecuniary transaction between a prisoner and the policeman in charge of him is rather suggestive. The amount of the fine was ten rupees, but the prisoner agreed to repay twelve; that is, ten rupees to pay the fine, and two rupees for the obligation. The havildar, however, did not think proper to weaken his little escort by sending another sepoy back to Jenidah with the second prisoner, but took him on to Jessore, where the two unfortunates, who could not induce the sepoys to advance them any money, were delivered over to the jail authorities. On a prisoner from October to June. This last man direction the difficult and important works con-three sepoys and the fortunate prisoner, set out to return to Jenidah. On their way a "difficulty' occurred with some ryots, during which one ryot was killed, and another was seriously wounded. Of course, the sepoys told one story, and the ryots told another, and the question was the balance of probabilities; and as the narrative of the case and analysis of the evidence has been very clearly drawn up by the joint magistrate of Jessore, we shall have no difficulty in placing the salient points before our readers. The story of the sepoys is as follows :-They left Jessore in charge of their single prisoner in the afternoon of the 20th October aforesaid, having engaged a coolie to carry the usual bundle of sepoy-chattels, consisting of lotas, pots, shoes, and clothes. About dusk they passed over the Hybutpore bridge, and about half a mile beyond it ten or fifteen ryots approached them and demanded possession of the bundle, intimating that it contained treasure. A scuffle ensued, in which, according to the sepoys, they were savagely at tacked by the ryots, who, however, were only armed with sticks. For a considerable time these long-suffering sepoys contented themselves with loading their guns with powder, and blazing harmlessly against those infuriated and dangerous men; but at length a sepoy got knocked over the head with a stick, and the havildar says that, considering their lives were in danger, he told his sepoys to do the best they could do for themselves. Accordingly they "may have used their bayonets in warding off the blows aimed at them, as well as in thrusting at their opponents, but they are unable to say with what result, though they admit that they saw one of the ryots fall down on the road." As for their coolie, they found that when the affray was over, he had vanished with the bundle. The story told by the ryots is a very different one. According to their statement the sepoys had no coolie. They say that four of them, including one man named Shadoo, and another named Derasatoolah, fell in with the sepoys at Hybutpore bridge on the evening in question; that the sepoys impressed the two ryots named, making Shadoo carry the bundle on his head, and Derasatoolah carry a musket on his shoulder: that the two impressed men begged their comrades not to leave them in the hands of the sepoys, but to follow and see what became of them. They then go on to state that some other men came up, and Shadoo begged the sepoys to impress them, and let him go; and, at last, being very tired, and having had nothing to eat all day, he put down the bundle and refused to go any further. A sepoy hit Shadoo with the butt end of his musket, and a clamour arose, and as the ryots advanced the sepoys fired. The sepoys then used their muskets, killed Shadoo on the spot, and grievously wounded Derasatoolah. Now the Sessions Judge at Jessore himself states that the evidence of the sepoys is wholly improbable. Ryots do not attack sepoys for the sake of treasure, nor do they expect to find treasure in an ordinary sepoy gunny bag. But the Sessions Judge argued that the story of the ryots was equally untrue; and that because a tollgatekeeper and his chuprassie at the Hybutpore bridge deposed that the havildar had passed through the gate with a coolie. The evidence was worthless; it was dusk, and the supposed coolie might have been either the prisoner going back to Jenidah, or the unfortunate Shadoo. Moreover, the tollgate-keeper virtually confirmed the evidence of the ryots by stating that the latter, in passing through his gate, had avowed that the sepoys had impressed a relation of theirs, and that they were anxious to release him. The learned Sessions Judge, however, was unable to balance the probabilities. The jury were anxious to acquit the ryots and convict the sepoys; but, of course, as the jury were in the right, the judge thought it expedient to reverse their decision. Accordingly, he convicted both sides of being guilty of affray, accompanied by the culpable homicide of Shadoo, and the wounding of Derasatoolah, and this verdict involved the monstrous anomaly of keeping the unfortunate Derasatoolah must have a fine impression of the value of British rule. He is impressed by the sepoy police, and made to carry a musket; he tries to escape, and is bayonetted: then he is tried for assault, and acquitted by the jury; and, finally, the judge condemns him to fine and imprisonment and hard labour. The Sudder Court have now after many months reversed this decision; at least so far as to say that, "for any irregularity of joint aggression the ryots have been amply punished by their detention, and there is really no good evidence to inculpate them in the homicide or affray, or to justify a sentence of two years' imprisonment."-Englishman.

An Adventurer .- The Delhi Gazette's Cabul correspondent, in one of his letters published some months back, mentioned a report having been sent from Jellalabad that a "Feringhee was there, and orders being solicited as to his disposal. This "Feringhee" has turned up at Peshawur, and proves to be a man named Ford. formerly a teacher in the Khairabad Mission School, from which he was dismissed from some reason or other. With some object in view with which we are not acquainted he crossed over to the Eusufzaiee country, and thence made his way up to Cabul, where he remained for some time in disguise, trying to get service. Failing in this he returned to Jellalabad, and thence went into Kafiristan, a country never before visited by any European, where he remained twelve days, but not being able to speak the language he found he could not get on, although the people were very kind to him, and he accordingly returned to Jellalabad. Here the fact of his being a Christian was discovered, he was abused, and drawn into some brawl, during which he killed one of his assailants. The Governor then got hold of him, and sent him down the Cabul river in a raft to Peshawur. His trip lasted from the 8th January to the end of May, and doubtless an account of his adventures would be very amusing. He is imprisoned at Peshawur for having crossed the frontier.

MEERUT, July 7 .- Our dak bungalow has been the scene of a dismal tragedy. A few days ago a person, travelling under the designation of "Major James, of Lucknow," arrived here on his way down from the hills. He appears to have been labouring under a fit of temporary insanity. He first attempted to put an end to himself by hanging, but was prevented. He afterwards succceded in opening some arteries in his arm, and so lost much blood. In this state he was found soon after, and conveyed at once to the Artillery Hospital. But he was too far gone; he died soon after his arrival there. As there is no Major James of Lucknow, there was some anxiety to discover who the deceased was. A paper found on his person showed that he belonged to the Subordinate Medical Department .- Mofussilite.

MAJOR J. W. CARNEGIE's appeal against Lord Canning's decision has been rejected, the case having been decided against him. Major Carnegie, however, yet hopes to get a hearing.

A HIGH COURT FOR THE NORTH-WEST .- It is considered likely that Letters Patent for a High Court in the North-West will be sent out soon. The creation of this Court will be likely to remove Sir Mordaunt Wells from Calcutta, as in all probability (Sir Charles Jackson being resolved on going to Europe) Sir Mordaunt will be its first Chief Justice.

SHORT PARADES .- His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, taking into consideration the exhausting nature of the climate in the plains at this season of the year, has issued strict orders to all officers commanding British regiments, that short parades are to be the rule until further notice; which, we hope, means till the 1st of October in the Upper Provinces, and the 1st of November in the military stations in Lower Bengal. The Commander-in-Chief's order at present is that the men are not to be under arms for more than half an hour.

THE ALGUADA LIGHTHOUSE.-H.M.'s Indian Navy steamer Prince Arthur will proceed down to the eastward, to go down and do station-duty at the Alguada Reef, and to be at the disposal of Captain A. Fraser, of the Engineers, under whose successfully and rapidly progressing. The Alguada Lighthouse has already attained an elevation of twelve feet above water-mark; and the work, which has been necessarily suspended during the south-west monsoon, will be energetically recommenced as soon as the fine weather sets in again. The granite for the construction of this important lighthouse is quarried, cut, and brought from the island of Kaligouk; and some of the stone has actually been brought up from Singapore, the quantity of labour employed at Kaligouk not having always been able to keep up the supply. When it is considered that the nearest source of the granite supply for the new lighthouse is two hundred miles distant; that the material, when quarried and prepared, has to be transported that distance by sea; that sometimes the material has had to be brought from even a much longer distance; and that, finally, the works have to be entirely suspended during a considerable portion of the year, the progress made in the construction of the Alguada Lighthouse is most creditable to the presiding engineer officer and his co-adjutors. We (Englishman) are assured that, as regards massive solidity of the works, and the promise of impregnable strength against the assailing ocean, nothing is left to be desired or dreaded.

FLAX IN THE PUNJAB .- The Lahore Chronicle states that the prospects of the flax crops of the present season are extremely encouraging in the Punjab, where landed proprietors are beginning to discover that it is a paying article to grow. The average value of an acre of wheat, as com pared with superior flax, being as Rs. 25 or 30 to Rs. 42 or 45, there can be little doubt the cultivation will increase from year to year, and as the soil in many localities is excellently adapted for the growth, it will in time become an article of considerable importance to commerce. Mr. Wightman (the agent for an association at Belfast) has gathered about 200 maunds of flax grown from English seed in the neighbourhood of Sealkote, and the people are taking much interest in his proceedings, and desire to witness the operation of cutting and rippling the material, so that they may be able to learn how to do it themselves in the most approved manner. There is some idea of giving prizes early in September to those who succeed best in cultivating flax in the Sealkote district, and no doubt beneficial results will follow their delivery.

SALT .- With regard to salt, Government has taken measures for closing the manufacture on account of the State, and, as a preparatory measure, instructions have been sent to the principal manufacturing salt agencies of the Government, at Hidgelee, Basalore, Tumlook, Cuttack, and Pooree, to restrict their advances for the manufacture to nine lakhs of maunds, whilst we find that forty lakhs of maunds were produced at those agencies in 1856-57. The best Government salt costs Rs. 98 per hundred maunds, and is far inferior to the Cheshire salt, which may now be imported at Rs. 80. Although no less than sixteen ships laden with salt have arrived from Europe. within the last six days, yet the demon stration by the Government of its determination to bring its salt manufacturing to a close must soon cause the cleaner and purer production commodity imported from Europe to command an enhanced price in the Indian markets.

TAKING THE LAW INTO ONE'S OWN HANDS A short time ago a robbery took place in the compound of a certain lieutenant, but no trace of the thief could be found. On the morning of the 28th June, the lieutenant, without consulting any of the civil authorities, determined to be his own "detective." It appears he suspected his own servants, and therefore commenced operations by lashing the khansamah to a tree, and after having, with his own hands, inflicted more than one hundred strokes with branches cut from date trees, on the man's bare back, he took his seat on a chair under a tree, and deliberately ordered other servants and chuprassees to flog the unfortunate man, until he confessed to the These men proceeded with the work of torture for nearly two hours, but the khansamah | 3rd Battalion .- Delhi Gazette.

nected with the new lighthouse on the Reef are | still declared his innocence. A neighbour hearing the cries of the suffering man, proceeded towards the lieutenant's compound, and finding the man undergoing a most cruel and shameful punishment, he told a jamadar of a Punjab infantry regiment who was looking on that as the punishment was being inflicted in the military cantonment. information should be given to the senior officer. as the man's life was in danger - but finding that no one would give notice, he returned to his house and wrote a hasty note to the Deputy Commissioner mentioning the circumstances. The Deputy Commissioner immediately proceeded to the spot, and found the man still tied to the trunk of a tree, with a chupprassee flogging him. He demanded from the lieutenant an explanation, and then proceeded to the senior military officer and to the Commissioner. After a short time a captain with some Europeans were sent and the lieutenant placed in arrest, and a Court of Enquiry was to be held on the 30th. The khansamah is now an inmate of the Charitable Dispensary, his back and chest are in a sad state, and he has been spitting blood. It was expected that the man would not recover, but through the skill and energy of our Civil Surgeon there is now some hope of his life, though he is by no means out of danger. The natives declared that the lieutenant ordered the khansamah to be flogged to death; and such must have been his intention, as the man was flogged from 7 to 1 past 9 a. m., and must have received at least twenty strokes per minute. Delhi, July 8 .- There is a rumour here, which may or may not prove correct, that Lord Mark Kerr is to be our brigadier in the room of Brigadier Christie, C.B., proceeding to England on sick leave. The bridge of boats over the Jumna was carried away on Sunday by a sudden rise in the river. The flood came down about 4 P.M., and by 9 P.M. the bridge was utterly impassable, some seventeen boats having been swamped and washed away. We have had very little rain during the past week, and the heat is consequently great undtrying; if we do not get some very soon, the cultivators will begin to cry out, as the bunneahs are already doing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROBBERY OF MR. BREEKS .- The leading event of the week in the way of news is the robbery of the Governor's private secretary on his way to the hills. It appears from the accounts of the transaction that have reached Madras, which are numerous and confused, that Mr. Breeks, the private secretary, was preceding his Excellency and party on the way to the Neilgherries, and on the high road between Coimbatore and the hills he was stopped by a party of men. He got out of his bandy and asked them what they wanted, to which they determinedly told him all he had. Mr. Breeks then enquired if they knew who he was. They were perfectly well aware of his identity and his official position, they answered, whereupon Mr. Breeks began to beat them, as he thought he could, away; but they returned the civility with compound interest, applying to his physical theory sticks of considerable dimensions. When they struck he struck also, and retired to his bandy to "deliver," which he accordingly did. It appears he was proprietor of a revolver; but the accounts are contradictory as to whether the said engine of destruction was forgotten to be brought away from Madras, or whether it was in the custody of the Governor's party, or whether it was locked up in his own trunk. At all events it was like the London police, not to be found when it was wanted. After he was relieved of all his available personal property he was allowed to pursue the even tenor of his way. Considerable alarm was created on information being conveyed to the Governor's party and to other intended visitants of the breezy region. According to one account there was a grand halt, and muster and despatches were sent off to Madras for a supply of fire-arms. One member of Government, returning from the hills, stopped at some secure station till defensive weapons were supplied him from Madras, whereupon he resumed his journey and arrived at his destination safe in body, but considerably dilapidated in mind. All the property taken on the occasion has been recovered, excepting a "baby's feeding bottle." The general opinion is that the depredators were a party of Mofussil police, and the report seems likely enough. They are almost capable of anything: not alone being wretchedly inefficient and corrupt, they are believed to be often the actual perpetrators of crimes. The police in the presidency town are bad enough, but they could not hold a candle, to use a vulgar simile, to their Mofussil brethren. The system is at fault to start with, not that under any system could an efficient and respectable force be formed out of the materials at hand. Times of India.

effect some changes in the disposition and organi- | G. W. Nicks, mechanical engineer of the Baroda sation of the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, the following instructions relative to its future strength have been transmitted to the Madras Government. In the first place, the regular Madras troops now at Jaulnah are to be withdrawn from that station, when the season suitable for their moving shall have set in; secondly, a heavy battery of artillery, on the scale laid down last year, is to be formed at Secunderabad, and the field battery of the now Royal Artillery at that station is to be converted into a garrison battery, and attached to the newly formed heavy battery; thirdly, the moveable column at Secunderabad is to be increased in strength, and will in future consist of a bat-tery of field artillery, a squadron of European cavalry, a squadron of native cavalry, a wing of European, and a wing of native infan-These arrangements are to be effected without at all interfering with the strength of the other moveable columns in or near the Deccan, as previously laid down by the Madras Government, which is to take care that the carriage-cattle establishment for the heavy battery, and for the moveable column is always kept up full and efficient, and ready to take the field at a moment's The Public Works Department will be instructed to take measures for the immediate commencement of the construction of a new magazine, on a reduced scale, in the entrenchments at Hydrabad; and the Resident will see to the reduction of the batteries of the Hydrabad Contingent, from six to four guns each: the removal of the head-quarters of the contingent to Aurungabad; and other movements and arrangements considered advisable by the Supreme Government .- Englishman.

Loss of the Ship "Wadiatool Rahimon" NEAR HURNEE.—The Wadiatool Rahimon, of 442 tons, Singapore Register, built in the year 1853, and owned by Hajee Mahomed Abdool Latif, left Bombay on the 1st of July for Singapore, under the command of Captain J. P. Grant. She had on board a general cargo, sixteen horses and twelve native passengers. The vessel having sprung a leak, the commander stood in towards Hurnee, on the Malabar Coast, to get assistance. He was anchored in the bay on or about the 5th, where the swell, which is generally a heavy one at this season of the year, parted her cables. The long boat was immediately put out, and was dashed to pieces. The horses were set free and allowed to swim ashore, while the passengers, with much difficulty, were safely landed. The vessel now lies on the beach at Hurnee a complete wreck, with the total loss of a valuable cargo. The only other European on board, besides the Captain, was the chief officer, Mr. W. Ramsay, who, we are glad to hear, is also safe. Hurnee is a small seaport about sixty miles to the southward of Bombay.

SURAT, July 19 .- The municipal committee have lately directed their attention towards removing the old and useless gates of the Town Hall, which obstruct in a great degree the daily traffic. The Burampore and Dutch Bunder gates are the first to suffer this fate. Major Walker, Dr. Shepherd, and Mr. Woodhouse, executive engineers, have been recently added to the list of the municipal commissioners of the town. Messrs. D. Richmond and R. Gumpertz have proceeded to Deera to commence the surveying operations of that line. The dispute concerning the Mhyee Bridge has assumed rather a serious form. So long as the defects pointed out in its erection exist, the Government Engineer and Mr. Wm. Cole Bayley, the Deputy Engineer of the Company, do not think it advisable to sanction its opening for public traffic. I regret to say that symptoms of cholera have lately appeared in the Parsee quarter; but as a change in the weather is expected from the cloudy and threatening aspect of the sky, I hope the epidemic will soon leave us. With a sad heart I have to chronicle the demise of Mr. room, the party separated.—Bombay Gazette.

Railway Company, on the 16th, at Amroly. During a period of six years the deceased had served the company with exemplary assuidity and honesty, and the practical experience he acquired in the construction of iron viaducts had been amply certified by all the civil engineers under whom he supervised the works from time to time. His thorough efficiency as a mechanic is shown in the construction of the iron bridges at Mendola, Poorna, Jalapore, Belemora, and Bulsar, which he superintended. Mr. Hayman, as assistant engineer, with a staff of surveyors, has been directed by Colonel French to join Mr. Richmond, resident engineer, who is busily engaged in carrying out arrangements for surveying the Deesa line of railway .- Times of India.

CAPTAIN SMALES, Paymaster 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons, has been found guilty on every count of the charges on which he was tried by court-martial at Mhow, and sentenced to be cashiered, which sentence has been confirmed by General Sir Hugh Rose. A letter from Mhow informs us that Mrs. Lilly, the widow of the late Sergeantmajor Lilly, has died after a lingering illness. The whole family have thus been swept away, the two children having died some time ago.

THE MONSOON .- The total fall of rain up to the 25th July amounted as follows:-Byculla, 35 inches; Fort, 36 inches; and Colaba, 32 inches.

KATTYWAR .- Besides dismissing Major Barr from the office of political agent in Kattywar, the Government of Bombay have censured Mr. Coulson, the first assistant, most severely for his late conduct at Joonaghur, and he has been removed from any charge of that State for the present. Government have meant well all through this business; and we believe they will still see justice done, though by the machinations of the Nagurs, and the incompetence of others, delay has been occasioned, and a scandalous injustice has been done. The Naghur Brahmin interest in Kattywar must be broken up, and those who are in its meshes must go to the wall with it. The condition of Kattywur is now a disgrace to the British Government, which affects to have sway in the province, which collects tribute from it, and leaves it-as it is! This must not be any longer, and we fully believe that the Government of Bombay do not intend it to be so any longer.

THE MAHARAJ LIBEL CASE .- A reunion was held on Monday evening, July 14, at the house of the Rev. Dr. John Wilson, which was as novel as it was interesting in its character and object. The great Maharaj libel case will ever be remembered by all in this community; and the defendant, Cursondass Mooljee, will as long be admired for his noble stand in the cause of truth and morality. The réunion on Monday evening consisted of those, both European and native, known to Dr. Wilson as having evinced a lively interest in the case, and a lively satisfaction at its issue. They were invited to meet Cursondass, for the purpose of offering him their warm congratulations on his courage, steadfastness, and success; to meet one another, for the purpose of mutual congratulation on the victory obtained by the truth in this case, and on the hope thus afforded of its speedy triumph in this community. The reunion had the character of a conversazione. After the whole party had taken a social cup of tea together, and ices had been served, Dr. Wilson opened the conversation by a most appropriate and happy address, giving the rationale of the important trial. He was followed by Dr. Bhow Dajee, Sir Alex. Grant, Dr. Murray Mitchell, Rev. C. Harding, Rev. Dhunjeebhai Nowrojee, and Mr. Postonjee Jamsetjee, (the last two speaking in Gujerati) in addresses which, though quite extemporaneous, were full of noble sentiments eloquently expressed, of true sympathy for the defendant and his cause, and of deep interest in the real welfare of the natives of India. These addresses were followed by a touching expression of thankfulness and gratitude from Cursondass Mooljee. A short and appropriate prayer was then offered by Dr. Murray Mitchell. After receiving bouquets, and visiting an abundantly-provided refreshment

The late Lord Canning.

Fort William, July 11, Home Dept.—The Governor-general in Council has received with profound re-gret the intelligence of the decease of Earl Canning, M.'s late Governor-general and Viceroy of India which melancholy event took place in England, on the 17th of June. H. Ex. in Council feels convinced that the whole community of this country will unite with him in deploring the untimely death of this eminent statesman, whose life, although he survived to quit these shores, has but too surely fallen a sacrifice to his devotion to the interest of India. All will fice to his devotion to the interest of India. All will be sensible of the greatness of the loss which India sustained in the removal of one whose ripe knowledge and experience so well fitted him to give valuable counsel and assistance to H. M.'s Government and Parliament, on questions affecting the weltare of this great country. The Governor-general in Council directs that the flag of Fort William shall be lowered to half mast high during this day, and that twenty-one minute guns be fired at sunset from the fort, the last gun to be fired and the flag to be dropped as the sun sets. H. Ex. in Council also directs that the same mark of respect shall be shown at the other stations of Government in India. at the other stations of Government in India.

REPORTED MURDER OF AN OFFICER IN BURMAH. -The Rangoon Times says it is reported that Lieut. Hughes, the Assistant-Superintendent of Police in the Thayetmyo district, together with an officer of H.M.'s 60th Rifles and a small escort, have been waylaid and murdered near the frontier.

COCHIN.-Upwards of ten inches of rain have fallen during the week ending July 12th, and we are suffering from a degree of moisture which only those who have lived through a heavy monsoon on the western coast can well understand. A large quantity of the paddy crop has been lost, and will require to be resown; this will be very hard upon the poor community. We were in hopes the full moon would bring us a change, but as we write it pours down as hard as ever, and not even a bright spot to be seen. We are 83 inches in advance of last year. Certain strange rumours are afloat that a charge of a most serious character is pending against a person of high rank, somewhat allied to the royal family of Travancore. We are unable to give particulars, but it is stated that the party in question is under close surveillance. In the present state of our information we abstain from mentioning names; but we shall closely watch the progress of this case, which, if reports speaks true, is one involving life and death, and present our readers with the facts when they come before us in a more tangible form .- Cochin Courier.

THE MANCHESTER COTTON COMPANY.

THE Manchester Cotton Company have held their first Annual Meeting and seem to be at last fairly awakened to the necessity of prompt and energetic action. Were the exhausting and lengthened struggle between the two great sections of the late United States to terminate to-morrow, it would still be idle to look for large and immediate supplies of cotton from that quarter. There can be no doubt that a very considerable portion of the old crop has been destroyed, or seriously injured. Nor will it be possible on the expiration of hostilities to return at once to the peaceful and profitable pursuits of agricultural industry. And under the most auspicious circumstances the Southern Planters will never again be in a position to grow cotton as cheaply as in former times before the wasteful expenses of a civil war had built up a national debt of enormous dimensions. The Lancashire millowners have gradually come to realise this unhappy state of affairs, and have at length begun to help themselves instead of merely railing at the Government of India, and sighing for a miraculous interposition of Providence. Not that they have entirely ceased to indulge in generalities, or to lay the blame of their own shortcomings upon their neighbours' shoulders, for we find the Directors of the Manchester Cotton Company closing their first Annual Report with a peremptory summons to the Indian Government for that assistance "which it is bound to render by means of the speedy construction of roads and other public works which all commercial communities have a right to expect at the hands of a Government." But since when has it been the duty of "a Government" to make roads "and other public works" to suit the convenience of commercial communities? Of late years, indeed, a pernicious custom of subsidising various companies has crept in, but dear-bought experience has fully shown the fallacy of the principle and the unfairness of the practice. All that any Government can be justly called upon to do is to afford a cheap and impartial dispensation of the laws, and protect person and property from insult and outrage. But probably not even Manchester manufacturers would expect the Board of Works in this country to construct roads, canals, and seaports, to drain marshes or provide artificial irrigation, or to furnish a ready market for the produce of small cultivators, who have not time, capital, or intelligence to find one for themselves. When they speak of selves, but to establish agencies for buying up "a Government," they allude simply to that that which is grown by the natives, who—it of India, because it is also in some degree the is now admitted—understand its cultivation sacrificing "the rights and interests of the terested in the increased prosperity of its Haywood much credit, and proves that he has tenants. But if this argument be followed up to its logical conclusion, wherever the revenue of the land is permanently settled they really exist. The Company have certhe Government will cease to feel any particular interest in the welfare of the people, and may claim exemption from all appeals to its benevolence. There is one trifling consideration, moreover, which our Lancashire friends sedulously contrive to overlook. Neither roads nor canals can be made without money. and money cannot be raised without additional taxation. Had there been no Imperial wars, no selfish intervention on the part of the Home Government, many millions of debt would have been spared to the State, and larger funds consequently applicable to reproductive works. But things being as they are, the Indian Government has been totally incapacitated from fulfilling to the uttermost its duties as a landlord—though it may still be questioned how far it is one of a landlord's obligations to construct roads and public works for "commercial communities." Much in the same spirit, however, is the concluding paragraph of the Directors' Report, which states that "the position of the Company is now such as entitles it to the prompt and fullest support of the trade and of the public in the present crisis." Let the trade support it by all means, if it be to their advantage to do so, but what on earth has the public to do with a private speculation? And in what manner is the public to support the Company? Is it by largely subscribing to its funds, or by giving a higher price for goods manufactured from raw material purchased from the Company, or by abstaining from competition and discouraging its rivals? Let the Company conduct its own affairs in a business-like manner, and there will be no lack of that support which every commercial community is sure to obtain that shows it understands its own interests and takes proper means to advance them. But no good result is ever gained by attacking the Government, or railing at one's neighbours, or appealing to the public. The public is only a customer, and will patronise whosoever sells the best goods at the lowest price, but it is a purely and innately selfish body, and has nothing to do with sympathy.

The deeds of the Manchester Cotton Company are, however, much better than their words. They claim the merit, and it is no slight one, of having prevailed upon the Secretary of State for India to transfer the district of North Canara from the Madras to the Bombay Presidency. It is also chiefly owing to their exertions that the Port of Sedasheghur has risen into being, and is likely to become the principal outlet for the excellent cotton of Dharwar. Nor is this all. They have already sent out two cargoes of machinery, presses, gins, and ploughs, and are prepared to deal direct with the native agriculturist. Warehouses and workshops are being erected on a fine site of land, nineteen acres in extent, fronting the harbour, and in a few months the press-houses will be completed and the machinery fully at work. Very wisely they have resolved not to grow any cotton for them-owner of the land, and therefore directly in-|sufficiently well. This admission does Mr courage and intelligence to dismiss prejudices and foregone conclusions, and to state facts as tainly commenced with spirit, and cannot fail to succeed if they go on as they have begun. They were fortunate in securing the services of such an intelligent observer as Mr. Haywood, and it is to be hoped for their own sake that they will be guided by the local and practical knowledge that gentleman must have gathered in his travels.

OBJECTIONS TO THE "IMPORTANT DESPATCH,"

ALTHOUGH four Members of the India Council dissented from the Secretary of State's despatch authorising, under certain conditions, the permanent settlement of the land revenue, it will suffice to notice Mr. Ross Mangles' able and carefully considered Minute. which may be regarded as a full exposition o the arguments to be advanced against this delicate and hazardous measure. It is clear that the Home Government has been reluctantly compelled to take action in consequence of Lord Canning's resolution of the 17th October, 1861, which appears to have been in some degree founded on a misapprehension of the true purport of Lord Stanley's despatches of the 31st December, 1858, and the 16th March, 1859, which were really intended only to elicit information and collect facts and opinions for his future guidance. Lord Canning, however, was evidently under the impression that they sanctioned his adopting the initiative, and inaugurating a policy from which there can be no recoil, no retrogression, whatever may be the circumstances of the Empire. The danger, indeed, is considerably diminished by Sir Charles Wood's repeated warnings that no settlement must be rendered permanent unless the land is assessed to the full value it is ever likely to attain. And yet there is a greater peril than the future necessity of introducing a direct system of taxation, which the Secretary of State has not now for the first time overlooked, or set at nought. Surely, it is an unwise and hazardous step to destroy the confidence of the natives in the Viceregal Government. It cannot be a safe and sound policy to lower the position of the Governor-general in their eyes, and reduce him to the grade of a mere registrar of orders transmitted from England. If India is to be governed from Westminster, it is an idle and costly mockery to send out a nominal Viceroy, who is actually nothing more than an Assistant-Secretary of State, except that he is made responsible for a policy to which he may be altogether and justly opposed. However potent may be the objections to Lord Canning's Resolution, it would in the end have been less prejudicial to have submitted to its most exceptionable details than thus to raise a doubt as to the power and even honesty of the Viceroy. But the mischief is now done and cannot be remedied. Henceforth the natives will learn to regard the Governor-general as a sort of Master of the Ceremonies rather than as a mighty ruler, and no measure will be regarded as fixed and permanent that does not emanate from the Secretary of State. But to return from this digression.

Mr. Mangles objects, in the first place, to great body of the people." that "the mass even of the agricultural population will not derive the smallest benefit from the proposed abandonment of the rights of the State for the behoof of a favoured class." Only the comparatively small section of the community who are directly responsible to the Government for the land revenue will benefit by a measure that is nearly certain hereafter to necessitate the imposition of new and burdensome taxes. Of course, so long as the ordinary resources of the State are sufficient to meet its expenditure there will be no extra pressure on the non-agricultural classes; but if war or other unexpected emergency arise all classes will be called upon to contribute to the wants of the Treasury. We confess that we do not see the hardship of such a contingency. It is not as if the assessments on land were about to be lowered. On the contrary, it is particularly laid down as a primary condition in Sir Charles Wood's dispatch that no permanent settlement is to be made until the land has been assessed at its full value. If, after that, the annual revenue beinadequate from any exceptional cause to cover the annual expenditure, it is only equitable that all classes alike should be compelled to pay their proportionate quota to meet the exigencies of the State. Taxation is always unpopular, and no statesman will gratuitously levy new imposts, but under peculiar circumstances the Government may be compelled to have recourse to direct taxes for a limited period of time, and this may equally happen with a temporary as with a permanent assessment of the land revenue. Without doubt it is "the inevitable tendency of peace, prosperity, extended commerce, and more and more complicated social relations, to demand for the due discharge of the functions of the State larger and more expensive public establishments." But why should the land alone be expected to meet this ever-increasing expenditure? Why should not the commercial and trading classes be likewise required to pay a certain percentage of their gains for the blessings of peace and personal security? A more valid objection to a permanent settlement is the rapid and steady rise in the price of all kinds of produce owing to the influx of bullion. The wages of labourers and servants, whether private or public, have already increased very considerably, and all orders of men are beginning to share in the general prosperity. In a given number of years, therefore, the value of land will be greatly affected, and that which is a fair rental today will be looked upon as ridiculously small. And a large margin must also be allowed for the effect of canals in increasing the amount of produce, and of railways in equalising prices. But this is, after all, a matter of calculation, and proves nothing more than the propriety of proceeding with exceeding great caution, so as not to throw away the legitimate resources of the State. Mr. Mangles further insists that "the ryot will not pay a cowrie the less because the demand of the State on his landlord has been fixed in perpetuity." Why should he do so? There is no apparent reason why he should pay half a cowrie less; that is entirely a question for the law of supply and demand. If there be more applicants for small holdings than there are holdings to let, the price will inevitably go up; but if too Our Policy in China.—A despatch from Lord be a first charge on the customs' revenu high a rental be asked, or any parti- Russell to Mr. Bruce, dated the 7th of July, ap- Shangbai, after payment of the indemnities.

He is satisfied | cular landed proprietor happen to labour | under an evil reputation as a landlord, it is equally certain that in such cases the demand will be short of the supply till the balance has been again properly adjusted. Mr. Mangles goes on to argue that as the land in India has always been considered the property of the Government, "the wants of the State are supplied really and truly without taxation. As far as this source goes, the people of the country remain untaxed. The wants of Government are supplied without any drain either upon the produce of any man's labour, or the produce of any man's capital." Is this really so? The assertion, indeed, is easily made, but where is the proof of it? The zemindar being assessed a certain sum to the Government, adds that amount, and something more to cover risk and trouble, to the rent he would otherwise claim from sub-tenant-is not that a drain upon the sub-tenant's labour and capital? And, in any case, whatever may be the exigencies of the Government, no extra revenue is to be got from the land, whether the settlement be for thirty or for three hundred years, until the expiration of the covenanted period. We are inclined, however, to agree with Mr. Mangles that the general wealth and prosperity of the country are likely to be far more speedily and effectually promoted "by the entire abolition of all import as well as export duties, and by declaring every port throughout India free, than by settling the land revenue in perpetuity." And further we entirely assent to the proposition that "if the many millions which we are now spending on what are termed reproductive public works will not create a basis for additional land revenue equal in amount to the existing customs duties, we shall assuredly have invested those millions at a wretched rate of interest." This is altogether undeniable, and we fear that the time may come when the Indian Government will regret having been led astray by a plausible and generous sentiment from the cold but practical lessons of political economy. That that day may be far distant must be the wish of every one who takes a patriotic interest in the prosperity of India and in the stability of the British Empire.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We are informed that a telegram has just been received, via Jubal, by the East India and London Shipping Company, announcing the safe arrival of their screw steamer Hydaspes at Calcutta, having made (including detention at Madras) the quickest passage on record. She arrived at Madras in sixty-five days, Saugor Roads in sixty-eight days, and anchored at Calcutta in sixty-nine days after departure from England.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, London, and China have announced a dividend of 5 per cent., free of Income-tax, for the halfyear ending the 30th of June. state the loss to the bank from the recent cpium fraud at Hong Kong will not, they believe, exceed £8,000.

SPECIE TO THE EAST .- The shipments of specie by the outward-bound India and China mail steamer Pera, on the 20th, amounted to £215,621, of which £5,000 in gold was for Alexandria, £20,000 in gold for the Mauritius, £3,243 in gold and £410 in silver for Ceylon, £3,977 in gold and £9,970 in silver for Madras, and £173,021 in silver for China and the Straits.

proving that gentleman's policy in China, adds the following statement of the views of her Majesty's Government :- "If we were to attempt to establish relations with the Taepings, we should find no settled authority among them with which any secure engagements could be contracted, and we should be unable to obtain secure trade and the rich productions of China from a rabble who understand nothing but plunder, and are a scourge to every place of which they obtain possession. On the other hand, if we were to undertake to put down the Tacping rebellion, we should soon be engaged in an extensive war, while the Chinese Government would only look on and leave the burden and expense of it to us. The rational course for us to pursue is to defend our own trade, to protect the treaty ports, and to encourage the Chinese Government to arm a sufficient force of artillery, infantry, and cavalry to overcome the rebels and reduce them to subjection. Should this plan fail, graver questions will arise, upon which it is not at present necessary to enter. You will arrange for the stay of the troops at Shanghai so long as that settlement is menaced by the rebels. Ningpo ought to be recovered by the Imperialists, and when they have sufficient force for the purpose they should undertake vigorous operations against Nauking. The Taepings appear to be a rope of sand, and have no cohesion or permanency. Their number forms their strength, but when the chiefs are defeated the multitude of followers will be dispersed with ORGANISATION OF CHINESE FORCES .- The Further Papers," just published, give some account of the organisation of Imperial troops under the American Colonel Ward. General Sir J. Michel writes :- "Col. Ward has now (March) about 1.500 Imperialist troops under European or American officers. I saw one regiment of 700 or 800 men in line yesterday, and examined them with some minuteness, and can judge pretty well what they are worth. Their arms are good per-cussion firelocks, in very good order. The regiment stood for some time on parade as steady as an indifferent European regiment. They knew some company and some battalion drill, and also our manual and platoon exercises; they charged in line very fairly. They were all clothed in a good serviceable uniform, with turbans, and, I understand, are paid regularly 61 dols. per month. I am of opinion that 1,000 men of this description, and thus drilled, are quite competent to deal with many thousands of rebels, and that an augmentation of this force would enable Col. Ward to clear the country by degrees. I consider this force, if duly supported, the military nucleus of better things." In a despatch addressed to Earl Russell, also in March, Mr. Bruce wrote: - "I have introduced General Staveley to the Prince of Kung, that he might explain his views as to the organisation of a force capable of protecting Tien-tsin the North against the Shan-tung banditti. assured the Prince of the great progress made by the battalion of (Chinese) infantry and battery of artillery now under instruction at Tien-tsin, and explained in detail the organisation of a force of five thousand men. He urged very strongly the necessity of creating a corps of officers competent to command these troops. The Prince thanked him warmly for the assistance he had rendered in drilling the men at Tien-tsin. I venture to suggest most strongly that ten thousand stand of smooth-bore muskets be supplied without delay from India for the arming of these men, either given gratis, or that time be allowed for payment. It is the cheapest and best form in which assistance can be forwarded." In a later despatch, at the end of May, Vice-Admiral Sir J. Hope writes that, as it is desired by her Majesty's Government that the defence of Shanghai should be undertaken by the Imperialists as soon as possible, it is necessary that a considerable body of Chinese troops should be disciplined in the European mode, and that authority has been given to the Brigadier-General (Staveley) to raise and discipline a body of six thousand, the expense to be a first charge on the customs' revenue of an ad interim dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended the 30th of June last, free of Income-tax.

PRESENTATION OF THE VICTORIA CROSS .- The interesting ceremony of presenting an officer with the Victoria Cross, as a reward for distinguished valour, took place on Tuesday, the 19th, at the Royal Hospital, Dublin, on which occasion Capt. Edmund H. Lenon, 67th Regiment, was presented with that much coveted decoration by General Sir George Brown, Commander in-Chief of the Irish forces, for distinguished services in China. All the officers in garrison, except those actually engaged in duty, were assembled to witness the presentation.

CATTLE FOR BOMBAY .- The fine ship Cospatrick, 1,200 tons register, Captain Elmslie, belonging to Messrs. Smith, Fleming and Co., of London, left Gravesend on the 19th, having on board six pure merino rams, one young shorthorned bull, two handsome shorthorned cows five years old, and four fine brood mares belonging to the owners of the vessel, who are anxious to improve as much as possible the native breed in India. Every care and attention have been paid to insure their reaching Bombay in safety.

CALCUTTA and MADRAS.—MONTHLY

STEAM COMMUNICATION BETWEEN LONDON and INDIA, on the 15th of each month, by one of the magnificent feet of Steamers belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company (Lonited). The well-known Chipper Auxiliary Steamership JASON, 2,668 tons. 350-horse power, J.T. HUBST, Commander, now loading in the Victoria (London) Docks, will leave on the 13th of SEPTEMBER, combarking passengers at and leaving Gravesend on the 15th of SEPTEMBER, for CALCUTTA, coaling at the CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, and calling at Madras to land and embark passengers only. This magnificent Ship, built expressly for the Indian trade, has been thoroughly relitted; has first-rate accommodation for passengers, and will carry an experienced Surgeon, also a Stewardeess.

The average passage of the last four steamers has been seventy-four days six hours to Madras, and the last, the Hydaspes, made the voyage in sixty-five days, being the shortest passage on record, it is anticipated that the succeeding vessels will accomplish the voyage in an approximate time. For freight or passage apply to Messers, GRINDIAY and Co., 55, Parliament-street, S.W.; the Broker, Messes ALFRED BRETT and Co., 150, Leadenhall-street, E.C.; or at the Offices of the Company, 9, Mincing-lane, London, E.C., where also applications for appointments as Midshipmen in this service should be made.

MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £3; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their pames, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are had down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in, wide; 5 ft. 4 in, high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2, 12s. 6d.; or, with zoiters and varnished, £3, 3s.

AN INQUIRY into the THEORIES of HISTORY,—CHANCE, LAW, WILL, with Special Reference to the Principles of the Positive Philosophy. 8vo. cloth, 15s.

"This is both an able and an interesting book; for the "This is both an able and an interesting book; for the writer, while an accurate and in some respects an original thinker, has also the command of a clear and animated style. The general scope of the book is the refutation of that naked positivism of which M. Comte is the apostle. . . Of the whole work we can confidently say that it is one to be read by every man interested in these questions. It is a weighty treatise, and an important contribution to philosophy."—The Press, August 16, 1862.

Press, August 16, 1862.

"Written to combat certain opinions which have lately been gaining ground with some classes of thinkers, this treatise is well-timed. With no more boldness than is proper, the author claims that the views of wise men in former ages shall not be disregarded without good reason, and that nothing new and improved shall be accepted simply because of its impudence. His own language throughout is moderate and logical. A Conservative on principle, it is a part of his conservative belief in the steady progress of mankind to seek for the development of new thoughts in every age of human history, and ready to accept all that bears the stamp of truth. In a book full of argument, and occupying just that border-land of metaphysics which is harder to tread than the defined circle of metaphysics itself, it would be easy to discover discrepancies of thought and contradictions of terms; but the faults are few, and the metrits many."—Examiner, Aug. 16, 1863.

A SHORT TRIP in HUNGARY and TRANSYLVANIA in the SPRING of 1862. By Professor D. T. ANSTED. Post 8vo., cloth, 8s. 6d.

"Professor Ansted's descriptions are written with a neatness attesting the accuracy of a scientific observer's eyes. His volume is one both of value and entertainment: a book calculated to turn the thoughts of tourists down the Danube."—Atheneum, Aug. 16, 1862.

"Many a tourist this autumn will have cause to thank Professor Ansted for introducing them to a new and comparatively unknown country. . . . It would be difficult to find a more agreeable companion for a tour than the author of this interesting volume."—The Press, Aug. 9, 1862.

THE SCIENCE of HOME LIFE.

MEMORABLE EVENTS of MODERN HISTORY. By J. G. EDGAR. Author of the "Boybood of Great Men," &c., &c. With Illustrations. Post 8vo., cloth, 6s. 6d.

"A practical writer, with a high sense of his obligations as an instructor of children. Mr. J. G. Edgar never makes a contribution to juvenile literature that does not deserve a certain measure of commendation. We can conscientiously recommend it ("Memorable Events") as a work at the same time entertaining and useful."—Athenseum, March 6, 1862.

time entertaining and useful."—Athenæum, March 6, 1862.

"Mr. Edgar's style is clear, vigorous, simple, and unaffected, and from the first page to the last the reader is instinctively conscious of standing in the presence of a gentleman and a scholar. Though writing for the benefit of the rising generation Mr. Edgar possesses the enviable tallent of attracting at the same time the attention of young men and grey-beards, and of so describing events as to suggest many a topic for grave reflection. His last ('Memorable Events') is certainly not his least work, and not only confirms but enhances his previous reputation as an earnest, agreeable, high-minded, and reliable chronicler of human achievements and human follies and failures."—Spectator.

THE HISTORY of CHESS: from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By Duncan Forbes, LL.D., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

By Duncan Forders, LLD., 8vo., cloth, 15s.

"This volume will be a welcome addition to the library of every lover of the noble game of chess. Our author makes a stout fight for the Hindoos as the inventors of the game, and adduces many cogent proofs in support of his opinion. He shows how the game is played in other countries, how it has been modified both in the names of the pieces and the names of the game by the peculiarities of the country or the national temperament of the inhabitants; and then truces the steps by which it has arrived at its present place of honour in civilised and intellectual Europe. The book is, therefore, full of curious lore that lean on other and higher subjects than chessplaying, for it involves dissertations on ethnology, comparative etymology, the dispersion and settlement of nations, and the manners and customs of different countries, to a degree that would not be at all anticipated by a person who contented himself by reading the title-page. All this information is given, not in any dry, repulsive, or even technical style, but freshly, clearly, and in an animated manner—the style that would naturally be adopted by a gentleman and man of the world."—Herald.

Rev. HEREX CHEESEARD, G. 68. 6d.

"These lectures are learned, eloquent, and earnest, and though they approach the 'limits of religious thought,' they do not transgress those limits; and they present the reader with a comprehensive review, based upon revelation, of the nature, extent, and consequences of moral evil or sin, both in this world and in the world to come."—Civil Service Gazette.

"In the work before us he has digested a complete Elementary Course by aid of his long experience as a teacher and a writer; and he has produced a very useful book. Mr. Young has not allowed his own tastes to rule the distribution, but has adjusted his parts with the skill of a veteran."—Athenæum, March 9, 1861.

"Mr. Young is well-known as the author of undoubtedly the best treatise on the 'Theory of Equations' which is to be found in our language—a treatise distinguished by originality of thought, great learning, and admirable perspicuity. Nor are these qualities wanting in the work which we are reviewing.

Considering the difficulty of the task which Mr. Young has undertaken to discharge, and the extent of useful knowledge he has succeeded in imparting accurately and lacidly in so small a compass, we can without hesitation comend this work to the public as by far the best elementary course of mathematics in our language."—The London Review, April 6, 1861.

THE RUSSIANS AT HOME: Unpolitical Sketches, showing what Newspapers they read; what Theatres they frequent; and how they Eat, Drink, and Enjoy themselves; with other matter relating chiefly to Literature, Music, and to Places of Historical and Religious Interest in and about Moscow. "It is a book that we can sincerely recommend, not only to those who are desirous of abundant and reliable information respecting the social economy of the Russian people, but to those who seek an entertaining volume, that may be perused in any part with both profit and amusement."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

"This is not only one of the most amusing books that we have read for a long time, but also the best and most reliable account of Russian life and manners which has hitherto been given to the public."—Spectator.

"The tone is so genish, the descriptions are so vigorously touched, and the author's perfect acquaintance with his subject is so marked throughout, that his sketches are sure to delight any one into whose hands they may fall."—Literary Gazette.

By the woo, cloth, Rev. H. Ceristas. 2 vols., post 8vo., cloth, 18s.

"As a prose satire, 'The History of the Abderites' yields only in breadth of humour, and pungency of wit, to Dean Swift's immortal travels of Captain Lemuel Gulliver; and of works of that class we know of none in any language that can compare with either of the two."—Observer.

"Here is enjoyment for many a Christmas to come, for many thousands of English boys, and many thousands of English men and women. Unfortunately for the world Pisistratus Caxton departed this life without having made any contribution towards the great history of human folly, save, indeed, by the records of his own. Mr. Christmas has given us something even better in his translation of Wieland's Abderites: and in the simplest, most racy, and vernacular English, has enriched our literature with another character of the family dear to maxim, of the Quintotes, Gullivers', and other human foils of human self-love and vanity. If the addition to our shelves of a book to delight the young and instruct the old, overflowing with wit, fun, drollery inexpressible, wisdom, depth, and knowledge is an achievement deserving of national thanks, we undertake to convey our share to Mr. Christmas, fearing only lest we should not have thanked him sufficiently."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd July is again free from "sensation" news. Neither battle. murder, nor sudden death is recorded, nor even rumours of wars and conspiracies and Mussulman treason. The only thing that goes wrong is the weather, and that only in certain localities where less rain has fallen than is customary at the above date. Sir Charles Wood, indeed, comes in for his usual share of abuse, and this time on account of his differences with Mr. Laing. On the other hand, great satisfaction is expressed in the certainty of Rao Sahib's committal on the charge of being deeply involved in the cruelties perpetrated at Cawnpore in 1857. There seems, indeed, to be no moral or legal doubt of his blood-guiltiness, and, consequently, we cannot affect to feel any sympathy for the wretch in his present hour of grievous tribulation.

Cholera appears to be coquetting with several of the up-country stations, and, therefore, as a measure of precaution, the European troops have in certain cases been moved from their barracks and encamped under canvas. At Peshawur the pest is raging with virulence, but it is probable that Sir Sidney Cotton, who at once hurried down from Murree, has already marched the division away to a healthier locality.

The Money Order system is at last to be introduced into Bengal, where, if it be found to answer, it will gradually ramify all over India. At first no larger sum than ten pounds will be remitted by a single order, but even to that extent the innovation will seriously interfere with the old native "hoondees," hitherto found so useful and so perfectly safe. After a time, and we trust before long, money orders will be transmitted between India and England, and a much desired facility afforded for the payment of small sums.

The annual salaries of the Chief Justices of the High Courts have been fixed at £7,200 per annum, and of the other judges at £5,000, but payable only in India. To all alike is permitted a furlough for one year on £1,000 after seven years' service, but covenanted civilian judges may take the larger furlough and the pay of the service. Sick leave may be granted for six months. Absence of more than a year will cause the office to be vacated. Short leave on private affairs will be allowed as at present. As to pensions, the Chief Justice will receive £1,800 a year after twelve E. Carter, Mr. Hawkes, 1 years' service, of which six have been as MADRAS.—Lieut. Sedley.

Chief Justice, but a Puisne Judge not more than £1,200. If compelled by sickness to retire after seven years' service the judges will receive a pension not exceeding one-half the amount allowed for the full period of service, and this supersedes the existing service rules, except that a Service Judge will receive the Fund pension, reckoning his time as a judge, which is optional. A Service Judge must continue his subscriptions to the Funds. A Chief Justice sent from England will receive £1,000 as equipment and voyage money, and a Puisne, £800. It is optional with the late Supreme Court Judges to prefer these rules to their own.

Another official document which appears in our present issue sets forth how the Duke of Cambridge informed the Secretary of State for India that the terms of the general order, which exclude officers of the late Indian army serving in non-purchase regiments of the line from retirement on half-pay, cannot be modified without disadvantage; but that the privilege of exchange from one regiment to another, subject, in each case, to the approval of her Majesty, on the recommendation of the General Commanding-in-Chief, is equally conceded to all officers whether belonging to purchase or non-purchase corps, on the understanding that they become liable to the regulations of the class of corps to which they at any time belong. H.R.II. also assured Sir C. Wood that the effect which the age and standing of in-coming officers would exercise upon the interests of officers originally belonging to a regiment is always carefully considered before exchanges are sanctioned, and that particular attention will be paid to securing equality between officers desirous of exchanging from purchase to non-purchase corps.

We would likewise invite the attention of our readers to the complimentary Minutes, published elsewhere, in recognition of the distinguished services of Colonel Balfour, C.B.

THE NATIVE ARMY.

It is a natural consequence of the present policy of investing the commanding officers of native regiments with almost irresponsible power over their men that a system of rigorous selection in the appointment of such officers becomes necessary.

In considering the constitution and future of the new Indian srmy, we have, happily, a model for reference which has not only successfully withstood the brunt of a mutiny and a campaign, but which has lately elicited the discerning praises of Sir Hugh Rose. It will be well to ascertain by what means the tentative army of the Punjab has attained that military excellence which has caused the principles of its construction to be employed in the reorganisation of every regiment in the three Presidencies. Much of this efficiency is doubtless attributable to the location of the force from its birth on the sterile frontier of the North-West. Unembarrassed by the numberless petty guards and escorts that demoralise a regiment cantoned in Hindustan, and continually facing a watchful and vindictive enemy, it has learnt on many a dreary post and dashing hill foray the lesson of war. Thus have the rough natures of the tribes composing its regiments been moulded and educated into the brave and enduring soldiers who shared in the glories of the Bridge at Delhi, and leapt, emulous of Highlanders, into the breach in the Kaiser Bagh. But these local advantages would have been lost had not the commanders been men of military qualities above the ordinary stamp. Sir John Lawrence was too sagacious to trust the outposts of India to men whose sole claim to advance ment was private interest or the negative merit of seniority. The annals of the Punjab and the despatches of the mutiny evidence the discerning intellect that raised lieutenants to the command of regiments, and gave to Nicholson, while yet a captain, a brigade. It is such men as Coke and Wilde that caused the triumph of the irregular system, and without such men to form the backbone of the army it will inevitably collapse and dissolve when tried in the fiery crucible of war.

The strict but judicious supervision exercised by Brigadier Chamberlain over the Punjab force permitted none but the thoroughly competent to command; while the unenergetic and idle were inexorably got rid of. It is supervision like this that is urgently required in the Bengal army, and without which it will languish in time of peace and prove but a reed to lean on in time of war. Generally speaking the material of the army is good. The Poorbeah balances the Punjabi, the Affghan the Sikh. But a badly drilled and disciplined scroy force is alike useless and dangerous, and if the axiom be true that the efficiency of a European regiment depends on the abilities of the commanding officer, it is doubly true in the case of a native corps. It is not vexatious and petty interference with commanding officers that we advocate, still less is it the concentration of power in the hands of the Inspecting general. Let the broad principles of the Government and interior economy of a native regiment be clearly defined, and let commanding officers administer the details according to their discretion. We would go so far even as to interdict the reversal of any decree once given by a commanding officer, we would uphold by every means his authority and power. All we ask is that the power be duly regulated, and that if an officer displays an inability to wield justly and fearlessly the authority he possesses, he be pitilessly removed. This is but bare justice to the soldiers over whom he rules. and it is essential to the existence of the army.

It is with these views, and the fear that our remarks are not uncalled for, that we ask the Commander in-Chief to devise some means for a thoroughly practical supervision of our native regiments. With such a system, and with the North-Western frontier thrown open to the army as a school of war, a bright future may yet be in store for the Queen's Army of India.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA'S SCHOOLS.

Slowly, as is usual and almost inevitable in India, the scheme drawn up by the Bishop of Calcutta and approved of by Lord Canning, for establishing cheap schools for Christian children in the Hills and also in the large stations of the Plains, is reaching maturity. Since it has been decided that Jutogh is not to be a convalescent depôt or military station on account of the proximity of Subathoo, Dugshai, and Kussowlie, the old Ghoorka cantonment there has been granted as a site for the Simla School. The erection of the building rests with the Public Works Department of the Punjab. A master is expected from England in the cold weather, so that by March next we hope to see a well-organised school of forty boys temporarily accommodated in the Officers' Bungalow at Jutogh. This school will probably be of a superior character, and it rests with the residents to state their wishes regarding terms. Meanwhile some progress has been made towards establishing schools of an inferior character in the plains. At Allahabad one is opened, and numbers about ninety boys. Another is at work in the fast-increasing railway town of Howrah. The residents subscribe a certain sum, Government will, of course, give a grant-in aid though ten months have passed since the application, and the East Indian Railway ought to erect the building. The active chaplain has from fifty to sixty Christian children who pay each from 2 to 4 rupees a month. Money has been contributed for establishing a school at Rangoon where Government has granted a site and a sum double the amount contributed by the public. A subscription has been begun at Moulmein for a similar purpose. Lastly, a few weeks ago the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal laid the foundation stone in Calcutta of St. James' Boys' School, which is intended to do for the poorer class of Christian boys in the capital what is so admirably accomplished for the other sex by the Calcutta Girls' School.

We observe that Protestant schools, for girls at least, are springing up in Darjeeling, and Mussourie already contains more than one good school for both boys and girls. The bishop's scheme is chiefly intended for a class which these schools cannot reach, the children of the numerous mechanics, tradesmen, and clerks on small salaries whom the railways and the progress of European enterprise in India are causing so largely to increase. We trust he will direct his attention to regimental schools. We know that the military authorities look on all interference with a jealous eye. But to an inspection of the school in each regiment by the bishop no commanding officer could object, and such inspection should be followed by a confidential report to Government. Were chaplains, also, who have tact, to take a personal interest in these schools, they might induce many men to attend them who now are either too indifferent or too ashamed of their ignorance. But these schools should be made more attractive. Nearly a hundred and fifty men of that fine regiment H.M.'s 92nd Highlanders, now in Fort William, are forced daily to meet in a cellar generally devoted to guncarriages. The place is many feet below the level of the outside plain; a tall kilted Celt, if rising up too suddenly, might come seriously into contact with the arch which constitutes the roof; while an open gutter runs sweetly past. In such a hole children first and then grown up men are forced wearily to wade through the mysteries of reading, writing and arithmetic, in an atmosphere which cannot be under 100 deg. at the coolest. Need we wonder that only the laziest men of the regiment come to avoid other duty, that the progress made is unsatisfactory, that the teacher is disheartened? Commanding officers should see that the school has as good accommodation as at least the sergeants, and each should exercise the power conferred on him by the State of forcing every uneducated soldier to attend a place which should be made as attractive as possible.-Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MONEY ORDER SYSTEM .- The Post-office Money Order system, which has been so useful in Eugland, is about to be introduced into Bengal under the superintendence of Mr. H. Sandeman, the Civil Paymaster. Under him is placed Mr. J. C. Ross, late Inspecting Post Master at Cuttack, as "Controller of the Money Order Office." Should the experiment succeed in Ben gal, the system will be extended to other parts of India. The question of fees in proportion to the distance may then be considered: meanwhile the charge will be one for remittances to all parts of the Lower Provinces. No larger sum than Rs. 100 can be sent through the Money Order offices, the object being to afford the public the means of safely and economically transmitting small sums of money. The offices, we presume, will be attached to the various Collectorates, the Collectors being responsible to the Civil Paymaster. Unless the rules under which a Collector may refuse to issue a money order are strictly defined and published, the provision that the limit up to which any one office may issue orders in a day is at the discretion of the Collector, may be abused by a lazy or discourteous official. The full details will be shortly published. The system will not stop here, we trust. Not only should it be extended all over India, but the public should be allowed to remit small sums by money orders to England, such as would not interfere with legitimate banking operations. On an average throughout the year it costs eight shillings and sixpence to remit to England twenty pounds through the banks at sight. This is a tax which is felt by every Englishman in India who has claims on him in England. The colonies enjoy this boon, why not India? Meanwhile the present instalment of reform will render it unnecessary for people in Bengal to pay a larger sum for "hoondees" than the fee will amount to, and will enable all to dispense with the risk of sending half-notes and with the expense of registering letters. -Friend of India.

ARMSTRONG GUNS.—A second instalment of light Armstrong guns has been received at Fort William Arsenal, intended to form a mountain battery for use on the frontier. Each weighs three cwt., which is too heavy for such a purpose, the greatest weight of the guns at present dragged by the hill mules being two cwt. The first set of guns have now been fitted with carriages at Futtyghur, just as a new and superior kind of carriage has been ordered to be henceforth used. They will probably be divided between Meerut and Peshawur.

DESPOTISM IN CASHMERE.—We are glad to see the Chinee correspondent of the Delhi Gazette protesting against the gross oppression to which the Maharajah of Cashmere subjects the people whom we sold to his father. He maintains a monopoly of firewood, salt, sugar, shawls, pushum, and opium, taxing all products which pass in free from our territory, and all exports which pass out from his, thirty per cent. He keeps twelve thousand yaboos or small horses to carry his goods to Ladak. All rice in the Cashmere valley he cleans by forced unpaid labour and sells to his subjects at a profit of fifty per cent. So with the gardens, which he compels the ryots to irrigate, and even the fowls which are sold to

CELTS. - At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society Mr. W. Theobald, junior, of the Geological Survey, read an interesting paper on the celts or stone weapons found in the country extending upwards of 200 miles east of the Tons river, and accumulated at Karoi in Kirwee. They seem to be almost identical with those found in Europe. Belonging to an aboriginal race of which they are now the only relics, the explanation of their occurring in heaps under pecpul trees and in temples, is probably some superstition which in duced men of old time to convey them to the shrines where they are now so abundant. Very few of the celts offer any evidence of their ever having been fixed in handles, and where such has been the case it was probably by a race of far more recent date than the original fabricators, for it is difficult to conceive a form less adapted for such a purpose than the typical celt. Some of the celts the natives of Kirwee have adorned with a daub of red paint as Mahadeo. Major Haughton sent some spears of the stone utensils now used by the Andamanese for purposes of comparison, but most of the stone chips seem to be arrow heads for shooting fish, and intended to be used with the fingers in dividing fish and flesh.

OFFICIAL SCIENCE.—The official supplement to the Gazette publishes a series of papers which show at once the zeal and the scientific ignorance of high officials in British Burmab. It was asserted that a vein of Galena had been discovered in Sownlore Creek, Tenasserim Provinces, and much marching was there to the spot. A Karen brought in some of the precious ore at last, and Dr. Macnamara, the chemical examiner to Government, reports—"The mineral contains no Galena or other ore of lead. The lustrous black constituent of the mineral is black mica."

PROGRESS OF IDEAS .- The Bengali papers seem to be becoming most liberal in their views. The Bhaskur, beseeching wealthy Hindoos to endow professorships in the Calcutta University, tells them they will thus hoist up the flag of imperishable renown, and make it wave everlastingly upon the crest of the Calcutta University. The Sajjana Ranjana, advocating the introduction of the Bible into Government schools, describes it, in remarkable language as coming from a heathen, as "the best and the most excellent of all English books, and there is not its like in the English language. As every joint of the sugar cane from the root to the top is full of sweetness. so every page of the Bible is fraught with the most precious instructions. A portion of that book would yield to you more of sound morality than a thousand other treatises on the same subject. short, if any person studies the English language with a view to gain wisdom, there is not another book which is more worthy of being read than the Bible." The Paridarshak, again, is about to appear a paper as large as English daily journals, with a staff of three editors and two reporters. Much crude life is at work in Bengali society at present, and we look for great results in time.

The Trigonometrical Survey.—In an article on the Trigonometrical Survey in the Himalayas the Hills states that in another year the whole mountain tract of Kashmir, including Thibet and Ladak, will be completely triangulated and topographically surveyed. Altogether, the area already surveyed amounts to about 40,000 square miles, and 80,000 of triangulation. Some of the peaks on the Karakoram range along which runs the boundary between Ladak and Yarkand are very high, the highest being 28,278 feet above the sea. This mountain is called K2, and towers above all the surrounding ranges, being probably the second highest in the world. Thus—

THE AMALGAMATED MEDICAL SERVICES. -Neither the Indian nor the Home authorities are by any means so anxious to get rid of the senior surgeons of the Indian Medical Service as they themselves are to go. Not a month passes without applications for more doctors for Indian sta tions and regiments. Not a year ago the outbreak of cholera in the Punjab rendered it neces sary to scour the country for every available assistant surgeon. It certainly seemed marvellous that at one time the Government of India should desire to banish from its service all its cldest and most experienced medical men, entrusting the care of regiments and civil stations to Royal surgeons whose experience of tropical diseases was necessarily limited. Not only have the Calcutta authorities reported to the India Office that they are anxious to keep every doctor they have got, but they would be happy to get more. In these circumstances it is not wonderful that Colonel Balfour's scheme, which was based on the principle of inducing men above twenty years' service to retire, is not to be carried out. On the contrary, it is proposed, and the question is now being bandled about from India-office to War office and thence to the Horse Guards, to arrange all the Indian and Queen's surgeons in India in four lists, representing the Royal service and the three presidences. The amalgamation of line and local will be carried out in a manner similar to the case of the artillery. Nothing will be compulsory. Promotion will go on in each list as at present, and the Indian service will be allowed gradually to die out. The privileges and pay of each will be exactly alike, the Royal Warrant being really carried into effect as to pay as well as rank. Should an Indian surgeon desire to serve out of India he will be allowed to do so as has been promised in the case of the local artillery. The difficulty of funds will be met by Government taking over the whole, offering to return to men under seventeen years' service the amount of the subscriptions with interest, and to give to men above that period of service an annuity of the value of their subscriptions, if either class prefer this to continuing as at present. Whether, while becoming liable for the deficiences of the ill managed Bengal Fund, Government propose to annex the large surplus of that in Medras, we have not heard. They will, of course, be guided by legal advice. As in the Staff Corps, we fear it is only too true that it is proposed to give consolidated pay instead of head-money and allowances. There is nothing that is not strictly fair in all this. The room for injustice to the local service lies in the principle which will regulate appointments to the higher offices. If that principle is to be selection only, and not some such rule as that according to which divisional commands used to be conferred on the two services we need not say the local surgeons are not likely to be the gainers. But nothing is yet determined. The whole question is "under the consideration' of three such august bodies as the India and War Offices, and the Horse Guards .- Friend of India.

"BETTING ON THE RAIN."-In a case lately tried before Sir M. Wells, the judge commented in severe terms on the fact that large numbers of brahmins come down to Calcutta, commit serious robberies, return to their native villages for a time, and on again appearing in Calcutta their native victims refuse to prosecute them because they are brahmins. In a case of this kind two brahmins were sentenced to seven years' transportation for stealing Rs. 4,000. One of them gained his livelihood "by betting on the rain." His lordship said he had been prompted by curiosity to visit the place himself, and saw the spout put up for the occasion. He was told that thousands and thousands of red-turbaned gentlemen were nightly engaged in betting on the rain.

CHANGE OF DENOMINATION.—The designation of Deputy Assistant Adjutant General of Division is abolished, and all officers now holding such appointments will be at once styled Assistant Adjutants General of Division. Officers of the rank of captain will, equally with field officers, be considered eligible for the appointment of Assistant Adjutant General of Division in the three Presidences.

JHANSI, July 9 .- I have been out in the disict, and could not sooner tell you how a party of dacoits have made a descent on a village called Lullutpore, in this division. They carried off what they could lay hands on, and not satisfied with that, took away a Lumberdar and bolted across the frontier into Scindiah's territory, where they hold him in hope of ransom. The shelter which these independent native states afford to marauders is one of their worst features. It is useless to demand the restoration of a criminal: they always say they will cause every search to be made immediately, while in reality they never trouble themselves in the matter. If the British officers persist in the demand, they profess that every inquiry has been made, and that the criminal cannot be traced. In the present instance, instead of allowing the Lumberdar to be ransomed, Government ought peremptorily to insist on Scindia's giving up not only him, but the whole band of dacoits at once. If these people once see that the territory of a native state affords them no secure shelter they would be much less ready to expose themselves to the chance of punishment .- Englishman.

GRATUITIES.—Government has decided that gratuities to discharged public servants ought not to be given before they have been six months out of employ.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—The Gazette of the 5th July announces the extension of Small Cause Courts to twelve new stations in Bengal, and the introduction of the new constabulary into Hazareebaugh, Lohardugga, Maunbhoom and Singhbhoom, under Maj. Rattray, as Deputy Inspectorgeneral. Most of the new judges are native Sudder Ameens, and we trust they will emulate the success of the native judge in Benares. We congratulate Mr. Beadon on his wise determination to carry out the two great reforms as speedily as circumstances permit.

MERIT REWARDED .- His Excellency the Commander-in Chief has conferred the temporary command of the 3rd Ghoorka Regt. N.I. upon Major Saunders, of the late 41st N.I., until the return from England of Captain Nicholson, of the late 69th N.I., in November next, who will then assume the command. His Excellency offered this command to Captain Nicholson in recognition of his gallant services at Delhi, where was severely wounded, and where heroic brother completed his work, and fell. The brave men of Delhi have not been forgotten or neglected in this country; nor has the promise made to them in 1860 evaporated in the empty laudation of a general order. Major Saunders, who is officiating in the command of the 3rd Ghoorkas, served at the defence of Lucknow. Sir Hugh Rose has also appointed to the second in command of the 19th N.I. Captain Ruggles, of the late 41st N.I., a Lucknow officer, who served at the defence of that place in the mutiny. We believe that the services of this officer would have been sooner rewarded, but that the Commander-in-Chief happened to come across him in one of his inspections last cold season; and not being satisfied with his proficiency in drill, attached him to a Queen's regiment, until he should be found qualified for a position of command. We are glad to see the officers who have service claims for 1857-58 being provided for .- Englishman.

with redoubled vigour; it has been pouring with very little intermission for fifty hours, and is still coming down. All anxieties of the cultivators are now allayed, unless they may arise, as is most likely to be the case, from the fear of too much rain. In the city houses are falling, and great clearances being made by the rushing water; the river, though high, is not strong enough to carry away the bridge of boats again, the boats being all joined by strong chains; and I believe there will not be any more inconvenience to travellers. Talking of wild beasts, wolves are becoming unbearable in the suburbs of Delhi. Almost every night a child is carried off, or reported to be, and grown-up people frightened out of their senses; but whether it is a "dodge" to get themselves armed, deponent sayeth not. The last story of the audacity of these wolves is of an anxious mother who, to make sure that her child would not be carried off, tied it to the charpoy where it slept. In the dead of the night she heard screams, and, on turning to the direction whence they came, saw in the dusky light an enormous wolf (magnified, of course, by the dim light and imagination) tugging away at her child's leg. She, of course, screamed and arcse, upon which the wolf made good his escape, leaving the child so dreadfully lacerated as to give very little hopes of its recovery. Surely some of our Delhi Nimrods who would go miles to spear a hog and course a hare might organise a party to search for and destroy some of these pests nearest to Delhi; it would at least prove their identity, and perhaps result in a good bag. The report of the head quarters and wing of the 1st (Chamberlain's) cavalry going to Meerut is revived. I hope it will not turn out true; far better would it be to get the other wing over from Meerut than to leave this brigade without cavalry at all. I believe Chamberlain's corps (the 1st B. C.) is to keep to its old yellow uniform-all the others will have to change theirs I also hear some rumours about changing their saddles, and giving them more the appearance of riding school proficients; all of which may look very well on parade, but when the time for action comes there will be more empty saddles than full ones .- Englishman.

OUR MODEL POLICE.-Squads of the police of Calcutta, whether parading for, or proceeding upon duty, appear armed with huge bamboo and mat umbrellas. This is as it should be. Appearance is wisely sacrificed to efficiency, for if men are worth nothing when dry, it follows that they must be worth less when moist and limpat least such are, humanly speaking, the probabilities of the case. We are informed, upon reliable authority, that pattens and warm towels are kept ready for use at the various thannahs, and that, in extreme cases (where more than two hundred inches of rain fall in the course of the day), the jemadars in charge have orders to issue mittens and gin cordial to the hardy warriors who serve under them. Our respected magistrate, Mr. Hume, has suggested, such is the rumour, that the constabulary force should be thatched in and thoroughly drained for the rains, each division being put upon wheels when required, and dragged by bullocks to its destination. A man, carefully protected from the rain, would proceed some two hundred yards ahead of the advancing force, sounding a conch, and proclaiming in a loud voice the heroic deeds of the soldiers inside the straw boxes. To prevent the possibility of the matting and policeman being set on fire, at the sound of the conch the inhabitants of Calcutta, at any rate the European portion of it, would immediately put out their fires, and close their doors. For our own part, looking to the absolute necessity of preserving the Calcutta force from becoming more mouldy and worthless than it is, we should suggest that the city itself be thatched in with all convenient despatch. The outlay would be more than met by the saving implied by the fact that our houses would no longer require roofs, and the efficiency of the police on the other hand would be materially increased by the ease with which our indoor life might be scrutinized. Po- and of a Parsee gentleman named Hormusjee

Delhi, July 15.—The rains have recommenced | licemen would be slung at intervals of one hundred yards from the roofs of Calcutta, and thus watch over the interests of private morality as well as protect public property. The eye and majesty of the law would never be off us. It would note the flagrant virtues of a Mackay, and the petty pilferings of a kitmudgar; the grave dispenser of justice borrowing money of his Aryan friend and brother would not escape its eagle glance, and even sacred woman, doing her back hair with somebody elses hair, to make it look thick, would be placed before the bar of public opinion by a Calcutta policeman. These things are done at home, and why should they not be done here? It is perhaps too much to suppose that a Hindoo in India can do what John Thomas of the X Division does in England; the circumstances are not the same, and the parallel therefore fails. In one case you have men serving under men; in the other you have a Hindoo force commanded upon philanthropic principles. Duty versus dry feet. Men dressed for work, men dressed for nothing. Imagine the might of the law armed with two swords and an umbrella! We are becoming orientalised at last, and there is hope for us .- Hurkaru.

> CAPTAIN G. PRICE, at present civil architect and officiating superintending engineer at the Presidency, has been appointed by Government as chief engineer of the Hyderabad subsidiary force. or, in more comprehensive terms, superintending engineer of the public works in the Deccan, and secretary to the resident in the department. The appointment is an excellent one, so far as the public interests are concerned; but those who may be brought into connection with the office of civil architect at the Presidency, in any way, will miss the presence of an accomplished and most obliging officer, whose services have met with the deserved appreciation of the Government.

> COURT FEES .- The attorneys attached to the late Supreme Court have been called upon to pay at once the fees due by them, and the amount of the outstanding fees is said to be upwards of a lakh of rupees; but this sum extends only over a period of a year, and the fees due to the court for several years previous, and which is not likely to be recovered, is said to amount to the large sum of five lakhs. The taxing officer and his establishment have been very busy in bringing up the accounts, and the solicitors equally so in paying up the claims against them.

> SAUGOR.—July 10.—The hill people in this part of the world are as troublesome as usual. At the end of last month a body of about five hundred Bondelas, under Dar Sing and Jajar Sing, descended from the hills near Dowlutpore and plundered a village. They retreated on the approach of some of the Durbar's troops, but the outbreak was so considerable that the British agent has thought it advisable to send a detachment from Saugor to the scene of the disturbance without waiting for the sanction of the Government. I hear, too, that the Bheels and Mukranees have been indulging in another of their chronic outbreaks in Neemunpore (?)-rather a serious one it appears, as they are said to have killed more than fifty British subjects, and to have carried off the principal men of the dis-These Bheels seem to be trict into captivity. incorrigible, and to be incapable of remaining quiet. As fast as they are driven away from one place they make a descent in another, and somehow, although detachments are always sent off on news of an outbreak being received, the marauding party always seems to get off scot free. They are knowing fellows, and judge time, distance, and locality well, assuring themselves before they start that their retreat is secure and not liable to be interrupted. The consequence is, that the troops sent against them generally arrive in time to admire the effects of the Bheel raid.

> THE PSEUDO-NANA.-Hurjee Bromocharjee, the supposed Nana, who died the other day in the Medical College Hospital, at last turns out to be a writer of religious books. A coroner's inquest was held upon his body, in which the evidence of Major Wroughton, formerly of Cawnpore, Bezenjee Mody, a broker, at present living at Sibtallah Lane of this city, and late in the service of the Nana Sahib of Bithoor, was taken. They saw the deceased while in lock-up at the police office, and said that he was not anything like the Nana of Bithoor. Seo Brijodass, the cousin of the deceased, who accompanied him here from Kurrachee, deposed to the following effect :- " I am a native of Dwarkanath, near Rajcote. I am a Goozrattee. I am an Adiss Brahmin. The man, Hurjee Bromacharjee, was my cousin-brother: he was the son of my father's brother. He was an Adiss Brahmin. He was a writer of religious books, and was supported by alms given him; for twenty years he had lived in one place, called Mera Bhaze. He had a Thacoor there, where the Hindoos would worship. I am now speaking the Goozrattee language. Hurjee Bromocharjee would speak the same language. I did not act as his servant, but I shared with him the proceeds obtained from devotees. We were both arrested at Kurrachee Bunda, which is two hundred and fifty coss or five hundred miles from where we live at Dwarksnath. We had gone there seeking alms; this was our custom every year to travel about. We went to Kurrachee by ship, and on our arrival my cousin was arrested by the police, suspected of being the Nana Sahib. He was said to be so on account of a mark under the eye. We told the police what we were, and where we lived; we were not sent to our country for inquiry to be made. We were sent to Bombay prisoners under a sepoy guard."

PESHAWUR, June 14.-A rather serious collision took place here the other day between a party of the 1st Punjab Native Infantry and the Afreedees of Akbar, in which several men were killed on both sides. The affair had no political significance; it was simply a party quarrel; but it was necessary to inflict some punishment on the latter, who, it appears, began the fray, to teach them more respect for British subjects. Acting on this view Sir R. Montgomery has determined to inflict a heavy fine on them. The next thing will be to make them pay it; not an easy matter, from the wild rambling sort of life led by the Afreedees. However, they certainly must be taught somehow that they are not at liberty to draw sword on British troops with impunity.

COLONELS' ALLOWANCES .- A colonel of the late Company's service will, after he shall have been six months promoted to colonel's allowances, or, in other words, to off-reckoning, receive pay, &c., as follows :- Off-reckonings, Rs. 456-5-2; colonel's pay, Rs. 379-9-6; total, Rs. 835-14-8, instead of, as formerly, and as solemnly guaranteed to him by the British Parliament, Rs. 1,521 a month. In Europe the pay of a Company's colonel, in receipt of off-reckonings, will be £1,023. 19s. 113d., the same pecuniary amount as would be receivable in India, as above stated.

THE NEW HIGH COURT.-The Government purpose to erect a large and commodious building for the new High Court, but whether it should be erected on the site of the old Supreme Court or on that of the Sudder remains still to be decided. Instructions have been issued to the civil architect to decide the point.

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC SOCIETY .- The Lieut .-Governor of Bengal has become patron of the Photographic Society in room of Sir Bartle Dr. Mouat, Messrs. A. Bell and Scott Smith have been appointed judges at the approaching exhibition of pictures.

Mr. J. G. MEDLICOTT, late of the Geological Survey, is appointed third inspector of schools in Bengal. As he has not passed the necessary examinations, this appointment of an outsider will be regarded as another blow to the existing educational staff.

THE POLICE OF PEGU.

The annual police report for the Province of Pegu for the year 1861 has been issued by the Inspector-general, Captain Duncan. This is the first report issued under the new police systemviz., that framed by the police commission, and regulated by Act V. of 1861. This system was first introduced into the Province in January, and its organisation completed in August, 1861. The new police force consists of an inspectorgeneral, eight superintendents and assistantsuperintendents, fifteen inspectors, forty-three head constables, 131 sergeants, 2,284 constables, and 182 boatmen—or a total of 2,655 of all grades. The total annual cost of this force is in round numbers five lakhs, being at the rate of eight annas per head on the whole population of the Province. The former police establishment of the Province numbered 4,864. We are not told what their cost was, but considering the large amount expended in the pay of the higher grades under the new system, and remembering that their work was done under the old system by the Civil and Revenue officers who have still to be maintained, we should think that the actual cost of the old and new forces must be nearly the same. The new force, however, does more work than the old one, as it guards the frontier line, and protects gaols and treasures, work which was formerly performed by detachments from the regular regiments of native infantry quartered in the province. Out of the total force of 2,655 men, no less than 1,457, or considerably more than onehalf, are stationed in the two frontier districts of Prome and Tounghoo, a fact significant of the state of affairs in that part of the country, caused by the incursions of bandits from Upper Burmah. We learn from the report that, during the year, no less than thirty-two raids were committed on our territory by bands of robbers from the other side of the frontier. The police cordon along the frontier is in two lines, one close along the frontier, and the other about fourteen miles to the south within the territory-none of the posts consist of less than twenty men, fully armed, and vet out of the thirty-two invasions which occurred during the year, there were only two in which the police fell in with any of the robbers. In each case the police engaged are said to have been greatly outnumbered, but they behaved with great steadiness and courage. The result of the two actions was one policeman killed, three robbers killed, and one captured. By the confession of the captured man the names of the whole of one of the gangs became known, and as the party attacked was the extra Assistant Commissioner at Prome, and the whole affair one of unusual daring on the part of the robbers-they having actually penetrated fifty miles within cur frontier to Prome, the chief town of the district-their names were sent up to the Governor of Menghla, the district on the other side of our frontier, and he recovered the whole of the stolen property and sent in some of the robbers for punishment. Notwithstanding the increase in these " gang robberies" on the frontier, there appears to have been a steady and satisfactory decrease in this crime throughout the other parts of the province; the numbers ascertained to have been committed during the last four years being as follows

1861	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	112

In 1857, the whole of the native population in the province was disarmed, and most effectually so; but as this has been found to render the people of the frontier districts totally unable to do anything in their own defence against the bands of wellarmed trans-frontier bandits. a large number of licenses to carry arms have been granted to the people of the Prome district; and with the best results, as the villagers have, in some instances, since arms were given them, shot down the dacoits themselves

1860 ... 2846 1861 ••• • • • •••

The largest increase appears to have been in the town of Rangoon, where the new police system has been least successful. The Rangoon papers, we observe, are demanding a real civic police, with less of the military element than the present one contains. A considerable force of European constables is the real desideratum. The Chinese form the most troublesome part of the population, and with them the Indian and Burman policemen are totally unable to cope.

Captain Duncan sums up the result of the year 1861, compared with the previous year, as follows :-

1st. A considerable reduction in heinous crimes, except in that of theft.

2nd. A very marked reduction, viz., 36 per cent., in the crime of gang robbery.

3rd. A large decrease in misdemeanors and petty offences.

4th. The proportion of conviction to arrests stands the same, viz., 54 per cent.

5th. Proportion of property recovered to that stolen has fallen from 22 to 20 per cent. Englishman.

COFFEE PLANTERS IN COORG .- We learn from the Cochin Courier that the coffee planters of Coorg have formed themselves into an association. In South India applicants for waste land under Lord Canning's resolution have been told by the authorities that "until the orders of Government, shortly expected, are received, they can do no more than register applications for tracts of land for coffee planting, &c. By the orders of Government applicants are not to be put in possession till certain rules now in contemplation regarding the sale and tenure of such land are formally introduced." The Bengal Board of Revenue have issued a similar notice.

"CAPTAIN RUSSELL."-An Englishman representing himself as Captain Russell, of the Bombay army, but really W. Russell Williams, late a lieutenant who left H.M.'s 95th Foot in disgrace, is being tried at Ootacamund for presenting forged and fraudulent drafts on banks in Bombay and Madras for sums aggregating Rs. 1,200. The Penal Code will deal most severely with

SUPPORT OF VILLAGE SCHOOLS .- At last we have good sease from Madras, and we trust Sir W. Denison will follow it up by action. In some districts of Madras, as Godavery, an educational cess has been levied as a percentage on the landtax, just as in Northern India. By it a hundred village schools are supported with two thousand children. A difficulty has arisen as to the legality of the cess, and on the recommendation of Mr. Arbuthnot, late Director of Public Instruction, & Bill is to be introduced into the Legislative Council on the principle of the Municipal Act, to enable the inhabitants of any town or village, or circle of villages in any district, to assess themselves for the establishment of schools. If the measure succeeds, the Governor in Council says, "It will furnish the means of gradually superseding the present Government schools, and will enable the Government to carry out the policy indicated in the sixty second paragraph of the Honourable Court of Directors' Despatch of July, 1851, of confining its action in educational matters to grants-in-aid and inspection."

THE RANGE OF TANJORE.-Lord Eigin has fully endorsed the recommendation of the Madras Government, that the whole of the property of the late Rajah of Tanjore, with the exception of the two or three jewels which form the Regalia, be restored to the lawful owner. It now only remains that this long protracted matter, thus definitively sanctioned by two Governors-general. and the unanimous Madras Government, should be terminated as speedily as possible without any further delay or opposition being permitted or tolerated from any quarter, however high

THE PONDICHERRY NUISANCE .--We have got into international difficulties with the Emperor of the French-at Pondicherry. The Customs agents at South Arcot levied an export duty on grain destined for consumption in French territory. The Governor protested, and Sir W. Denison apologises, promises repayment and concludes-" I regret that this misapprehension has occurred, and I hope that your Excellency will accept the assurance of the high consideration with which I have the honour to be, &c., Denison."

Introduction of Peruvian Cotton .-Markham, who was sent to Peru for Cinchona seed and plants with the view of introducing them into India, recommends that true Peruvian cotton should be tried in Coimbatore, Madura and Tinnevelly. The real Peruvian cotton from the coast valleys has not yet been tried in India, that now used being procured from the Brazils, where the climate is moist. When in India Mr. Markham was struck by the similarity of the climate of the south to that of Peru. The Incas cultivated cotton long before the Spanish conquest, chiefly in the long strip of coast line between the Andes and the Pacific Ocean, which extends from the river Loa, in 21 degs. 48 mins. S., to the river Tumbez, in 3 degs. 35 mins. S., a distance of 1,620 miles. It consists of a sandy desert, intersected by chains of rocky, barren hills, and traversed by sixty rivers and streams, with as many fertile valleys on their banks. In the one district of Yea the export of cotton, which was 300,000 lbs. in 1840, was 800,000 in 1860. The price has risen from 3 d. to 10d. The advantage of real Peruvian cotton is its long staple, the mean of which is 1.30 inches, while Indian New Orleans is only 1.08, and indigenous 89. Mr. Markham will send to Madras some seed which he expects from Peru.

THE "PUNJAB" STEAMER .- On Saturday, July 19th, a trial trip was made of the new steamer Punjab, to witness which a numerous body of gentlemen was brought together. The Punjab is one of a class of ships building by the River Steamer Company to cargo between this port and the various stations up to Allahabad. She is a fine looking vessel of two hundred feet in length, thirty feet beam, with a depth of hold of ten feet, and when fully loaded drawing four feet of water. Her engines are made by Stephenson, of Newcastle, on Rowan's patent of 1861, and includes high and low pressure cylinders and surface condensers, the novelty of the arrangement being, that the steam is used, condensed, and returned to the boilers as het water, whereby a great saving is made in fuel, and the steam kept to a more equable temperature. During the trip to Fultah and back, no water was used in replenishing the boilers but what was pumped back from the condensers. The nominal horse power is one hundred and ten, and the average speed of thirty to thirty-two revolutions a minute with a pressure of ninety pounds per square inch. The consumption of coal is nine maunds per hour, being considerably lower, we believe, than that of any steamer on the river; so much less coal being required will of course afford more space for the stowage of cargo.

Rangoon, July 15.-Among the first fruits of the local amalgamation here is the extension of the line of electric telegraph from Rangoon to Maulmein via Sittang. This is a measure which has long been much desired and vehemently urged by the mercantile community of Rangoon and Maulmein, but one which never met with any encouragement from the authorities at Maulmein. Major Hopkinson, when in charge, was much opposed to it, ostensibly on the ground of expense. but in reality, no doubt, because he considered that the more Maulmein was isolated from the rest of British Burmah the more chances there were of his maintaining his independent position as a commissioner subordinate to the Imperial Government only. As regards expense the construction of the line will be a mere bagatelle. The Rangoon and Tounghoo line runs via Sittang, and to put Rangoon en rapport with Maulmein nothing is required but the filling of the gap of one hundred miles between the latter place and Sittang. The Superintendent of the Telegraph Department here is advertising for 2,000 posts, which are all that will be required, and the end of this year ought to see the line in working order. The extension of the line to Tavoy and Mergui ought speedily to follow, and then the local Government will have done its duty, and the Imperial Government should lose no time before it connects our southern frontier. either by a land or sea line with Penang and Singapore.-Englishman.

SYRO-ROMANISTS IN TRAVANCORE.—We (Cochin Courier) are at a loss to discover whence our contemporary, the Friend of India, derives his information relative to the progress of the Syrian Church in Travancore. In the summary of news which appeared in his issue of the 19th June he tells his readers that "lately the Syro-Romanists sent a deputation to Mesopotamia, where one of the number was consecrated a bishop, who on his return to Travancore declared for a separation from Rome." We beg to assure the Friend that he is mistaken in more than one instance in his notice of this matter. A deputation did proceed to Mesopotamia some time back from these parts; but it was a partial and by no means a general movement; the object was not to seek a separation from Rome, but to secure certain local advantages and privileges apart from the Latin Church established in these parts. The deputation consisted of four persons, but none of them returned a bishop, nor did these men possess the education, intelligence, or respectability to fit them for such an exalted posi-The bishop who arrived here was a native of Mesopotamia, who was brought under a misapprehension as to the purposes for which he was required; and so far from declaring for a separation from Rome, he left these shores the moment he was recalled by an order of the Pope, and is now far away from Travancore and the 81,000 Syro-Romanist souls over whom, according to the Friend's account, he was to have presided. We could add a little more to the Friend's information on this point. The moment the mandate from the Vatican arrived, and the Syro-Romanist party who had led him into his false position became certain of his intention to depart, the deputation endeavoured to procure his arrest by means of a civil action, but failed. Such was the result of the movement which was to revolutionise the Romish establishments on this coast, and secure independence to the Syrian church.

THE COTTON PORT OF WESTERN INDIA.

While the planters of the Southern States are burning their cotton-while the wail of distress sounds across the sea from Lancashire, and cotton makes another convulsive leap of a penny a pound—and while Iudia fails helplessly to seize the golden opportunity offered by the present, let us look at one great means by which she hopes to rise equal to the future: the creation of a New Orleans or at least a Mobile at the only spot, except Bombay and Goa, on the west coast of India where a ship can lie safely at anchor while the boisterous monsoon rages wildly without. once wrote of cities of the future in India. Beitkul, or Sedashegur, as some call it, promises to be such a city, having advantages with which Beypore, in spite of its railway, cannot compete, and in some respects equalling Bombay as being the natural outlet of the great cotton districts of the South. While Madras slept, as is her wont, an enemy in the shape of Bombay came and stole her best port with the district of which it is the outlet. It was a serious but justifiable theft, for North Canara, with an area of 4.300 square miles, and a population of half a million, has a net annual revenue, after paying all charges, of £122,233. and this district, in spite of all Sir Arthur Cotton's recommendations, the Madras Government would not improve. Geographically as well as politically it now belongs to Bombay, and the report of Colonel Turner and Mr. Hope, the commissioners sent by Sir George Clerk to draw up the plans of the future city and harbour, shows that Bombay is determined to improve its new acquisition. Already the Manchester Cotton Company and some Bombay firms have there purchased land and erected screws and warehouses.

Flowing down from those tall western ghauts which of old our armies scaled more than once to attack Tippoo in his stronghold on the table land of Mysore, is the Kala Nuddee, which as it approaches the sea widens out into a cove, and discharges itself a few miles below the Portuguese territory of Goa. Above the ghants immediately are the finest cotton fields in India, those of Dharwar. By the Unshy, Kyga, and Arbyla Ghauts, Belgaum and the whole of North and East Dharwar can easily send its cotton down to the sea, while it is proposed to attract to the new port all the produce of South Dharwar, North Mysore, and the south-east country, which now pours down by Sircy and the Devamunny Ghaut to the fishing village of Compta, which gives its name to a well-known variety of cotton. Thus all the cotton of Southern India, except in the far eastern districts, will be drained away to Beitkul, instead of trickling down innumerable torrentcourses to nameless ports, being sent in unsafe boats to Bombay, there unshipped, again shipped and finally despatched to England. The amount of cotton imported into Bombay from the western coasting ports in 1860-61 was valued at £4,747,432, while the whole export was only £6,979,164, the difference having reached Bombay by land. But our Bombay friends, by adding these nearly five millions to the imports which again figure as exports, manage to make it appear that their bona fide trade is greater than that of Calcuttaa trick which deceived us two years ago. Malabar and Canara alone imported by sea £763,682 worth of cotton into Bombay in 1860-61. This will give our readers some idea of the importance of a harbour on the south-west coast where ships can load cotton direct for Europe.

The new town, connected with the cotton and coffee fields of the table land above the Ghauts by at least five separate roads, it is proposed to establish at the present village of Beitkul. The village lies in a sheltered spot, and gently slopes to the sea, so that drainage is easy and ventilation unimpeded. Water, though not yet so plentiful as may be required, is yet more abundant at this spot than elsewhere. The Report says " The direction of the streets in the plan has been determined by the prevailing breezes; and a fine grove of trees has not been interfered with in order that it may afford air and recreation to the inhabitants." Wharves are to be made, and a light screw pile jetty eventually to be constructed with cranes, and all the appliances of modern Roads are to connect the chief commerce. wharf with the ghaut lines of road and cotton screws. One is to pursue its way at a sufficient height above the surf, along the hill-side to Alliguddy, along the whole sea frontage of that village, where the Manchester Cotton Company's screws will be located, and on to Konay, where two Bombay firms have bought land. A Custom-house and travellers' bungalow have been planned, and will be built immediately. cherries, a Post-office, Telegraph-office, and Policestation, are marked out. A flagstaff and signaller's house will be erected on the summit of a hill. The commencement of a light house on the Oyster Rocks, three miles off, consisting of a plain column forty feet in height, with suitable accommodation at its base for Lascars and stores, and with the means of ascending through the interior, is ordered, and a light like that on Perrim will revolve to guide the cotton fleets in their approach and departure. Captain Fraser in his own person proved that during the worst monsoon with which the coast has of late been visited the harbour anchorage is safe for ten months of the year, while even for the remaining two months safety may easily be secured at some expense by an external breakwater and a wet dock in the cove. A slight outlay on hurdles will prevent the Kala Nuddee from causing the harbour to silt up, and keep off the sand which the monsoon is apt to heap up to the south of the river. A few dredging machines, already ordered down from Kurrachee, which no longer requires them, are all that is necessary at present. In fact, Beitkul offers much better prospects for its harbour than Kurrachee did. In the current year £50,000 will be spent on the wharves, on the road to the frontier of Dharwar and on four other roads. Besides all this the people of North Canara are rescued from the impoverishing ryotwarree settlement, and will be favoured with the thirty years' settlement and survey of Bombay, a necessary preliminary to permanency in the land-tax.

We need not say that if Beitkul realises the future certainly before it, according to the most moderate estimate, a railway will be necessary; and already the Resident Engineer of the North-West Madras line has gone to England with a plan for forming a Company to lay a line from Beitkul to Bellary. A Bombay paper tells us it will run along the left bank of the Kala Nuddee up to Tellapoor, and from thence via Hooblee and the great centres of the Dharwar cotton trade, viz., Anigeeree, Gudduck and Dumbul, through the southern portion of the Nizam's estates, passing Cowooreor and Copul, crossing the Lungabudra River near Huspett, and the ruins of Humpy and Beejanugger in the Bellary district. It will then continue through the Gadjenoor valley, leaving the large town of Darojee to the and on the 14th May, the day of settlement, the north, and through Koodatunny will reach Bellary. The line now being made from Bellary to Madras will soon be completed.

We are not inclined to underrate the effect on India of as perfect and comparatively speedy a system of internal communication and commercial facilities as England enjoys. But it should pot be forgotten that this will help India to take | English law, but not an Indian, to punish such | plains of the want of a contract law.

of Europe only as waste lands are brought into cultivation. And waste lands will be brought into cultivation only by an increase of English settlers, capital and native labour. And settlers, capital and labour will increase only by a just contract law, an enlightened land policy, and very much larger holdings than the Indian peasantry, or rather their money-lenders, now possess .-Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

POLICE STATISTICS.—We learn from the Pombay Police Report for 1861 that 21,467 persons were brought before the police magistrates for trial, 96 prisoners were convicted by the Supreme Court and 63 acquitted, 15,941 were convicted. fined, imprisoned, and bound over to be of good behaviour, &c., and 5,498 were acquitted by the magistrates; and 26 were convicted, and 17 acquitted before the Court of Petty Sessions, and 6 prisoners were remanded. The proportions of convictions in the Supreme Court were about 60 per cent. In the Police Court the summary convictions by the inegistrates amount to about 73 per cent., and in the Court of Petty Sessions to about 60 per cent. Of the persons convicted 1 was executed, 9 transported, 1,712 imprisoned, and 13,999 were fined. Two hundred and thirty-one persons were bound over to keep the peace and to be of good behaviour, and one hundred and eleven suffered corporal punish. ment. These was an increase in the number of Native Christians, East Indians, and of 279 males and 2 females in the number of Europeans brought up as compared with the present year, due chiefly to cases between masters of ships and The property stolen is valued at Rs. 1,39,409, of which Rs. 47,412 was recovered. There were 15,377 deaths, or 615 more than last year. Under the heading "epidemic" disease there is a decrease of 084 cases. The report concludes with a statement similar to that which we recently made in the case of Calcutta. In 1850 the number of the deaths among all classes of the community was 15,402, and in 1855, 15,128; and considering that the population, both European and Native, is increasing yearly, the rate of mortality among the inhabitants of this island cannot be regarded as very high; the large decrease under the heading "epidemic" seems to be very satisfactory.

Essays on the Vedas .- A Hindoo merchant in Bombay has deposited with Messrs. William Nicol and Co. the sum of Rs. 2,000, for the three best essays in English giving a "Review of the Vedas, with special reference to the light which they cast on the Social and Religious State of the Ancient Indians, and on their Beliefs and Practices as better than those of the Hindoos of later times." The best essay will receive Rs. 1.200, the second Rs. 500, and the third Rs. 300. The successful essays will be published. The judges are Dr. Wilson, Dr. Haug, Dr. Bhow Dhaji, the Rev. Dhanjibai Nouroji, and Rao Saheb Wishwanath, M.B. The competing essays must be sent to Dr. Wilson by 1st August, 1863. The competition is open to everybody. The sum of Rs. 1,200 will hardly attract our best oriental scholars.

TIME BARGAINS .- The Times of India gives details of those gambling transactions in the Bombay cotton market, in time bargains, which are not unknown in the Onium market of Calcutta. "Relying upon the predictions of their astrologers that the price of cotton would fall in April to 160 Rs., the native merchants sold freely to other natives, wiser than themselves, and to European speculators at from 171 Rs. to 196 the candy. The price of real cotton meanwhile steadily rose from 170 to 240 Rs. The astrologers were at fault; sellers found themselves face to face with liabilities of the most formidable order. It was necessary to come to a consent as to what the real price was on that day, and the Punchayet selected to determine it declared it to be 186 Rs., in the face of a market ruling at 235. The audacity of such a proceeding is almost incredible. There is an

the first place in the cotton and produce markets | contracts by making them void, and fining th speculators £500. Two of the members of this Punchayet were the representatives of the Honourable Premabhace Hemabhace to whom Sir George Clerk gave a seat in the Legislative Council, and of the great Jewish firm of David Sassoon and Co.

MOUNT ABOO .- Steps are to be taken immediately for erecting a Lawrence Asylum at Mount Aboo, subject to the same rules as that at Sunawar. This institution will naturally be the resort for the orphan children of the European soldiers of the regiments stationed in the cantonments adjacent to Mount Aboo, and from other paris of the Presidency of Bombay, but it is not intended to interfere in any manner with the Byculla School, founded with similar objects, in the island of Bombay, the climate of which will probably be found more healthy than that of Aboo for children of mixed European and Indian descent. Government will give a monthly grant of Rs. 2,500 for the maintenance of two hundred boys in the Ootacamund Lawrence Asylum. Sir Charles Wood, in a despatch, states that Government give this and other grants " from a regard to the last wishes of Sir Henry Lawrence" as well as on public grounds, but it is hoped this will not interfere with private benevolence.

SAVE US FROM OUR FRIENDS .- According to the Bombay Review, the Nawab of Joonaghur, in Kattywar, who engaged Mr. Connon, a barrister, on a monthly salary of Rs. 4,500 to sid him in his contest with Major Barr, the Political Agent, and the Nagur Brahmins, has fled from his palace, and put himself under the protection of the Political Agent, in order to free himself from the importunities of Mr. Connon and the two old women with whom that gentleman is in league. The Nawab now disclaims all that the barrister has done and written in his behalf, and has stopped the sinews of war. Mr. Connon is said to have seized the carriages and horses which the Nawab had lent him for his use, and refuses to give them up till he gets the balance of his salary. Affairs, however, in Kattywar are only less bad than in Moorshedabad. English barristers should be as scrupulous in their dealings with native courts as if they were under the immediate eye of their Benchers.

THE TRADE OF KURRACHEE Was £2,066,554 in 1861 62, or just half that of British Burmah for the same year. In 1847-48 the trade of Kurrachee was only £442,602. Our Paper states that the cotton trade, almost the growth of a year, has risen in value from Rs. 85,690 in 1861 to Rs. 11,974 in 1862. We observe that during the first week of June 565 men, bringing 704 camels, 4 bullocks, 37 horses, and 289 donkeys laden with grass, wool, glice, &c., arrived in Kurrachee from With the railway and line of steamers Kohistan. With the railway and line of steamers completed and Central Asia quiet, the trade of Kurrachee should double itself in a few years.

SIR G. CLERK'S MILITARY COLONY.-It will be remembered that Sir George Clerk resolved to establish a military colony of supernumerary sopoys on the waste lands in Candeish. Captain P. Dodds reports on the success of this experiment. On the 1st of May the colony numbered three hundred and thirteen souls, with one thousand six hundred and thirty-four acres, one-half of which will be brought under cultivation this season. They are stationed at Ninbkheira and Pat, a few miles from the railway station of Chalisgaum. The colonists are chiefly native pensioners. Of three thousand supernumerary sepoys not one would apply for land. Captain Dodds reports, " Great good feeling has prevailed between the pensioners and the original inhabitants, and I have been asked by some of the neighbouring Patels to allow pensioners to settle in their villages. I was afraid when I came here first that old and distinguished native officers might be inclined to stand too much on their dignity in their intercourse with the village officials, but this, I am glad to say, has not been the case, and I see no reason why those pensioners who may come here next season should not be located in small parties in existing villages." The pensioners have the land free for five years. Captain Dodds com-

My Lord,—Consequent on the recent alteration in the organisation of the Indian artillery and engineers, the number of lieut. colonels and lieuts in those corps has been somewhat altered. It has, therefore, been necessary to re-arrange the number of officers in the abovementioned ranks who are to draw the higher and the lower rate of pay. Bearing in mind the proportions laid down in Lord Stanley's despatch No. 139, dated 21st April, 1859, the following numbers have been fixed, viz.:—

2. Since this despatch was drafted, I have received your military letter, No. 257, dated Oct. 17 last, on this subject. It is only necessary I should state in reply that I approve the decision at which you have arrived, that in calculating the proportion of lieut. colonels and lieutenants of artillery, who are to receive the pay of major and second lieutenant respectively, seconded officers are to be kept out of view, and the proportion reckoned as though the officers seconded were casualties.

Letter, dated March 3, 1862, No. 65.

20. You rightly suppose that my despatch No. 488 of Dec. 31 last, was inaccurately copied. The number of lieutenant colonels in the Bengal artillery to draw the higher rate of pay should have been to draw the higher rate of pay should have been twenty-one and not twelve, and the number of those of the same rank in the Bombay artillery to draw the lower rate of pay should have been three and not eight.

RETIREMENT.

Fort William, July 7.—With reference to G.G.O., No. 399, of April 8, the following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 209, of May 31, is published for general informa-

[No. 209.—Military.]
India Office, Loudon, May 31.

To H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INLIA IN COUNCIL.

My Lord,—With reference to my despatch of Feb. 28, I have to inform you that, in reply to an inquiry addressed to the General C. in C., H.R.H. has stated that the terms of the G.O. forwarded with my despatch above referred to, which exclude officers of the late Indian army serving in non-purchase regiments of the line from retirement on half-psy, cannot, in H.R.H.'s opinion, be modified without disadments of the line from retirement on half-pay, cannot, in H.R.H.'s opinion, be modified without disadvantage; but that the privilege of exchange from one regiment to another, subject, in each case, to the approval of her Majesty, on the recommendation of the General C. in C., is equally conceded to all officers, whether belonging to purchase or non purchase corps, on the understanding that they become liable to the regulations of the class of corps to which they at any time belong.

2. I took occasion to impress upon H.R.H. the importance of adopting every precaution that in cases of exchange there shall be no serious disparity of ago between the officers exchanging, nor any other circumstance calculated to render the arrangement prejudicial to the interests of the Indian officers who may have joined the non-purchase corps. I observed that these officers have been accustomed to look to promotion by rising in their regular regi-ments by seniority among a fixed body of officers, and that, while the permission to exchange into a purchase regiment will, doubtless, be looked upon by many as a boon, opening up to them a wider field of employment, and a better chance of promotion, there were others who might feel their chances of promotion prejudiced by an exchange among their seniors, unless such exchanges were regulated with due regard to their interests and prospects of promotion.

3. In reply, I am assured by H.R.H. that the effect which the age and standing of incoming officers which the age and standing of incoming officers would exercise upon the interests of officers originally belonging to a regiment is always carefully considered before exchanges are sanctioned, and that particular attention will be paid to securing equality between officers desirous of exchanging from purchase to non-purchase corps.—I have, &c.,

Salaries of Judges.

Home Dept., July 14.—No. 3,488.—The following rules, which have been prescribed by the Secretary of State in Council of India, under the provisions of the Acts XXIV. and XXV. Vic., cap. 104, sec. 6, in regard to the salaries, turloughs, retiring pensions, and expenses for equipment and voyage of the chief justice and judges of the high court of judicature for the Bengal division of the presidency of Fort William, are published for general information:—

Regulations by the Seev. of State in Council of Regulations by the Secy. of State in Council of India, under the provisions of XXIV. and XXV. Vic., cap. 104, sec. 6, respecting the salaries, fur loughs, retiring pensions, and (where necessary) expenses for equipment and voyage of the chief justice and puisne judges of the high court of judicature for the Bengal division of the presidency of Fort William.

SALARIES.

The chief justice shall be paid a salary of Company's Rupees 72,000 per annum, each puisne judge a salary of Company's Rupees 50,000 per annum, such salaries being payable only in India.

FURLOUGHS.

A furlough for the period of one year, with an allowance of £1,000, payable by quarterly payments, shall be allowed to the chief justice and to each puisne judge of the high court, after seven years actual service as chief justice, or chief justice and judge, or judge of the said court.

Judges of the high court, selected from the covenanted or uncovenanted service, shall have their furloughs and leaves of absence governed by these rules only so long as they remain judges of the high court.

3. The furlough granted under these rules to a judge selected from the covenanted civil service shall be exclusive of the furlough to which such judge is entitled under the rules applicable to fur-loughs allowed to members of such service.

4. If a judge of the high court selected from the covenanted civil service, who has not taken his fur-lough under the rules applicable to his branch of the service before his appointment to the high court, shall take such furlough within one year after the expiration of his furlough under these rules, the furlough taken by him as judge of the high court shall be reckoned as so much time of his furlough under the rules applicable to the covenanted service, and the amount drawn by him shall be adjusted with reference to such rules by deductions from the allowances payable to him as a civil servant on furlough.

5. A chief justice or puisae judge, during his absence on furlough, shall retain his office, but such furlough shall not be reckoned as actual service in expiration of his furlough under these rules, the fur-

justice or puisne judge to a pension.

6. Leave may be granted by the Governor general in Council to the chief justice, or to any puisne judge of the High Court, under m.c., for a period not exceeding six months; and such chief justice or puisne judge, during his absence, shall retain his office, and shall, on his return and resumption of his duties, receive half his salary for the period of such absence; but if his absence shall exceed six months, his office shall be vacated.

7. Leave of absence under the last preceding clause shall be reckoned as actual service in calculating the period of service entitling the chief justice or puisne judge to a pension.

8. If a chief justice or a puisne judge of the high court shall be absent at any one time for a period exceeding one year his office shall be considered to be vacated.

9. The short leave on private affairs, provided for by sections XII. and XIII. of the existing covenanted civil service leave rules, shall be held applicable to the judges of the high court.

RETIRING PENSIONS.

A chief justice, after an actual service of twelve years as judge of the high court, of which at least six shall have been in the office of chief justice, shall receive a pension not exceeding £1,800 per

2. A puisne judge, on the same terms as to length of service, shall receive a pension not exceeding

3. A chief justice or puisne judge, compelled to retire on medical certificate after 7 years' actual service, shall receive a pension not exceeding one-half the amount of pension allowed for the full period of service.

4. In the event of a judge of the high court, selected from the covenanted or uncovenanted services, receiving a pension under these rules, he will not be entitled to any pension or retiring allowance under the rules applicable to covenanted and uncovenanted servants respectively.

5. When a judge of the high court, selected from the covenanted or uncovenanted branches of the the covenanted or uncovenanted branches of the civil service, is permitted to retire before completing the full period of service entitling him to the pension of a judge of that court, he shall, on retiring, receive such a pension as he would be entitled to under the rules applicable to covenanted and uncovenanted servants respectively, reckoning the period during which he shall have served as judge of a high court towards his time for such pension.

6. Provided, however, that if a judge of the High Court, selected from the covenanted or uncovenanted branches of the civil service, shall be compelled to retire on m.c. after seven years actual service, he shall be allowed the option of taking his pension or retiring allowance either under these rules or under the rules applicable to the service to which he belongs.

7. A judge of the High Court, selected from the covenanted civil service, shall be required to continue his subscriptions to the Civil Annuity and Civil Service Funds.

Expenses of Equipment and Voyage.

For the purpose of defraying the expenses of the equipment and voyage from England, there shall be allowed to a chief justice the sum of £1,000, to a puisne judge £800. But such allowance shall not ing to India.

The foregoing rules will not apply to the judges who have been transferred to the High Court from the Supreme Court, who will be however at liberty the Supreme Court, who will be however at liberty to avail themselves of the privileges as to furlough, if they assent to the periods of service prescribed by the rules, to qualify for the pension of a judge of the High Court. Nor will the rules respecting salaries affect those judges of the late Sudder Court who are at present in receipt of higher allowances than Rs. 50,000 per annum.

By order of the Gov. gen. in Council,

E. C. BAYLEY, Sec. to the Govt. of India.

Superintendent of the Veterinary Establishment.

The Government of India has sanctioned, as an experimental measure, the appointment of a superintendent of the veterinary establishment for this Presidency.

The superintendent will be styled "Principal Vetermary Surgeon." He will receive a consolidated salary of Rs. 500 monthly, with an allowance of Rs. 50 monthly, and travelling allowances as sanctioned for district inspectors of musketry.

Staff Veterinary Surg. Hallen is appointed princi-pal veterinary surgeon in this Presidency. This appointment to date, and have effect from the 1st May, 1862.

The Governor in Council confirms the following rules which have been prepared for the guidance of the vetermary surgeons:

I. The principal veterinary surgeon will be required to make frequent tours of inspection, under instructions from head quarters, of the horses of the artillery, and each regiment of regular and Silladar cavalry, for the purpose of enquiring into the general state of the horses, their dieting, shoeing, and the stable management.

II. It will also be his duty specially to examine and report upon all remounts received during the year, all horses proposed to be cast in the regular branch. and report upon all remounts received during the and condition of the Siliadar horses.

IV. The principal veterinary surgeon during his tours will take an opportunity of examining all Government stallions in the districts, forwarding, for eventual transmission to Government, a report No. 99.—The following temporary arrangements and appointments are confirmed:—
By the C, in C, Indian Navy.—Mr. R. S. Armstrong, mate of the Clyde, to be store accountant of that vessel, from the 1st February to the 20th March, the vessel, from the 1st February to the 20th March, and Mitcheson discharged to sick quarters.

viii. The instructions contained in Queen's regu-latious pages 294, 387, 395 and 396 regarding veteri-nary surgeons and the veterinary department are to be most strictly attended to as far as local circum-stances will allow, and in accordance with any special direction connected therewith which may be received from the superintending veterinary surgeon.

1X. All veterinary surgeons are to bear in mind that in connection with the prevention of disease, a careful inspection daily of the forage, grooming, and shoeing of the horses is essentially necessary.

X. Improper diet, bad grooming, and careless shoeing, are the most frequent causes of all diseases to which the horse is liable.

XI. Veterinary surgeons are to receive veterinary charge of Government Commissariat animals within their districts, and all rules applicable for the better management of such animals as may be deemed necessary are to be recommended for adoption. XII. Whenever a veterinary surgeon deems it necessary to recommend any sudden change in the management or feeding of horses or cattle, a copy of the letter to the local military authorities on the subject is to be at the same time forwarded to the principal veterinary surgeon.

XIII. Veterinary surgeon.

XIII. Veterinary medicines, instruments, and surgical means, are to be drawn by indent upon the medical stores in the division, and in accordance with the Jameson's Code, Section XXXIX., article 23, page 578; but the quarterly returns of veterinary instruments, hitherto sent into the Principal Inspector General Medical Department, are henceforth to be sent to the Principal Veterinary Surgeon by the veterinary or military officer in charge of such instruments.

XIV.—Veterinary surgeons will be most particular in affording instruction to all farriers in their districts, with a view to their becoming intelligent and tricts, with a view to their becoming intelligent and practical men and valuable veterinary assistants. The instruction to consist of lectures, demonstrations, dissections, &c., regarding which a record containing the heads of the subject and dates, when considered, is to be kept.

XV. It will be the duty of veterinary surgeons of districts to afford veterinary aid to all staff officers' chargers, charging the regulated sum for medicines and expenses attendant thereon, and to give advice and expenses attendant thereon, and to give advice gratis whenever called on relative to the troop horses in corps of silladar cavalry.

XVI. The following books are to be kept up by district veterinary surgeons, and Government sanctions their provision on indent upon the superinten-dent of the Bombay Education Society's Press, to be furnished through the principal veterinary surgeon, and charged for in a contingent bill:

Register of sick and lame horses.

Record of Treatment. Guard book.

Letter book.

Blank returns, as laid down in Appendices Nos. 6 and 6a, 7, 8, 9, and 12 of "Regulations for the Performance of Veterinary Duties," a copy of which will also be furnished to each veterinary surgeon.

From the Hon. E. Drummond, Officiating Secretary to Government of India, Financial Department, to Colonel G. Balfour, C.B., Chief of the Military Finance Department, No. 2,539, dated April 19, 1862.

Sir,-Referring to your letter No. 8,129, dated 11th inst., the application contained in which has been disposed of in G.G.O. No. 419, dated 14th inst., it gives me much pleasure to communicate to you, by direction of his Excellency the Governor General in Council, the substance of a minute written by the Right Hon. Earl Canning before laying down the Government of India, recording his very strong sense of the value of the service which you have rendered to the Government of India as head of the military finance commission and department, for which you have, in his lordship's opinion, deserved eminently well both of the Governorgeneral in Council and of her Majesty's Govern-furniture in regimental workshops are to be obtained only from the ordnance department, in order to preof India.

I cannot lay down the government of India, especially at a time when its financial prospects are so much more cheering than, twelve months ago, anyone then conversant with them dared to hope for, without recording my strong sense of the value of the services which Colonel Balfour has rendered to the Government as head of the Military Finance Commission and Department. I have already, in referring to the services of his predecessor, Colonel Jamieson, noticed the origin and object of the commission of which these officers were, in turn, the chief members, and I will only add that it is my conviction, that without the energy, knowledge, and ability which Colonel Balfour has brought to the discharge of his functions during the last twelve months, the Government of India would not yet have reached the certainty of a balanced expenditure and income which is now before it. Colonel Balfour has deserved eminently well both of the Governor-general in Council and of her Majesty's Government, and I have pleasure in recording, as the head of the Government of India, my high appreciation of the aid and services rendered by him, and my cordial thanks for them.

Minute by the Hon. Sir Bartle Frere, Member of the Supreme Council of India.

I entirely concur in all that is recorded by his Excellency the Governor-general relative to the signal service rendered by Colonel Balfour as a member of the Military Finance Commission, and latterly as head of the Military Finance Department. I stated, on the occasion referred to in his Excellency's Minute, my estimate of the share which the commission and the department, as now constituted, have had in bringing about our present condition of financial prosperity; and I will only add that I consider the possibility of preserving the present financial equilibrium of income and expenditure depends mainly, I believe it might with truth be said entirely, on the maintenance of the Military Finance department, or of a department similarly constituted, as a separate department, in free and confidential communication with the Governor-general in Council, qualified to submit sound professional opinions on every ordinary branch of military expenditure, free to express those opinions, and bound to do so on all questions which are likely to effect directly or prospectively the aggregate of that outlay.
